Rising Cost Of City Employee Benefits Placing Larger Burden On Taxpayers

Phelan: 'State Of City Strong But A Financial Crisis Threatens'

John Quincy Adams Legacy

Patrick To Be Inaugurated With Historic Mendi Bible

Nearly 160 years after his death, the legacy of John Quincy Adams will play a role in the inauguration of the first black governor in the history of Massachusetts.

Deval Patrick of Milton will take the oath of office today (Thursday) on the historic Mendi Bible, on loan from the Adams National Historical Park.

The Bible was a gift to Adams from the Mendi people of West Africa after he secured freedom for the Amistad Africans before the U.S. Supreme Court.

"This Bible comes from an extraordinary moment in the history of the commonwealth, the nation and the world," said Beverly Morgan-Welch, co-chair of the Inaugural Committee.

"The Amistad case was a giant step forward for the abolitionist movement and recognized the basic humanity of enslaved people in America.

"It is now fitting and proper that we honor it now as part of this historic inaugural."

The inauguration will mark the first time the Mendi Bible has been used in an official ceremony. After the inaugural, it will be displayed at the State House.

The Amistad case took place in 1839 when a group of kidnapped Africans from Mendeland revolted aboard a Spanish slaver and took over the ship.

They thought their captive navigator was sailing them back to Africa but in reality they were taken to New York where Spanish authorities demanded their return.

Thus began a protracted legal battle with overtones of political intrigue as lower courts orders to free the 35 men and women were offset by pro-slavery politicians.

Eventually, it reached the Supreme Court where the 73-year old Adams argued passionately before the justices and secured their freedom.

In gratitude, the freed Africans presented Adams with the Bible inscribed with a letter from their leader, Cinque, and his colleagues.

"One hundred sixty six years after John Quincy Adams defended the Mendi people, the Amistad story continues to engage generations and compels us to look to the past as we engage in the present and formulate our vision for the future," said Marianne Mayor William Phelan, beginning his sixth year at the helm in Quincy, reported Tuesday that "the state of our city is strong and growing stronger."

But, he said in his mid-term address, "even in this rosy report of our fiscal condition there are troubling storm warnings on the horizon that cannot be ignored."

"... The fast growing cost of employee benefits and the abnormally large percentage of those costs being paid by the city of Quincy is placing a larger and larger undue burden on taxpayers."

He called it "a financial crisis that threatens our financial stability and all the progress we have made" and "a ticking time bomb that we must defuse as fairly and as

"Let me say clearly," he added quickly, "I think Quincy has some of the finest public employees anywhere. I wish we could give them the moon. But we cannot."

Gutro: 'Will Work To Reduce Taxes'

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Council President Douglas Gutro was sworn into his second term with the same enthusiasm as his first, promising to "advance the causes that make Quincy a desirable place to live and work."

Gutro, who was nominated by Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, and voted in unanimously, said he will work to keep taxes down.

He said he will work to reduce taxes and "trim fat from our budget" by reducing flexible expenses, such as the city's energy costs.

Sheriff Bellotti Receives Judge Richardson Award

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti was recently presented the Honorable Maurice H. Richardson Award for his "excellence in the community" and "outstanding contributions" to criminal justice.

Sheriff Bellotti received the award at Dedham District Court where Judge Richardson, now retired, was the presiding justice for 16 years.

"All the credit goes to my staff," Bellotti said. "This award belongs to you. Especially those of you on the 'street level' – the correction officers, the caseworkers, the teachers – you make it all happen."

Bellotti was joined by a standing-room-only crowd of nearly 100 friends, family and elected officials from across Norfolk County who gathered in Courtroom 1 in Dedham District Court.

Chief Justice Lynda M. Connolly, who hosted the ceremony, congratulated the sheriff for his forward thinking and innovative programs. "He is blazing a trail," Judge Connolly said. "He has the best substance abuse program in the state."

In addition to comprehensive substance programming for inmates at the Norfolk County Correctional Center, Sheriff Bellotti runs an inmate classification system and repeat offender re-entry program that have become models for local and state facilities.

Bellotti also operates community safety and education programs for youth and senior citizens across Norfolk County.

The Honorable Maurice H. Richardson Award was established in 1998, when Judge Richardson retired. Past recipients include U.S. Rep. William D. Delahunt (D-10th District), Rep. John H. Rogers (D-Norwood), and Norfolk County Commissioner Francis W. O'Brien.

QUINCY COLLEGE

Aimed At Spray Painting

Delegation, McNamee File Anti-Graffiti Bill

The city's Beacon Hill delegation and Ward 6 Councilor Brian McNamee have together filed anti-graffiti legislation especially aimed at spray painting vandalism.

McNamee brought the issue to Senator Michael Morrissey, and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano for their support.

The legislation comes as a response to a rise in damage to personal and public property in Quincy, and would make it illegal for those under 17 to purchase or possess spray paint with the intent to create graffiti. The proposed legislation calls for jail terms and fines for youthful offenders.

"Aerosol paint canisters are the focus of these new anti-graffiti measures because of their wide spread use amongst graffiti artists," McNamee said. "The artists or 'taggers' prefer cans of spray paint because they are easy to conceal and easy to carry."

In addition to penalizing offending minors, the legislation proposes to penalize those who sell aerosol paint cans to any person under the age of 17 with a $500 fine.

"Fines and jail time for destruction and defacing of property are already in place," said Morrissey, "but it is also important that we adequately address the sale of spray paint to minors as well. Legislation restricting certain products to minors is not always perfect, but this is a strong step in the right direction to make both the seller and the buyer aware and accountable."

"These efforts are intended to change the stakes of what has become an alarming property crime for young people involving not only vandalism and undetected trespass but recognition and notoriety for the graffiti artist," said Ayers.

The new legislative session begins Wednesday, and this legislation is expected to be assigned a hearing for early Spring.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School's health and child development classes recently raised money to feed the hungry. Several bakes sales and prize drawings raised sufficient funds to feed 53 families this holiday season. Pantries benefiting from the students' efforts included the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

QMC Lecture Subject: 'Oh, My Aching Head'

Quincy Medical Center will host a free community health lecture entitled "Oh, My Aching Head: A Review of Migraines and Headaches," Tuesday, Jan. 23, from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at 114 Whitwell St.

Dr. Patrick Madden, a QMC-affiliated neurologist, will lead the discussion of the difference between headaches and migraines as well as prevention and treatment strategies for both.

The free lecture is open to the public. Advance registration is requested and available by calling the QMC Physician Referral Service at 1-877-479-2273.

Refreshments will be served.

Looking for an investment that's guaranteed to grow?

What's the main problem with stock market investments and mutual funds? Simple - you just can't be sure that your money will grow. In fact, you can't even be sure that your principal won't shrink. And while no one would deny that market-based investments should at least be considered as part of a diversified investment plan, sometimes you have money you don't want to put at risk in any way. Maybe it's money you're going to need soon. Maybe it's your IRA or Roth IRA. Maybe you're a conservative saver who simply wants investments that are guaranteed to grow. We understand. Which is why we don't sell stocks. We don't sell mutual funds. We don't sell annuities. Colonial Federal is a community bank providing competitive-rate options for today's conservative saver. If you're looking for a safe investment that's 100% guaranteed to grow, come see us. Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 7, 1785, Frenchman Jean-Pierre Blanchard and American John Jeffries travel from England to France in a gas balloon, becoming the first to cross the English Channel by air. The two nearly crashed into the Channel, as their balloon was weighed down by supplies, forcing them to throw nearly everything out of the balloon. Blanchard even threw his trousers over the side in a desperate, but apparently successful, attempt to lighten the ship.

• On Jan. 2, 1811, Senator Timothy Pickering, a Federalist from Massachusetts, becomes the first senator to be censured by the Senate. Pickering was accused of revealing to the public secret foreign-policy documents sent by the president to Congress.

• On Jan. 5, 1914, the Ford Motor Company rolls out a series of initiatives targeted at improving the lives of its workers. Along with boosting the company's minimum wage to $5 per day, Ford also unveiled plans to trim its work day to eight hours.

• On Jan. 4, 1936, Bob Hope debuts on network radio in the cast of "The Intimate Revue." Hope, born Leslie Townes Hope in London, made his film debut three years later in "The Big Broadcast of 1938," singing "Thanks for the Memory."

• On Jan. 1, 1953, country singer Hank Williams, 29, dies of a heart attack in the back of a limousine on the way to a show in Canton, Ohio. Media speculated that his death may have resulted from drug and alcohol abuse. His hits included "Your Cheatin' Heart" and "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry."

• On Jan. 3, 1969, some 30,000 copies of the John Lennon-Yoko Ono album Two Virgins are confiscated by police at Newark Airport in New Jersey. The album's cover featured a nude picture of Lennon and Ono, which was deemed pornographic.

• On Jan. 6, 1973, a Mercedes-Benz 770K sedan, supposedly Adolf Hitler's parade car, is sold at auction for $153,000, the most money ever paid for a car at auction at that time.

Mid-Term And The Speculation

Mayor William Phelan delivered his third mid-term address Tuesday and automatically ushered in Quincy's political New Year.

Speculation time, 2007!

Was a challenger among those sitting in the City Council chambers listening as he spoke?

If there was one, was he sitting at his city council seat?

Or, someone somewhere else in the audience? A possible surprise contender?

Or, will Phelan be unopposed for a fourth term?

If anyone is planning to challenge Phelan, January is the month to let it be known.

A mayoral candidate needs time to organize the troops and to build a war chest.

It would take somewhere in the neighborhood of $150,000 to wage an effective campaign. That's a pretty expensive neighborhood.

FINN

Two councilors, Dan Raymond and Joseph Finn, have come close to challenging Phelan in the past, but decided not to. Both are still interested in being mayor.

Interested, too, are Doug Gutro, elected to his second term as city council president Tuesday, John Keenan, Michael McFarland and Kevin Coughlin.

Gutro, Keenan, McFarland and Coughlin definitely aren't going to challenge Phelan. They prefer to wait for a opportune time after Phelan leaves office.

The only possibilities within the city council appear to be Finn and Raymond. But neither has sent out signals.

They too, may prefer to wait.

The speculation is that if Phelan does have a challenger it won't be a city councillor.

Instead, it could be a well known city figure who reportedly is "considering" a run.

But if he decides not to, and no councillor gets in, Phelan would coast to a fourth term unopposed.

Elected to his third term in 2005, he became only the fourth mayor in the city's history to get a re-election free ride although he had a token write-in opponent.

The other three mayors: Thomas Burgin, Frank McCauley and James Sheets who got three free rides.

Phelan would be tough for any challenger to unseat.

He has come a long way since stunning the local political scene with his 17-vote upset win over Sheets, a six-term mayor, in 2001.

Phelan was only in his second year as a school committeeman—a virtual unknown—when he defeated Sheets, one of Quincy's all-time political powers.

He was the first mayor in 79 years to get to that office without first taking the city council chambers route.

Officially, Phelan has not announced his candidacy for a fourth term this year. But he is definitely running.

He had a $125 per head fundraiser in July at the Adams Inn. And one last week at the Quincy Neighborhood Club with suggested donations of $125, $250 and $500. They were as good as an official announcement.

Phelan can raise money and has grown stronger in office since moving in. He's been a hands-on mayor with his own style—a style that gets things done, but ruffles some people.

He won't be an easy target for a challenger.

And just one more thing as we enter Election Year 2007:

We still haven't had a woman mayor in Quincy's 117-year history as a city. And we are now back to an all-male city council.

Ladies, where are you?

Doug Flutie Jr. Foundation Grant To Step One Intervention

The Doug Flutie Jr. Foundation for Autism is donating $2,191 to Step One Early Intervention South Shore Medical Health in Quincy.

Overall, the foundation will distribute a total of $357,421 to 26 non-profit organizations in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, Rhode Island, New Jersey, New York, California, Missouri and Ontario.

Local organizations such as Step One Early Intervention, South Shore Medical Health, as well as national outlets such as Princeton Autism Technology, benefit from the foundation's annual grant funding.

Funds donated to Step One Early Intervention, South Shore Medical Health will support a pediatric outreach program, to increase the awareness of pediatricians serving families in the Quincy, Randolph and Milton communities of the importance of early screening and referral to early intervention and further development assessment of children with red flags for diagnosis on the autism spectrum.

The program will include two mailings and scheduled visits using the first signs presentation to 22 pediatric practices.

The Doug Flutie, Jr. Foundation for Autism, Inc. was established in 1998 by former Patriots quarterback Doug Flutie and his wife, Laurie, in honor of their son, Doug, Jr. who was diagnosed with autism at the age of three. Autism is a neurological disorder that impacts the normal development of the brain in the areas of social interaction and communication skills. It affects more than 1.5 million people in the United States.

"We started 'Dougies Team' to provide assistance to families caring for children with autism and to support those organizations researching a cure," said Flutie. "Providing this funding is even more crucial in times of federal and state budget cuts and because of the fact that the numbers of children being diagnosed with autism has increased significantly over the past 10 years. These worthy recipients provide families both support services for the present and hope for the future. We are very happy to provide such needed grants."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD was published in 1915 when granite quarrying was a very important Quincy industry. This view of Swingles Quarry at a depth of 225 feet shows how dangerous the work was particularly in bad weather. Note the precariously placed ladders. Swingles was open for over 100 years and was the last working quarry in Quincy when it shut down operations in 1963. By that time it had reached a depth of 350 feet, 200 feet of it below sea level. After years as a dangerous swimming hole the quarry has now been filled with dirt from the Ted Williams Tunnel. The beauty of Swingles famous "extra-dark" Quincy granite can be seen in the granite ball at city hall or in the two columns at the entrance to Citizens Bank on Quincy Avenue. These columns were removed from Jonathan Swingle's house on Hancock St. when it was demolished in the 1980s. But perhaps the best sample of the stone can be seen in the large monument on Swingles grave in Mount Wollaston Cemetery. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy's Yesterdays

McIntyre Predicts Substantial Tax Hike

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor James R. McIntyre gloomily predicted "another substantial" tax rate increase for Quincy this year.

In two major austerity moves to tighten the city's municipal belt and help head off a big tax hike, the mayor said he will:

Reject any general pay increase requests for city employees.

Cut department budgets "to the bone."

"There will be no general pay increases for city employees this year. We just cannot afford it," he said.

SHIPYARD SEEKS 2,000 WORKERS

The hiring of nearly 2,000 more tradesmen during the next few months will help make 1970 General Dynamics "busiest year at its Quincy Shipbuilding Division," it was predicted.

With current shipbuilding employment levels at 8,300, the drive for new employees will increase to more than 10,000, a $12 million impact on General Dynamic's payroll is seen.

Welders led the way with 300 openings, followed by electricians, pipefitters and sheet workers.

266 UNIT SENIOR FACILITY 100% FILLED

The 266 unit south wing of Senior Citizen Housing at 1000 Southern Artery has been 100 percent leased and 275 names remain on the waiting list with more being added each day, according to a report from the center.

The non-sectarian, non-profit facility was built and is operated by Quincy Point Congregational Homes, Inc. for senior citizens age 62 and older.

The Thomas Crane Library, 40 Washington St., announces upcoming events for January:

Mad Science: "Life in the Sea": (Two sessions, Saturday, Jan. 20, 10 a.m. for ages seven and older, 11:15 a.m. for ages four through six.) This workshop will teach children about ocean habitats through experimentation with sea water and its properties. It will explain food webs and adaptations, and participants will make "Cartesian divers" to continue underwater explorations at home.

Registration is required and limited to Quincy residents. Registration is ongoing at the Children's Room, or by calling 617-376-2411.

Registration for Winter Storytimes: Registration begins Jan. 12 starting at 9 a.m. Programs are offered to children ages four months to seven years. Details are available at all library locations and at www.thomascranelibrary.org. Registration is limited to Quincy residents, and are expected to fill quickly.

Saturday Fun for Little Ones: (Jan. 13 at 10:30 a.m., the large meeting room at the main library.) Join the Dream Tale Puppets for story and puppet times. Little Red Riding Hood and The Three Little Pigs are two traditional puppet stories featured for young children. The program is intended for children up to four years old, to be accompanied by an adult.

Programs are sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Cultural Center Long Overdue

The recent decision by the Mayor to support a central location for the performing and visual arts is long overdue.

There have been several sincere efforts in the past that never materialized. One of those occurred during the 1970s when the late Quincy native actress Ruth Gordon created a large influence from her success on Broadway and the movies. Her close ties to Quincy were celebrated with an 80th birthday weekend in 1976 during my administration as Mayor.

A large turnout at the State Street complex on that weekend highlighted her popularity and influence on the arts.

During my administration a cultural center was included with a new city hall complex. Federal funds were anticipated but fell short of this becoming a reality.

We did build an Amphitheatre at Pageant Field and named it for Ruth Gordon. Her appearance there on Nov. 10, 1984 with her husband, Garson Kanin, highlighted the forthcoming summer concerts held there for the next 23 years to its current date.

Quincy Artists Featured At Weymouth Art Treasure Gallery

Works by Quincy artists will be among the featured displays at the Art Treasure Gallery, the Dickinson Group's new art gallery at 1132 Main St., Weymouth which will open Thursday, Jan. 11.

Local artists featured include Marilyn Reisberg, Christopher H. Myers, Julianne Molloy-Bithoney, Anet Paglierani and Daniel Myers, III.

The gallery will feature the works of 20 local and national artists.

Reisberg, a gold-leaf artist, incorporates fragments of 18-23 karat gold leaf within her acrylic paintings. She is a member of the Quincy Art Association and a life member of the Copley Society of Boston.

Christopher Myers is a Quincy painter and illustrator. He specializes in pencil drawings and oil or acrylic painting and is often commissioned for family portraits or to capture celebrity figures in pencil, charcoal or oil paint.

Myers is a 2003 graduate of Hamilton College where he majored in studio art and is the recipient of an illustration certificate from the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

Julianne Molloy-Bithoney is a multi-media artist. She is a member of the Quincy and Duxbury Art Associations and presently instructs children and young adults at Excalibur Studio in Frantic Framers, Quincy.

The all-media artist is well-known throughout the region for her commissioned paintings of wildlife, landscapes, figures and still life depictions, which are displayed in private collections from Nantucket to California.

Paglierani is one of the founders and directors of the Quincy Art Association. She is known for her landscape and floral depictions. A former designer with Rust Craft Greeting Cards, she has taught painting in studios and classrooms since 1965.

Her works are included in various collections and can be viewed locally at Quincy City Hall and Quincy Historical Society as well as at business and homes throughout the region.

Daniel Myers III produces art in three different media: drawing, painting and sculpture, the latter being his artistic focus for the past 20 years.

A retired math and English teacher, Myers is a member of the Quincy Art Association and has won numerous awards for his drawings, paintings and sculptures. Myers' sculpture is represented in the Crump-McCole Gallery in Boston's World Trade Center.

The new gallery and adjoining studio encompass the third level of the three-story building at 1132 Main St., Weymouth. The gallery is housed within a recently completed constructed 10,000 square-foot building located on Route 18 in South Weymouth on the corner of the Naval Air Station.

Girl Scouts Launch Cookie Sale Friday

Girl Scouts, Patriots' Trail Council announces local Girl Scouts will begin selling their famous cookies Friday, Jan. 5 through March 18.

The Council also announces all varieties of Girl Scout cookies, which include Thin Mints, Caramel deLites, Peanut Butter Patties, Shortbread, Peanut Butter Sandwiches, Cartwheels, Thanks-A-Lot and the brand new Lemonades, are now "zero trans fat per serving," in compliance with FDA regulations.

Since 1917, the Girl Scout cookie activity has become a famous annual event that has helped girls develop important leadership skills they will use throughout their lives.

The Girl Scout Cookie Program allows girls to set goals, learn money management, and develop marketing skills. The entire troop sets a goal and follows a plan leading toward that goal.

Girl Scout troops use funds from the cookie activity to fund a service project or to plan for an exciting trip. Many successful women have credited their business skills to the Girl Scout Cookie Program, making it the premier business and financial literacy program for girls in the United States.

Girl Scout cookies are $4 a box. To find out where to purchase cookies locally, visit www.ptgirlscouts.org.

Montclair Elementary School

If I Could Have One Wish Come True . . .

Due to a production error, Christmas wishes written by fifth graders at the Montclair Elementary School did not appear in the Quincy Sun's holiday issue.

The wishes, based on the question, "If I Could Have One Wish Come True" this holiday season, are listed below.

The Sun regrets the error.

It would be to just by fine with my family because they take care of me, make me food and help me with my homework.

Siriwaat Wiwaatyukhan
Montclair School

It would be to have people stop killing each other. The more people that are killed, the more loved ones we miss.

Wilmary Lopez
Montclair School

It would be to have a lot of presents. I also wish for peace

Mark DeLucaa
Montclair School

It would be to get my dog on Christmas day. I would want this on Christmas day because I was supposed to get it in April.

Matt Medeiros
Montclair School

It would be to buy toys for the kids that are poor.

Zhiying Lei
Montclair School

It would be to have peace on earth with no war and no tsunami, tornado, hurricane and floods.

Christine Li
Montclair School

It would be that everything would stop breaking. Every time my mom pays for something to get fixed another thing breaks.

Leah Prasinos
Montclair School

It would be that my mom and dad don't have to do hard work.

Amy Ly

Montclair School

It would be to spend time with my family because I love my family.

Sarah Tran
Montclair School

It would be to stop the war over Iraq because a lot of Americans are dying.

Agnes Setow
Montclair School

It would be to stop the war in Iraq. Also peace on earth.

Taylor Pecoraro
Montclair School

It would be to have world peace. I wish for the soldiers to come home and enjoy the rest of their lives.

Anthony Green
Montclair School

It would be giving toys, food, water, shelter, clothing for children and adults.

Taylor Daccache
Montclair School

It would be every child having time to spend with family and friends because a lot of children don't get family time.

Amellia Ho
Montclair School

It would be having peace with my family friends. Also I would want the soldiers fighting in Iraq to stop fighting and come home.

Wilson Chen
Montclair School

It would be having all the soldiers in Iraq to come home for the holidays.

Glen Peters
Montclair School

It would be to get my passport to visit relatives in Albania.

Inis Zefi
Montclair School

It would be for my cousin to be at my aunt's house when we arrive. He just moved to California. He is so funny when he makes me laugh and I almost cry.

Tara A. Nealon
Montclair School

It would be a Nintendo DS because all of the Christmases in the past I've received mostly clothes.

Jazsala Laraacuent
Montclair School

It would be that all poor people would be living a regular life like other people.

Aaron Tran
Montclair School

It would be to get the Nintendo Wii. It's motion activated. It's not as expensive as other game consoles.

Patrick McGee
Montclair School

It would be to go and see my grandmother in Florida. I miss her and only get to see her once a year.

Natalie Bishop
Montclair School

It would be to get a Nintendo Gamecube for Christmas. My friend has one and when I go to his house I play with it.

Andi Zeny
Montclair School

It would be that my Grandma gets out of the hospital for Christmas. I want to spend it with her at home and around the Christmas tree.

Declan McGaffigan
Montclair School

It would be that my mom would get better.

Lisa M. Hall
Montclair School

It would be to have a PSP. You can take it in cars. It is popular, has good graphics, too.

Patrick McCaffrey
Montclair School

It would be for my Great grandmother to feel better. She is really nice to everyone.

Jillian O'Leary
Montclair School

It would be for my cousins to come over from Ireland.

Madelyn McCarthy
Montclair School

It would be to have a light brown puppy because then I could play with it when I am bored. I won't have to sit there being lazy and doing nothing.

Jamie Zou
Montclair School

It would be a puppy. They can be your little best friend, but a puppy is a big responsibility.

Nancy Huang
Montclair School

It would be to have world peace throughout the world.

Kali Cormican
Montclair School

It would be a dog for my grandmother. At first my grandma was just fostering a dog named Corky. But then she started to really like him. I hope she'll be able to keep him.

Erin Gaffney
Montclair School

It would be a bunny. It would be tan with white spots on it. I hope it will be able to have babies.

Tiffany Guan
Montclair School

It would be to be home with my mom. She's everything to me and I love her.

Flavio Alvarez
Montclair School

It would be that everyone who doesn't have a home would get a nice present.

Michelle Murphy
Montclair School

It would be that the less fortunate would have food, clothing, shelter and gifts.

Xylena Gabrielle Desquitado
Montclair School

It would be for everybody to get along in peace and harmony. Why can't everybody get along?

Nisreen Abo-Sido
Montclair School

It would be for homeless kids and adults to have shelter, water, and everything needed to live a normal life.

Efthim Butka
Montclair School

It would be that homeless people would not have to beg people for money. I hope that they will find shelter and have food to eat.

Ricky Diep
Montclair School

It would be a puppy. Whenever I am at home sometimes I get bored and want to have fun.

Janet Zhou
Montclair School

It would be to get another dog, and I hope to get a Chihuahua.

Brenda
Montclair School

It would be for a Play Station 3. I would also like the games.

John Lx
Montclair School

It would be for everyone to be safe.

Kaitlin O'Sullivan
Montclair School

It would be all different kinds of Pokemon games.

Chuong Nguyen
Montclair School

It would be to get another dog. My dog is really lonely when I go to school.

Lucky Dang
Montclair School

It would be for everybody in the world to get a present.

Tristine Thong
Montclair School

It would be to give the best gift I can for my mother. (She) cares so much for my sister, my brother and I. I feel so lucky to have her.

Andrew Keezer
Montclair School

It would be that families who are less fortunate than me would get canned foods from our canned food drive program and little kids would get toys from Toys for Tots.

Annie Wong
Montclair School

It would be a computer and the internet. I can go to the biggest and smartest college in the whole America.

Teddy Li
Montclair School

It would be to see my cousin/godfather because I never get to see him.

Patrick To Be Inaugurated With Historic Mendi Bible

Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park.

"The Amistad story is our reminder of the impact one individual can have on society and the importance of "civic engagement."

"The ideals of active citizenship, patriotism and the lifelong commitment of service to country, as celebrated at the inauguration of Deval Patrick as governor . . . are as relevant in 2007 as they were in 1841 and an important piece of our state's heritage."

"The Mendi Bible is one of the most significant and moving pieces of history in the Adams family," said Benjamin Adams, president of the Adams

"It reflects the great determination and courage of a people who, after long suffering, were fortunate to find themselves befriended by an old man, a former president with a passionate belief in justice."

"We are tremendously pleased that the Mendi Bible continues to serve as a symbol of our nation's most precious and fundamental beliefs."

The Mendi Bible was away from the Adams National Historical Park once before.

It was one of four historic books stolen from the Stone Library next to the Adams Mansion on Adams Street in November, 1996.

It was recovered two months later in a Portsmouth, N.H., gym.

Tax Tips From the Experts. Residential Energy Credits

There are several energy credits to consider when filing 2006 returns. Generally you may claim a credit on your tax return equal to 10% of the amount paid for qualified energy efficient improvements installed in your principal residence and 100% of the amount for residential energy expenditures. Don't jump for joy yet...there are limits.

The maximum credit is $500 for both the improvements and expenditures. Furthermore the $500 limit is a lifetime limit not an annual limitation. And, there are individual lifetime limitations on certain types of expenditures as follows:

- * Exterior Windows $200
- * Advanced Main Air Circulating Fan $50
- * Gas, Propane or Oil Furnace or Hot Water Boilers $150
- * Energy Efficient Building Property $300

Qualified Energy Efficient Improvements - 10% of the amount for:

- * Storm Doors and Windows
- * Exterior Replacement Doors and Windows
- * Installation and Certain Siding and Roofing

* Must meet International Energy Conservation Code Criteria

Residential Energy Property Expenditure - 100% of the amount paid for:

- * Energy Efficient Building Property
- * Qualified Gas, Propane or Oil Furnace or Hot Water Boilers
- * Advanced Main Air Circulating Fan

Energy Efficient Building Property means highly efficient

- * Electric Heat Pumps
- * Geothermal Heat Pumps
- * Highly Efficient Central Air Conditioners
- * Highly Efficient Gas, Propane or Oil Hot Water Heaters

Taxpayers will use form 5695 to claim the credit on their tax return.

Remember this is a credit not a tax deduction which means that the amount computed will directly reduce your tax liability and increase your refund by the full amount of the credit.

North Quincy HS Competes In Regional Academic Decathlon

The North Quincy High School Academic Decathlon team recently competed in the Southeast Massachusetts Regional Competition, where they were tested on their knowledge of Chinese art, music, language and literature, and social science, as well as math and climatology.

The Red Raiders placed third out of the field of 24 teams. It was the highest finish ever for the team, surpassing its highest sixth place finish in 2005.

History teacher Sarah Huber took the reigns from long-time coach Tom Donnelly, who helped lead North Quincy to a third place finish in the State competition this past March. It was a fitting end to his 13-year tenure as coach.

The Decathletes were led by Captain Baotran Tranguyen, who received a gold medal in art and a silver medal in language and literature. Adding to the team's success were Lauren McGough who received with a silver in music; Jessica Johnson, silver in art; Mona Li with a bronze in language; and Donna May, a bronze in art.

Also starting the competion for North Quincy was Kim Dela Cruz, Rim Touil, John Romero, and Barbara Lagrotteria.

The teammates and Coach Huber attribute some of their success to the dedication of their teachers, Mrs. Brumleve, Mr. Eldridge, Mrs. Johnson, Mr. Carew, and Ms. Miller, who took time to help the team review for all the subjects they would be tested on. They could not have done it without them.

The team will compete in the state competition in March. They will try and improve on their third place finish in last year's states.

Why 50% Of Homes Listed For Sale Don't Sell The First Time And What to Do About It

Quincy - If your home has just come off the market and hasn't sold, don't get discouraged. The reason your home did not sell may have nothing to do with your home or the market. In reality, your home may have been one of the more desirable properties for sale.

So Why Didn't Your Home Sell?

Last year almost half of the homes listed for sale never sold at all, and many sellers found that there was a tremendous amount a homeowner needed to be educated on to sell their home for top dollar in the shortest time period.

Don't risk making the wrong choices and losing both time and money on your investment. Before you hire a realtor, know the right questions to ask to save you time and money.

Industry experts have prepared a free special report called "How to Sell a House that Didn't Sell" which educates you on the issues involved.

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report call 800-611-0351 and enter ID#1012. You can call anytime, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Call now to make sure your home sells next time you list it for sale.

QCAP's Beth Ann Strollo Named President Of State Association

Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) was recently elected to serve a second term as president of The Massachusetts Association for Community Action (MASSCAP).

MASSCAP is a statewide association of the 24 Community Action Agencies (CAAs) operating in Massachusetts. Through the combined skills and vision of its members, MASSCAP works to enhance the ability of each agency to better serve its clients.

Community Action Agencies (CAAs, also known as Community Action Programs or CAPs) are private, non-profit human service and advocacy organizations that were established by Congress and the President over 40 years ago to fight poverty by opening the doors to self-sufficiency.

Strollo has over 20 years of management experience at QCAP. She has been instrumental in QCAP's success in the areas of affordable housing, early education and care, and adult education, while maintaining a range of safety net services that help the community's most vulnerable citizens.

As the president of MASSCAP, Strollo recently helped the association develop a three-year strategic plan that outlines a public policy agenda that will give low-income people the tools needed to achieve economic self-sufficiency including more affordable housing, quality early education and care services, and asset development opportunities.

Since 1965 QCAP has been improving the quality of life and providing low-income residents with opportunities for self-sufficiency. QCAP serves approximately 20,000 unduplicated people annually in a service area that includes Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hull and surrounding Norfolk County and South Shore Communities.

QCAP continuously seeks new resources and creative ways to deliver services that meet changing community needs. It focuses on advocating for the preservation and development of affordable housing, homeownership opportunities, quality early education and care, family support services, adult educational opportunities, income development services, and jobs that pay a living wage to insure that the people it serves can achieve self-sufficiency.

For more information call (617) 479-8181 x 100 or visit www.qcap.org.

WAL-MART DONATION - Lieutenant Dan Minton of the Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit recently receives a donation from Peggy Westgate, Customer Service Representative at Walmart of Quincy. The donation will be used for many of the department's community programs.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Dec. 18, at approximately 6 p.m., Officer Steven Kelly was dispatched to the Ocean State Job Lot Store on Newport Avenue to investigate "a party attempting to pass a bad check." As Officer Kelly pulled into the parking lot, he observed a female acting suspiciously, bent at the waist, peering into the store's sign covered front window.

Once the female spotted the officer, she spun around, sat on the curb and nervously blurted out, "I'm just standing here doing nothing." Officer Kelly believed this female was involved in the bad check case and was acting as a look-out.

As the officer entered the store and scanned the aisles, the store manager came up to him and identified the suspect. The suspect then walked hastily toward the entrance way. Officer Kelly ordered the suspect to stop but he kept walking. The officer then attempted to grab the suspect's arm, but he pulled his arm away and resisted.

Officer Kelly then wrestled the suspect into a wall. The suspect then kicked the officer's leg in a stomping motion. Officer Kelly wrestled the suspect to the floor, knocking down four racks of clothing. The suspect connected on numerous punches to the officer's midsection and face. Officer Kelly activated his "trouble button" on his portable radio as he returned punches to the suspect.

The store manager yelled to his employees to call "911." As Officer Kelly was able to get on top of the suspect, the store manager assisted in restraining the suspect so he could be handcuffed. Officer Terry Downing was first on scene and took the suspect to the station for booking, while other officers searched for the female who acted as a look-out.

Officer Kelly, although injured, interviewed the manager, who told him the suspect and an unknown female had entered the store today on three occasions attempting to use checks on an account that had been closed. The name of the check was the same as the suspect's.

On the first occasion, (2:30 p.m.), the suspects were told the check was not valid. On the second occasion, (4:45 p.m.) the suspects used the same check to purchase $57 worth of merchandise. Employees realized afterward it was the same couple and same check.

On the third and final occasion, the couple entered the store and attempted to purchase $171 worth of goods. The manager attempted to stall the suspect as he waited for the police to arrive. The female became enraged while waiting, then argued with the manager for failing to honor the check, calling him "stupid" as she walked out the door.

It was moments later that Officer Kelly observed the female outside the store. Although the officers checked the area, they could not locate the female suspect. Officer Kelly was able to search the Registry of Motor Vehicle's database by the male suspect's address and identify the female suspect by her driver's license photo.

Once at the station, Officer Kelly took the male suspect's sneakers as evidence (for the assault) and the checkbook with the bogus checks. The male suspect, a 42-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "assault and battery with a dangerous weapon" (shod foot), "assault and battery of a police officer," "assault and battery" (store manager), "larceny by check," "attempted larceny by check," "resisting arrest" and two counts of "uttering."

A warrant is being sought against the 31-year-old Quincy female suspect for "uttering" and "larceny by check."

Nice work!

Mary Harris Volunteers With Biologists In Brazil

Woodward School student Mary Harris from Quantum will spend two weeks in January on the Blanco and Negro Rivers in Brazil, working with field researchers and biologists, learning about the region's wild fisheries.

The project will also focus on educating the local populations to the dangers of over-fishing and the importance of having good policies on managing natural resources.

Harris decided to make the trip after learning about "Project Priaba" and decided to help create a positive change in the world.

"If the fisheries aren't in good shape, the people have to find other ways to make money, and often they end up cutting down rainforests to develop grazing land for cattle," she said. "The planet can't afford to lose more rainforests."

The Tiger Woods Foundation and Target created the "Start Something" program to encourage children aged eight through 17 to identify a personal goal and take the steps necessary to achieve it. Harris completed the program and was awarded a $5,000 grant to fulfill her dream of doing community service in Brazil.

"If I hadn't been at Woodward I think I would have been too scared," she said. "The School has been so supportive and it built me up to have confidence and prepared me for an experience like this."

To qualify for the grant, Harris had to complete a local community service project. Woodward helped her to get involved with an event for children who spent Halloween in the hospital.

Harris will be spending her 18th birthday in Brazil, and her parents say they are very proud of her achievements.

For more information about the "Start Something" program, visit www.target.com/startsomething.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

DO YOU HAVE COLD FEET?

Are you bothered by chronically cold feet? While they are more common in the winter, some people suffer from the condition year round. Circulatory issues are the most prevalent reason for cold feet; however, some people naturally have cold feet unrelated to their circulation. Certain medical conditions may lead to this problem, including multiple sclerosis, heart disease, peripheral neuropathy (a common condition associated with diabetes), and Raynaud's disease. Keeping feet dry can help them stay warm. Choose socks made from natural fibers like wool. Leather footwear has insulating properties and can keep feet warmer. If poor circulation is causing cold feet, regular foot care is essential. Inspect feet daily for cuts, scrapes, and discoloration.

People sometimes don't realize that their feet mirror their body's health. Some of the first signs of circulatory diseases, for example, appear in the feet. That is why we recommend an annual podiatric exam for everyone over age 40, more frequently for those with an already diagnosed medical problem. If you suffer from cold feet, notice any unusual skin changes in your feet, or if you've endured foot pain for years believing it to be the norm, we would like to help you. You can reach our full-service footcare office at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING by calling 781-986-3668. Office hours also available at the Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building.

HINT: Consult with your podiatrist before using creams that are said to help feet feel warmer.

Quincy At Mid-Term

FOUR OF THE five living former mayors attended the mid-term ceremony. Sitting behind Councillors Dan Raymondi, Jay Davis, Joseph Finn and John Keenan are former Mayors Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia and Arthur Tobin. Seated with them is Fr. John Ronagan of St. Ann's Church. Former Mayor Frank McCauley also attended but was seated in the audience.

MEMBERS OF THE SCHOOL Committee attending the mid-term address were, from the left, Vice Chairman Elaine Dwyer, Linda Stice, Anne Mahoney, David McCarthy, Kevin Mulvey and, behind them, James Timmins.

Phelan delivered his third mid-term address before a packed house that included four of the five surviving former mayors in the City Council Chamber at City Hall.

The audience rose for a moment of silence for the late Gerald Ford, the 38th president, whose funeral was being held at the time in Washington.

Phelan listed his administration's goals for 2007, including the construction of a new Quincy High School, continued revitalization of Quincy Center and a cultural and performing arts center in downtown Quincy.

"These substantial undertakings are important to everyone," he said, "but the primary focus of my administration for the coming year will remain on strengthening our city's great neighborhoods.

Phelan noted that, in response to his last inaugural address, more than 9,000 neighborhood surveys had been received and more than 40 "neighborhood first" community meetings had been held.

"This is 'grassroots' government at its purest level," he said. "Direct citizen input has been and will continue to be a vital component to our success in providing the services and programs our citizens want and deserve."

Among the neighborhood goals for 2007, he listed:

- An investment of more than $3.5 million in upgrading the condition of city streets, including neighborhood streets that need attention.

- An investment of more than $2.5 million to repair neighborhood sidewalks.

- Continued tree planting along neighborhood streets to improve aesthetics and the environment.

- Added amenities to neighborhood parks, playgrounds and beaches.

- More neighborhood traffic and overnight parking enforcement.

- Improved street-sweeping efforts and increased Mad-Vac machine patrols in business districts.

- More investment in neighborhood commercial districts like Brewer's Corner, Wollaston, Norfolk Downs and the Washington Street corridor.

- Improved services at all community centers and libraries, particular the addition of technical programs.

"None of our goals will be at the expense of our financial principles or policies or add to the burden of city taxpayers," Phelan promised.

"Through the use of existing resources, outside funding sources, proper planning, cooperation and a little ingenuity we can realize our objectives and continue to move Quincy forward."

"Today," he added, "after five years, it is fitting that we all celebrate our accomplishments as we set forth goals for the upcoming year.

"And this year it comes at a time when a lot of hard work, perseverance and struggle is about to pay off on a number of important projects, some of which we've waited for decades to come to fruition.

"As everyone in this room knows, five years ago our city was in difficult financial straits. Since then we have worked tirelessly to turn around our city's finances.

"We have improved our financial health by budgeting conservatively and aggressively pursuing outstanding revenues.

"We took aggressive actions, not popular at the time, to collect outstanding revenues from Quincy College, parking ticket scofflaws, the MWRA, and back taxes from the Fore River Shipyard.

"That revenue collection has been the cornerstone of our financial success."

Through it all, Phelan said, his administration kept in mind "the regressive nature of the property tax and the unfair burden it places upon those on fixed incomes and least able to pay."

"We all remember how rising residential property values, a stagnant commercial market and dramatic, multi-million dollar reductions in state aid all combined to increase property taxes four years ago," he said.

"So we rolled up our sleeves and created a long-term plan for tax stabilization.

"And those plans have paid off: in the past three years we have limited residential tax increases to 1 per cent, 0 per cent and 2.86 per cent, or less than 4 percentage points over a three-year period.

"Equally important is that we are putting money into reserves to ensure long-term protection for our taxpayers."

All this, he said, is being threatened by the skyrocketing costs of employees benefits.

"Our employees' benefits costs have increased more than 100 per cent in five years," he said. "We need to take a realistic approach to this problem.

"Quincy currently pays a larger benefit than almost every city and town government in the commonwealth. Compared to the private sector, our benefits package is almost unheard of.

"To be fair to taxpayers, we must bring employees benefits in line with what's happening in the rest of the world.

"This is a true 'budget-buster' and a ticking time bomb that we must defuse as fairly and as quickly as possible.

"If we fail to address this issue directly, we will be cheating our taxpayers and short changing our schools, our public safety and every other area of government services.

"I will make every effort to address this critical item in an objective, straight forward and fair manner."

Richard DeCristofaro, brother James Phelan, and mother-in-law Shirley Tobin. Daughter Rachel was ill and could not attend the ceremony.

Gutro said the City Council can reduce unwelcomed neighborhood development through "smart zoning changes."

He also promised the continued upkeep of roads, traffic congestion, and the safety of schools and buildings for workers, students and residents.

Gutro said that 2007 will bring the long-anticipated ground-breaking for the new Quincy High School, and the location for a new track. He also said that the city will move forward with plans for a new Central and Sterling Middle School.

Gutro promised improvements for the Fire Department through the 2006 fire study, and promised continued efforts to improve open spaces and coastal resources that serve as a "welcome oasis in our urban environment."

Gutro said that he and other public officials should aspire to follow the footsteps of the late President Gerald Ford, who led the country with "decency, honesty and

FR. JOHN RONAGHAN of St. Ann's Church gave the invocation.

REV. William HARDING, Bethany Congregation Church, recently returned from Iraq where he served as an Army chaplain, gave the benediction.

bipartisanship, at a time when distrust in the government was unparalleled in American history."

Gutro noted 2006 investments of the city, including education, local roadways and public buildings. He also noted the protection of city neighborhoods, senior citizens, national treasures, and Quincy College.

He also said that the city is taking "bold steps" to bring about the rebirth of Quincy Center, and making efforts to unite the changing community.

Gutro praised the City Council for their efforts over the past year, individually congratulating them on their notable achievements.

He congratulated Councillor John Keenan, chairman of the Finance Committee, for an "extraordinary job as our fiscal disciplinarian, ably serving as watchdog of our city's finances."

Councillor Joseph Finn, Chairman of the Public Works Committee, was credited with helping to "accelerate improvements of our aging roadways."

Gutro said that Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis "created a model for other communities across our commonwealth" with his West Quincy Teen Program, which combines recreational opportunities, community service and job training for teenagers.

Gutro credited Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond for persistently advocating flooding and drainage issues, which will help achieve flooding relief for Quincy neighborhoods.

Gutro said that Ward 1

Councillor Leo Kelly, Chairman of the Downtown Committee, "pushed our downtown revitalization forward while protecting scarce open-space in neighborhoods through his district."

He also credited Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee for "standing tall" on behalf of Squantum residents to fight an alleged Boston plan to relocate a pre-release center on Long Island.

Gutro called Councillor Michael McFarland, former School Committee member, a "vital resource" in the building of a new high school.

Gutro also credited Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin for his leadership in passing senior safety zone legislation, that will make Quincy safer for senior citizens in the years ahead.

QUINCY COLLEGE BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Seeks Nominations for Board Members

The Appointing Council Shall Meet To Consider Qualified Applicants For Appointments To The Board.

Nominees are to be considered for appointment to fill vacancies.

Board members are advocates for the institution, and have certain governance and oversight responsibilities for the College as specified in the enabling legislation. Members are expected to attend regular meetings, ordinarily scheduled in the evening, and to participate fully as a member of specific subcommittees, usually meeting several times a month during the day. Additionally, members are participants in Commencement, College Ceremonies, and demonstrate in actions and word a commitment to the mission and purpose of the College. Members must submit an annual financial disclosure form to the City Clerk.

Interested individuals must submit a letter of interest and resume, to the Appointing Council, to be received on or before February 1, 2007. The Appointing Council shall meet to consider qualified candidates, and will provide an optional opportunity for interested parties to address the Appointing Council. The Council welcomes diversity in applicants and encourages anyone who believes he or she might contribute positively to the continued success of the institution to respond.

Keep Safety In Mind Putting Away Holiday Decorations

Now that the holidays are over, take down your decorations and start the New Year safely, advises the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) and Underwriters Laboratories Inc. (UL), the not-for-profit product safety testing organization.

According to the NFPA, 20 percent of home fires attributed to Christmas trees occur in January.

"Christmas trees can be a significant fuel source if a fire occurs in your home," said Lorraine Carli, NFPA assistant vice president of communications.

"Dried-out trees burn easily and should not be left in a garage or placed against the house. We recommend you remove your tree from the home and dispose of it properly as soon as your Christmas celebration ends."

"Even well-watered trees dry out after four weeks," John Drengenberg, consumer affairs manager for UL, explained. "So if your real tree went up right after Thanksgiving, it should be discarded after Christmas and not New Year's Day."

Carli and Drengenberg also remind you that Christmas trees aren't the only holiday decorations that need prompt attention after the holidays.

"Leaving your decorations out for several months or even all year not only aggravates your neighbors," Carli said, "but it also leaves the wires exposed to rain, snow, cold, the sun, squirrels and birds longer than intended by the safety standards."

"Many people don't realize that holiday lights should only be up for a limited time," Drengenberg continued. "The safety standards are developed anticipating a maximum of 90 days of use per year because these decorations are considered seasonal. If you leave decorations out any longer, the resulting damage could cause an electrical shock or a fire hazard."

As you unplug and store your lights - whether indoors or outdoors - remember the safety precautions you take now can prevent hazards from occurring next season.

Following is a checklist of safety tips that are not only helpful to stay safe as you take down your holiday decorations, but are useful all year-around:

- When using electrical toys or appliances for the first time, carefully read and follow all instructions in the manufacturer's use and care booklet. Make sure electrical toys and appliances have the UL Mark.

- Use the gripping area provided on the plugs to unplug electric decorations. Don't pull plugs from electrical outlets by the cord. Yanking or tugging on the cord can damage the cord's wire and insulation and could lead to an electrical shock or fire.

- When putting away electrical light strings, take time to inspect for flaws. Check each light set for broken or cracked sockets, frayed or bare wires and loose connections.

- Dispose of worn or broken light sets and replace them. Do not place a faulty set of lights back into the storage box for next year's use. Store electrical decorations away from children and pets to ensure that cords and wires are not damaged in storage.

- Store electrical decorations in a dry place where they can not be damaged by water or dampness.

- To keep from having a tangled mess of lights next year, be sure to pack them appropriately. When preparing your holiday lights for storage, you can purchase a holiday light storage reel, or create your own storage systems.

For example, wrap the lights around an empty wrapping paper tube or a cardboard square, or wrap each set of lights and put them in individual plastic bags. For more post-holiday safety tips, to download footage of how quickly a dry Christmas tree incinerates or for photographs related to holiday decoration safety, go to <http://www.ul.com/newsroom> or <http://www.nfpa.org>. Water's Leaking, But From Where?

Q. In reading a recent question regarding water leaks and staining on the ceiling, I have been unable to locate where the water is coming from that has caused damage to my dining-room ceiling (there is a bedroom above with no ceiling damage). Twice after a heavy rain, it has leaked in the same area of the dining-room ceiling. The first contractor caulked an area outside where the porch joins the house. Neighbors who have had similar damage told me it was caused by a window in the bedroom above, and I replaced all my windows. Do I need a roofer or plumber to help locate the source of the leak? — Nancy V., via e-mail

A. Because the leaks occur only after heavy rain, I would recommend calling a roofer first to check all possible entry points and look for damage both atop and underneath the roof. Deteriorated shingles, damaged flashing at the roof joints or around chimneys or vent stacks, and other hard-to-find but significant issues could be the culprit.

If the roofer can't find the cause, or additional repairs don't stop the leaks, contact a plumber to check the runs throughout the house for any trouble spots.

Another contractor to consider is a building or foundation specialist. This may be a long shot, but if the house has settled over several years or the foundation has shifted slightly, small cracks or warping in the walls or along door or window frames may have occurred (hence the suggestion from your neighbors to replace the windows). In this case, the specialist will check the entire home's condition.

As someone who is constantly chasing little leaks that inexplicably appear (and disappear for months at a time) throughout the old home I live in, I feel for you. Best of luck in resolving this issue.

Improving Air Quality Can Make Your Home More Comfortable

(NAPS) Improving indoor air quality (IAQ) does more than create a healthier environment. It can also increase a home's comfort level.

Many of the problems associated with indoor air pollution are the result of construction and remodeling practices designed to conserve energy. Tighter seals prevent the exchange of outdoor and indoor air and ensure the efficient operation of air conditioners, furnaces and heat pumps. These seals also restrict the flow of fresh outdoor air into the home and limit removal of indoor air pollutants from the home.

High temperatures and humidity levels also contribute to increased concentrations of indoor pollutants. Fortunately, a number of new technologies in the heating, ventilation and air-conditioning (HVAC) industry are helping to improve IAQ as they increase ventilation, maintain consistent temperatures, control humidity levels, conserve energy, save money and improve comfort. Heat pumps, for example, remove heat from outdoor air to deliver furnace-like warmth indoors, producing a comfortable environment.

The Coleman Echelon heat pump from Johnson Controls, features hot heat pump technology that pro-

Be Mindful Of Home Heating Costs During The Winter

State Sen. Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy) and the Department of Telecommunications and Energy remind energy consumers to be mindful of their home heating costs over the winter months by winterizing your home.

They also want people to be aware of the help and assistance that is available to homeowners and renters.

"By taking steps to make your home more energy efficient you can lower your energy consumption thereby reducing your heating bill," Morrissey said.

Some steps to winterize your home include:

- caulking or weatherstripping windows and doors to prevent heat loss,
- installing a programmable thermostat
- making sure all warm-air vents are not blocked, and
- keeping draperies and shades on windows open during the day to allow the sunlight to enter your house.

Programs are available to assist low-income households with reducing their heating bills by providing home energy conservation services and heating system repair and replacement through the Weatherization Assistance Program.

To find out if you are eligible, or for more information contact 1-800-632-8175 or log onto <http://www.mass.gov/dhed>.

Income-eligible families in Massachusetts can find assistance paying their winter heating bills through the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP). Through direct payments subsidies, consumers apply directly to a local fuel assistance provider in their city or town.

To determine which agency to apply to, call the Department of Housing and Community Development's Heat Line at 1-800-632-8175 or visit the website at <http://www.mass.gov/dhed>. The website provides a list of local fuel assistance agencies as well as the income eligibility guidelines.

"It is important to remember that Massachusetts protects our most vulnerable citizens from having their gas or electric heating service shut off," Morrissey said.

If you cannot afford to pay your gas or electric bill your utility may not terminate your service if: all residents in your household are 65 years old, or you have financial hardship AND either (1) you or someone in your household is seriously ill; (2) you have an infant in the home under 12 months.

"Also, no one in the Commonwealth who has a financial hardship and heats their home with gas or electric can have their service shut off between Nov. 15th and March 15th," Morrissey said.

Budget billing and payment plans are available to all utility customers who have been having difficulty meeting the utility bills. Budget billing allows you to spread your gas or electric utility bill payments into 12 equal, monthly amounts over the year, helping you to avoid high bills during the winter months.

"Many times these programs and plans are not thought of until the cold spell comes, and by then it can be too late. It is important to be knowledgeable of these programs, find out if you qualify, and line up before our New England winter starts rolling in," Morrissey said.

Constituents with any questions, concerns, or who are seeking assistance regarding any of these programs are encouraged to contact Senator Morrissey's State House Office at 617-722-1494.

A complete list of the "Fifteen Steps You Can Take to Winterize Your Home" appears with this article.

Ways To Save Money On Winter Heating Bills

Whether you heat your home with gas, oil, electricity or some other fuel you can save money by "winterizing your home." By taking steps to make your home more energy efficient you will lower your energy consumption and thereby reduce your heating bill.

15 Things To Do Now To Winterize Your Home

1. Caulk or weatherstrip windows and doors to prevent heat loss.
2. Make sure warm-air registers are not blocked by furniture, carpeting or drapes.
3. Install a programmable thermostat to automatically drop to a lower temperature at night and at times when you are away from your house.
4. Tape a sheet of aluminum foil (shiny side out) to the wall behind radiators; this will help make them more efficient.
5. Insulate your attic, walls, basement and crawl space.
6. Install storm windows and doors to help keep out drafts.
7. Move chairs and beds away from exterior walls; these are usually the coldest walls in the house.
8. Install aerating, low-flow faucets and showerheads to save hot water.
9. Lower the thermostat on water heater. Factory settings may be higher than necessary. A setting of 120 degrees provides comfortable hot water for most uses and can save on water heating costs.
10. Insulate the first 6 feet of hot and cold water pipes connected to the water heater to avoid heat loss.
11. Drain a quart of water from your water tank every 3 months to remove sediment that impedes heat transfer and lowers the efficiency of your heater.
12. Clean and replace filters on furnace once a month or as needed to permit better air flow through the house.
13. Clean warm-air registers, baseboards heaters and radiators.
14. Keep the damper closed when your fireplace is not in use to keep warm air in.
15. Keep the draperies and shades on windows open during the day to allow the sunlight to enter your home.

Is There Money Hiding In Your Mortgage?

(NAPS) According to a recent study, many homeowners are not taking full advantage of the financial potential hidden in their mortgage. Fortunately, doing a little homework can change that.

Here are some tips to help you discover your mortgage's full potential from the experts at Countrywide Home Loans:

- Increased home values may mean that your home equity has grown significantly. So the time may be right to refinance and pull money out of your home equity in a lump sum to fund repairs, renovations or other expenditures.
- Turning to home equity lines of credit for cash has been a smart choice for many. Unlike credit cards, the interest paid on these credit lines is often tax deductible. Plus, the monthly payments are also lower than most credit cards.

• Many homeowners are using the equity from a first home to purchase a second home or other investment property. This can be an excellent way to make the most of a current investment to build assets and bolster a financial portfolio.

• For homeowners who are at least 62 years old, a reverse mortgage can be a way to access equity in a home and obtain funds that can be used as they see fit.

For more information about these and other smart mortgage management tips, call (800) 570-9888 or visit www.countrywide.com.

Improving Air Quality Can Make Home More Comfortable

This new heat pump technology can also keep a home in the comfort zone consistently and efficiently, with better circulation and fewer hot or cold spots.

When matched with the appropriate Echelon variable-speed air handler with Rx technology, these heat pumps become part of a home comfort system that keeps water, mold and other IAQ contaminants out of the air, while offering customized comfort performance in any climate.

Longer operating cycles circulate air longer, reducing air stratification and further contributing to home comfort. Fewer stops and starts enhance already low noise levels.

In addition to improving the quality and comfort of the air, these units are also more efficient. Available with Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratios (SEER) of 13 through 18, these new heat pumps double the efficiency of many older units.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Bring the Gym Home

You can bet at least one person you know received home exercise equipment for the holidays. If that person was you, creating a functional gym in your home may be easier than you think. No longer are large, expensive pieces of equipment the only option for exercising at home.

By using small but effective fitness tools such as a jump rope, resistance bands/tubing, a medicine ball and stability ball, you can create a fully functional gym in your house. These items take up minimal space and can be used to perform hundreds of exercises.

To get started, speak with your physician or fitness professional about developing a fitness program to be done at home. He or she can instruct you on what weight and size equipment can best aid you in reaching your fitness goals.

The purchase of fitness equipment alone will not make you fit, so it's very important that you receive proper instruction on how and when to use the equipment you have selected. Do not invest in any equipment until you have a plan to utilize it.

Slowly grow your collection of fitness toys. Purchase one piece of equipment and incorporate it into your fitness plan, then add another. As with large fitness equipment, if you don't put it to use it will just collect dust.

Here are some sample exercises and tips for using a jump rope, resistance band, medicine ball and stability ball:

Jump Rope: Great for cardiovascular training.

Resistance Band: Bicep curls (works front of arms). Hold handles and place bands under your feet. With your palms facing forward, bend your elbows, bringing your palms toward your armpits. Lower, then repeat.

Medicine Ball: Overhead tricep extension (works back of arms). With feet staggered and shoulder-width apart and ball grasped between hands, extend your arms directly overhead close to your ears. Lower the ball by bending your arms directly behind your head until your arms are at a 90-degree angle. Extend your arms, and then repeat.

Stability Ball: Wall squats (works the legs and glutes). Find a sturdy, empty wall and place the ball against it. Place your middle-to-lower back against the ball. Walk your feet slightly forward, still keeping the ball behind you. Lower yourself slowly toward the ground, but no lower than 90 degrees. Press through your heels and straighten your legs to stand back up. Repeat.

Complete one to three sets, 10-15 repetitions of each of these exercises, remembering to breathe and support your abdominals and back through each repetition.

Fitness equipment can be found at most sporting-goods stores, or from companies such as SPRI Products (spriproducts.com) and Perform Better (performbetter.com).

A Secret For Managing Weight

By MINDY HERMANN

(NAPS) We all know people who skip breakfast because they say it makes them hungrier.

But here's a secret that you might find hard to believe: eating breakfast, particularly ready-to-eat cereal, can play a helpful role in weight management.

The news is good for ready-to-eat cereal fans. Studies show that frequent cereal eaters, both adults and children, tend to have healthier body weights. In fact, among successful weight-loss maintainers, 78 percent ate breakfast every day, and 60 percent of breakfast eaters always or usually chose cereal.

Whole grain foods such as ready-to-eat cereals made with whole grain can help you keep your shape. A growing body of evidence supports the finding that people who consume diets rich in whole grain tend to have a healthier body weight than those who don't. Additionally, people who eat more whole grain tend to gain less weight as they age. Whole grains are loaded with a combination of plant nutrients, anti-oxidants, vitamins, minerals and fiber to help keep you healthy.

Breakfast cereal is high in nutrition. Compared to other breakfasts such as a bagel with cream cheese or eggs with bacon and toast, a serving of Whole Grain Total with skim milk has less than half the calories, along with 100 percent of the daily value of 12 imported vitamins and minerals.

Breakfast for dinner may help with weight management. The next time you're not in the mood to cook dinner, or you get home too late, try a bowl of whole grain cereal topped with fresh fruit, nuts and skim milk. Chances are that it will have fewer calories and less fat than your usual dinner.

Breakfast cereal can be fun. Create your own signature combinations of cereals and toppings. I like to make a "Total Breakfast Medley" with Whole Grain Total, Total Raisin Bran and Total Honey Clusters. I always top my cereal with fruit, fresh berries, sliced peaches, slivers of dried apricot or black and yellow raisins, and milk.

When I'm on the go, I put 3/4 cup of plain or light yogurt into a plastic container and stir in my cereal and fruit. It tastes great. I can take it with me and I feel good knowing that it's healthy.

Migraines, Headaches Topic At QMC Jan. 23

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) will host a free HealthMatters health education lecture entitled "Oh My Aching Head: A Review of Migraines and Headaches" Tuesday, Jan. 23 from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy.

Dr. Patrick Madden, a Quincy Medical Center-affiliated Neurologist will lead the discussion which will review the differences between headaches and migraines, as well as prevention and treatment strategies for both conditions.

The free lecture series is open to the public, and light refreshments will be served.

Advance registration is requested and available, 24-hours per day and seven days per week, by calling the QMC Physician Referral Service at 1-877-479-CARE (2273).

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 194-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

A REAL KICK IN THE FACE

A recent review of mouth, jaw, and facial injuries by oral surgeons revealed that 20 percent of the injuries involved amateur soccer players. The most common of these soccer-related injuries were dental fractures, followed by fractures of the lower jaw and problems with the temporomandibular joint (TMJ), which moves the jaws. As for cause, about two-thirds of the injuries occurred when soccer players ran into one another. Other injuries were result of impact with equipment or the ground. Mouthguards and faceguards could prevent many of these injuries, but soccer players are generally reluctant to wear these protective devices, at least until they suffer an injury. Dentists highly recommend that young athletes not wait that long.

Properly diagnosed, designed, and custom fabricated mouthguards are essential in the prevention of athletic oral/facial injuries. Talk to your dentist about having a custom mouthguard made specifically for you or your children. They will fit comfortably and offer the best protection for your or their smile. We believe in the importance of regular dental health care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we encourage children and adults to start and continue a healthy habit of regular dental checkups so their smile will last a lifetime. We want you and your family to look and feel your very best. Please call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Parents, coaches, and dentists must do all they can to promote the use of protective mouthguards.

Quincy Starts 2-3

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy girls basketball team opened their season with five non-league games, and currently have a record of 2-3. The Presidents, who begin the Atlantic Coast League portion of their schedule this week, started off the year with losses to Norwell High School (59-56) and Hanover High School (62-42) before earning their first win of the year by knocking off Nauset High School on Dec. 22, 58-35.

The Presidents took part in the Dedham Christmas Tourney (Dec. 27-28) over the school holiday, and finished with a 1-1 record. The team's loss came in the tournament opener against Foxborough High School, 42-20. Quincy rebounded nicely in the second game of the Christmas Tourney as the team cruised to a convincing 50-20 win over Fenway High School.

"The girls jumped out to a 17-0 lead and never looked back against Fenway," head coach Jeff Bretsch said last week. "We led 44-8 at the half and leading the charge for us was Meagan Tobin. She finished the game four for four from three-point land. Leslie Campbell contributed to our initial run by scoring six points in the opening period, and senior Jacqueline Provenzano provided a spark off the bench by scoring nine points, grabbing nine rebounds and blocking three shots."

In Quincy's other victory over Nauset, the Presidents earned their first home win of the year with a convincing 23-point decision. The Presidents, despite a poor shooting night, lead at the half, 29-13. The team's shooting troubles continued into the second half, but two key three pointers by Tobin late in the game helped the Presidents finish off Nauset.

"In the first half, the team looked aggressive and they generated turnovers and ran the floor," Bretsch said. "Our scoring trouble in the second half allowed Nauset to keep the game in range, but those two three pointers by Tobin were big."

Tobin, who had a game high 21 points, received support from teammates

Marybeth Torpey (10 points, 6 steals), Leslie Campbell (6 points) and Liz Bock (9 rebounds).

"The whole team played well despite the poor shooting," Bretsch said. "The reserves made significant contributions, especially senior Hope Collins in her first game back from a prolonged illness and junior Kathryn Carella who chipped in five points."

Quincy opened the year with a heart-breaking loss to Norwell. Quincy had 14 turnovers in the first half and trailed by 16 at halftime.

The potential and team improvement that Quincy is starting to develop could not come at a better time, as their next seven games are against Atlantic Coast League teams. The important stretch of league games begins this Friday (1/5) when the Presidents play host to ACL foe Plymouth South. Quincy takes to the road next week with league games against Whitman-Hanson (1/9) and Dennis-Yarmouth (1/12).

STUDENTS FROM North Quincy High School finished first, second, and third in the high school division of the city's annual American Education Week Essay Contest. This year's topic was "Why do I have both a right and a responsibility to attend school?" The first place winner, Bao Tran Tran Nguyen (second from right) read her essay to the Quincy School Committee and received a gift certificate to a local bookseller. Also winning awards were second place finisher Rim Touil (second from left) and third place winner Chris Eng (far left). Offering congratulations is School Principal Lou Ioannili. North Quincy and Quincy High Schools were allowed to submit up to 10 essays per school. The essays were submitted anonymously and judged by a panel of retired educators.

Quincy Wrestlers
Want Challenging Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

The one way to improve your team's overall performance is to schedule the toughest possible opponents. A team that fills its schedule with non-league cupcakes is bound to pay the consequences down the line. The Quincy Presidents' wrestling team and third-year head coach Pat Lane do not shy away from a challenge, and that is why the team continues to excel on the mats.

Last season, the Presidents finished with a 5-16 record, but their overall results do not really tell the whole story. Quincy, which wrestles in the competitive Atlantic Coast League, had four wrestlers place in the Division II Metro Sectionals, and had one who went on to finish sixth at the New England's.

"Last season the team finished with a 5-16 record," Lane said last week. "But our record did not indicate our talent. We consistently trade an easy schedule for a tougher one to make sure that our wrestlers wrestle against the best as much as possible."

This season the Presidents are off to a 4-7 start, but the team has received solid individual performances from its two senior captains and a sophomore in the early going. Senior captain Joe MacDonald, who last year went 18-15, has started his 2006-2007 season with a flurry. MacDonald, who wrestles at 130 pounds, is 6-1 on the young season. Senior captain Camilo Arredondo, who is coming off a 13-12 2005-2006 season, is 8-2 this season. Arredondo competes in the 171-pound division. Wrestling at 135 lbs., sophomore Paul Reggiamanni is 5-2 this year. Reggiamanni finished last season with a 21-20 overall record, and came in fourth place in the Metro Sectionals.

The rest of the varsity roster includes seniors Thomas Meng, Alex Wong, Ron Vecchione and Pluton Angeli; juniors Tim Kisiel and David Duong, sophomores Liam Keogh, Scott Griffin, Taylor Radcliffe, Michael Brown, Ryan Lally, Stephen Kamb, Tyler Balcan and Dennis Walsh and freshmen James Nguyen, Michael Kneeland and Shane Hoban.

Coach Lane is assisted by Elliott Columb.

Last week (12/27), the Presidents had a tri-match against Belmont, Reading and Walpole High Schools and went 1-2 with the one win coming against Belmont, 45-34. Senior captain Camilo Arredondo went 3-0 at the 171-pound division. Sophomore Liam Keogh helped the Presidents to their team win versus Belmont with his first varsity victory in the 189-pound division.

The Presidents take on Sandwich High School tonight (1/3) and will be one of twenty teams participating in the North Quincy tournament on Jan. 6.

Raiders Sweep Sharon, Sandwich, Stoughton

The North Quincy Red Raider wrestling team has undergone significant changes from last year's 20-4 team, but the 2006-2007 team is stocked full of talent again this season.

Head coach Daniel Regan's team is 6-2 so far this year. The Raiders opened their season with a tough Atlantic Coast League loss to Marshfield High School, but the team responded with a three-match sweep of Sharon, Sandwich and Stoughton High Schools on December 16th at North Quincy. The team lost to Woburn High School on Wednesday (12/20) at home before finishing in the top ten at the 28-team Marshfield High School Holiday tournament during school vacation week.

"This year's team is made up of a handful of team members from all the grades," Regan said recently. "We have five seniors, including our four senior captains, two juniors and the rest of the program is made up of underclassmen. Last year's team had six kids make it to the tournament and we return two of those kids this year."

Regan's senior class is headlined by captains Phil Kelly (heavyweight), Jon Tan (119 lbs.), Danny Sok (125/130 lbs.) and Jack Leung (135/140 lbs.). Last season, Kelly and Tan both finished as two of the best wrestlers in their weight class for the entire state. Kelly, who wrestles in the heavyweight division, finished fourth in the state and sixth in the all-states, and Tan took third place at states in the 119-pound division.

"Both (Kelly and Tan) had great seasons for us last year," Regan said. "This year the two of them, along with our other captains, Sok and Leung, should help lead the team throughout the winter. We are younger this year than previous years, so the captains will have to take charge this season."

With fourteen weight divisions for all varsity matches, the Red Raiders have a deep roster to pick and chose for each match they have this season. Besides the four senior captains (all are regulars), North's team includes seniors Kenny Xu, Kenny Lok, Louis Chin and Dewar Tan, juniors Hung Ly and David Duong, sophomores Matt Gibson, Dennis Leung, Marty Hui, Mark Thach, Frankie Flora, Chi-Ho Liem, Stanley Tam, Nick Lawless, Simon Yeung, Matt Chan, Richard Zhang and Kevin Pacheco and freshmen Barry Mac, Ryan O'Connell, Colin Chen, Calvin Lam, Phuc Huynh, Keegan Byron and Tho Dang.

During Christmas vacation week, the Raiders took part in Marshfield High School's 28-team holiday tournament. North Quincy finished in the top ten.

"We took part in the (Marshfield) tournament last week, and finished in the top ten," Regan said. "That (a top-ten finish) was a goal for the team since we only brought nine out of fourteen possible weight classes."

On the way to their top ten finish, the Red Raider captains were the ones grabbing all the attention. Jon Tan placed first in the difficult 119-pound division. Phil Kelly placed second in the 285-pound weight class (heavyweight) and Dan Sok finished in sixth place at 130 pounds.

"All nine of our kids won their first round matches, and seven out of the nine made it to the second day," Regan said. "Tan wrestled tough, and the final result showed that. He defeated Brendan Stevenson (Middleboro HS), 9-6 in the finals after knocking off Kenny Francis (New Bedford HS) in the semis. Francis is one of the best in the state and Tan's victory was great."

The North Quincy Red Raiders have an Atlantic Coast League showdown with Nauset today (1/3) and play host to 20 teams at the annual North Quincy Wrestling Tournament on Saturday, Jan. 6th.

"It is a fan-friendly event that takes place all day long beginning at 9 a.m.," Regan said. "You can expect to see matches one after another. We will take breaks when they are deemed necessary, but overall it is a full day of high school wrestling."

COVERING ALL THE ANGLES

A vehicle should track straight on a flat, straight road with the steering wheel centered. If the car pulls to one side, investigate the simplest possible cause first - incorrect tire pressure. If that checks out, look for uneven tread wear. If the wear is uniform, interchange the left front wheel-and-tire assembly with the one on the right. If the drifting problem disappears or reappears on the opposite side, a tire is the culprit. Otherwise, pulling to one side may be due to incorrect steering caster, which is an alignment angle that can be adjusted with a wheel alignment. The side with the wheel with the most negative caster angle is the side to which the vehicle will pull.

At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, our technicians can make sure that your steering is properly aligned. Alignment is important to make sure your vehicle handles in a safe manner. Located at 258 Quincy Ave., East Braintree, we guarantee our repairs; you can trust your vehicle in our very capable hands. If you have questions regarding your alignment, or any other automotive issues, please call 781-843-1550. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored.

HINT: It is a good idea to get a four-wheel alignment once a year, particularly if your vehicle has hit deep ruts, curbs, etc.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The New Year brings challenges that can change many things in your life. You need to be prepared not only to confront them, but also to deal with what happens afterward.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You have what it takes to set your goals quite a bit higher this year. Learn what you need to know and put what you learn into your efforts. A partner offers loving support.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) In true Gemini Twin fashion, you're conflicted about a decision you know you'll have to make in this New Year. Best advice: Get the facts before you make any commitment.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A friend offers you an exciting opportunity for the New Year. Although your positive aspects are strong in most respects, caution is advised. Investigate before you invest.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You can make this New Year a roaring success. Start by readjusting your goals to reflect the changes in the economy. Your den-mate offers both wise and loving support.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The New Year brings new opportunities for change. But you need to be ready to move from the comfortable status quo to the challenging unknown. It's up to you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your most important New Year's resolution should be to work out problems with a family member in order to avoid continued misunderstandings. Do it soon, for both of your sakes.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The New Year has much to offer the intensely determined Scorpion, who isn't afraid to take on challenges and stay with them until they surrender their rewards.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You'll have many fine opportunities in this New Year. But be warned: Reject offers of "help." You work best when you're free to be your own creative self.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The New Year offers changes that you might feel you're not quite ready for. Best advice: Deal with them one step at a time, until you've built up your self-confidence.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Travel is a dominant aspect of the New Year. This could mean relocating to another city (or even another country) in connection with your education or your career.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) This New Year brings news about a change you've been anticipating. You might have a problem persuading a loved one about your new plans, but he or she will soon go along with them.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for making people feel safe and protected. You would make an excellent youth counselor.

The Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations voted at its annual meeting in 2006 to keep the fight against global warming high on its list of priorities.

In an effort to bring this topic to the local community, United First Parish Church of Quincy will hold a viewing and discussion of Al Gore's documentary: An Inconvenient Truth Friday, Jan. 12 at 7 p.m.

The film's showing will be preceded by a potluck supper at 6:30 p.m.

Both the supper and the showing will take place in the parish hall at 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Square, across from City Hall.

For more information, call 617-773-1290. No registration is required. All are welcome.

At the annual meeting, a Statement of Consciousness approved on the topic of global warming reads: "Earth is our home. We are part of this world and its destiny is our own. Life on this planet will be gravely affected unless we embrace new practices, ethics, and values to guide our lives on a warming planet. . . As a people of faith, we commit to a renewed reverence for life and respect for the interdependent web of all existence."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"When you get where you're going, where will you be? This is a leading question that often is very provocative for people willing to do a little soul-searching."

Some people answer: "I'm not going anywhere any more." They assume they are going nowhere in life, that they're standing still. But the fact is we're always moving in some direction. From the moment of conception we are moving on a course that carries us through life to death, and we trust, to something beyond.

There may be times when we might want to stop the world and get off, but life moves on, even then we think we are standing still. Actually, none of us are created to stand still in life. We are created to grow and develop, not just in the beginning of life, but through to the very end... Too many Christian adults assume that they've done all the growing that's expected of them. "How much more growing am I supposed to do?" Perhaps the best answer is found in Paul's answer to the church of Ephesus: "until we all attain the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, to mature manhood, to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ, so that we may no longer be children." (4: 13, 14).

OBITUARIES

Donald M. Murray, 82

Pulitzer-Prize Winning Editorial Writer,
Professor Emeritus At UNH

Donald M. Murray, 82, of Durham, N.H., a Quincy native and Pulitzer-Prize winning editorial writer, columnist and teacher, died Dec. 30.

Mr. Murray won the journalism honor in 1954 when he was 29 for distinguished editorial writing based on a series of more than 100 editorials he wrote on national defense for the Boston Herald. He went on to write the Boston Globe's "Over 60" column - renamed "Now and Then" in 2001 - for two decades.

Born in Boston, he grew up as an only child in Wollaston. He attended North Quincy High School and graduated from Tilton Academy in New Hampshire.

Mr. Murray, who lived in Durham, N.H., died Dec. 30, apparently of heart failure while visiting a friend in Beverly.

At age 82, he had planned to launch a new Web site for aspiring writers.

Mr. Murray became a paratrooper during World War II.

In 1948, he graduated from the University of New Hampshire with a degree in English.

He got his start in a career in journalism as a copyboy at the Herald and became a staff reporter in 1949.

Mr. Murray's first mar-

DONALD M. MURRAY

riage ended in divorce. In 1951, he married Minnie Mac Emmerich, whose slow death from Parkinson's Disease in 2005 was among the personal, private and sometimes painful parts of his life Murray chronicled in his column.

After working briefly for Time magazine and as a freelance writer in the 1950s, he joined the University of New Hampshire faculty in 1963. He retired in 1984.

Most recently, Mr. Murray wrote columns for the Boston Globe and was a professor emeritus at the University of New Hampshire.

He is survived by two daughters, Anne Nestelberger of Weymouth and Hanna Starobin of Mount Kisco, N.Y.; two grandsons and a granddaughter.

A private funeral and burial were planned for Mr. Murray.

A memorial service at the University of New Hampshire was also being planned.

Arthur I. Senter, 84

State Senate Court Officer

A funeral service for Arthur I. Senter, 84, of Rockland, formerly of Quincy, a Massachusetts Senate court officer for 30 years, was held Sunday at Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Mr. Senter died Dec. 28 at South Shore Hospital.

He performed many duties for the Senate and in 1963 was asked to prepare and recite a history of the Senate chamber and reception area. His work resulted in the foundation of a program known as "Doric Dames," a tour-guide program.

A World War II Navy veteran, he served aboard the escort carrier USS Manila Bay. He was awarded the Combat Action Ribbon, the Navy Unit Commendation, the Good Conduct Medal with one bronze star, the American Campaign Medal, the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal with one silver star and two bronze stars, the World War II Victory Medal, Navy Occupation Service Medal, Asia, the National Defense Service Medal, Philippine President Unit Citation and Philippine Liberation Ribbon.

Mr. Senter joined the Naval Reserves after the war and was called back to active duty during the Korean War.

Born in Newton, he was educated in Quincy and graduated from North Quincy High School in 1940. He attended Northeastern University and studied electrical engineering through the Massachusetts University Extension at MIT and Harvard.

He was active in the fraternal order of Masons and was a life-member of the former Theodore Roosevelt Lodge. He was a member of Masonic lodges, commanderies and grottos in Weymouth, Braintree and Quincy.

ARTHUR I. SENTER

Mr. Senter was awarded the Grand Master of Masons in Massachusetts Certificate of Appreciation and the Grand Commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island Certificate of Merit.

He was a past commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, chairman of the American Legion Department of Massachusetts Convention, a life-member of the VFW in Rockland and past president of the USS Manila Bay CVE-61 Association.

Mr. Senter is survived by his wife, Shirley A. (Wallace) Senter; five daughters, Carol Senter of Jamaica Plain, Barbara Brusco of New York, Gail McGrath of Pembroke, Dianne Senter Connolly of Hull and Nancy Whisman of Florida; and eight grandchildren.

Burial was in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Memorial donations may be made to the Dental Care for Children with Special Needs, c/o the Masonic Building, P.O. Box T, 1170 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169, Attn: Sec. John McCulloch or to the Eye Foundation of Knights Templar, c/o John McCulloch, 20 Old Forge Rd., Weymouth, MA 02190.

Donald MacFarlane, 68

Retired Carpenter

A funeral Mass for Donald MacFarlane, 68, of Rumford, Maine, formerly of Quincy, a retired carpenter, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at St. Athanasius and St. John Church in Rumford.

Mr. MacFarlane died Dec. 27 at Central Maine Medical Center in Lewiston after a battle with lung cancer.

Born and raised in Boston, he lived in Quincy and worked at Boston City Hospital until his retirement in 1996.

Mr. MacFarlane later volunteered his woodworking skills to help others.

He and his wife, Jane C.

(Gould), moved to Maine four years ago.

He loved fishing, camping and the outdoors.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Jane-Sarah MacFarlane of Lowell; his mother, Mabel MacFarlane of Quincy; and two sisters, Bonnie McCarthy of Somerville and Christine Mannetta of Quincy.

He was the father of the late Jennifer MacFarlane.

Burial will be in the spring in St. John's Cemetery, Rumford.

Funeral arrangements were made by S.G. Thibault Funeral Home and Cremation in Rumford, Maine.

H. Mitchell, Jr. of Harwich, and Bob Mitchell and Bill Mitchell of Quincy; a daughter, Melinda Smith of Quincy; a brother, Albert Mitchell of Braintree; and eight grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Burial was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by The Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Memorial donations may be made to United Way of Massachusetts Bay, 51 Sleeper St., Boston, MA 02210.

W. Paul Madden, 89

Retired Banker, Investment Advisor

A funeral Mass for W. Paul Madden, 89, of Rockland, formerly of Quincy and Braintree, a retired banker and investment advisor, was celebrated Tuesday at Holy Family Church, Rockland.

Mr. Madden died Dec. 29 at South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth.

He was an officer with the Bank of Boston for 20 years and worked until he was 80 as an investment advisor for Scudder Investments.

During World War II, he served in the Army in the European Theater.

Mr. Madden lived in Quincy for 33 years and Braintree for 11 years before moving to Rockland 17 years ago.

Born in Dorchester, he was raised in the Uphams Corner section and graduated from Boston College High School in 1934. He also attended Wentworth Institute.

He enjoyed playing poker and, in his early years, golfing.

Husband of the late Catherine M. "Kaye" (Browning) Madden, he is survived by many nieces and nephews, including Mary Jean Gunther of Weymouth, Paul Petrucci of Quincy and Gerald Petrucci of Maine.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by McDonald Funeral Home, South Weymouth.

Keith Hollandsworth, 53

Retired N.E. Telephone Manager

A funeral Mass for Keith Hollandsworth, 53, of Norton and Hull, formerly of Quincy, a retired manager for New England Telephone Company, was celebrated Wednesday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mr. Hollandsworth died Dec. 27 at Sturdy Memorial Hospital in Attleboro.

He worked for New England Telephone for 30 years.

Born in Boston, he was raised in Quincy. He graduated from Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree in 1971.

Mr. Hollandsworth is survived by his wife, Nancy P. (Morse) Hollandsworth; his mother, Dorothy Mae (Williams) Hollandsworth of Hull; and two cousins, Larry Kostant and Sandy Kostant of Norton.

He was the son of the late Keith B. Hollandsworth.

Funeral arrangements were made by Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy.

Robert E. Troup, 63

Former North Quincy High School Teacher

A funeral service for Robert E. Troup, 63, of Quincy, a former teacher at North Quincy High School, was held Wednesday at Christ Episcopal Church, Quincy.

Mr. Troup died Dec. 29 at home.

He taught social studies and current events at the high school for 35 years. He was also a class advisor and an advisor to the Asian Culture Club, as well as a former hockey and football coach.

Mr. Troup initiated the school's Festival of Culture, teaching students to appreciate their own cultures as well as other students.

A lifelong Quincy resident, he graduated from North Quincy High School in 1961 and from Northeastern University in 1965.

He was a member and organist/choir director at Christ Episcopal Church in Quincy for more than 30 years.

He enjoyed music and sports and was an avid bowler. He played in the

ROBERT E. TROUP

Christ Church Bowling League and ran a youth hockey program in Hingham.

Mr. Troup enjoyed spending summers in Plymouth.

He is survived by three brothers, Walter D. Troup III of Halifax, James S. Troup of Braintree and Charles G. Troup of San Antonio, Texas; and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, Milton.

LEGAL NOTICENotice of Public Hearing for Quincy Center Urban Revitalization District

The Quincy City Council will hold a Public Hearing on Monday, January 8, 2007 at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chamber, City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy for the purpose of providing the public an opportunity to comment on a proposed Urban Revitalization District Plan (URDP) to be filed pursuant to M.G.L. c. 121B, Section 48.

The City of Quincy Planning and Community Development Department, acting as the City's Urban Renewal Agency, is proposing the adoption of a URDP for a significant portion of Quincy Center. Once adopted by the City Council, the URDP will be submitted to the Massachusetts Department of Housing and Community Development for final approval.

Over the last thirty-five years, numerous efforts by the City sought to revitalize Quincy Center and return its historic vitality as a commercial center. The City has concluded that the ordinary operations of private enterprise, without public investment, will not make the area a significant destination location. The purpose of the proposed plan is to set forth a series of initiatives intended to stimulate private investment and to restore Quincy Center as a vibrant downtown area.

Written comments may be provided to the City Council Office or the Department of Planning and Community Development which will be accepted until 4:00 p.m. Friday, January 12, 2007. Comments received before the Public Hearing on January 8, 2007 will be reviewed and included in the Public Hearing record.

A report of the Public Hearing will be placed on file with Clerk of the City Council and will be included in the application submitted to The Massachusetts Department of Housing & Community Development (DHCD).

Copies of the URDP application, compiled pursuant to M.G.L. c. 121B, Section 48, may be reviewed in the office of the City Clerk, the Department of Planning and Community Development located at City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, 3rd Floor, and in the Thomas Crane Public Library main branch at 40 Washington Street.

East Coast Petroleum Holds Fifth Annual Holiday Party For Foster Children

For the fifth year, East Coast Petroleum served as the lead sponsor of the Christmas Party for the United Homes for Children.

United Homes, with main offices in Dorchester and Tewksbury, founded in 1972 as a private, charitable non-profit organization, serves over 225 foster and homeless children, ages 2 to 18, in either individual placement or group homes. Most of these children are available for adoption and would like nothing more than a permanent, good and loving home.

The children were treated to a visit at the Quincy Elks Club Tinnell Room by Santa (Jim Caparelli) and The Hearts and Noses Clown Troupe of Brookline. All children received a hot meal as well as toys and filled school backpacks from a variety of sponsors. They danced and sang to music provided by DJ Victor Jordan.

Other sponsors and providers included:

Quincy Center for Technical Education Culinary Arts Department, Toys for Tots, Barnett's Catering, DiBella's Pizza and Subs, Lopez the Florist, Living Silks by John Morton, Brush Hill Transportation's Bean Town Trolleys, Konditor Meister Bakery, Roche Bros Supermarket, Phillip's Candy House, Lisa Baldassari and Maryann

Bagnoli for Bruins and Disney on Ice tickets and press and publicity by Bernice Mader's Red Tape Limited.

Backpacks were stuffed with items provided by: Old Colony YMCA, Blue Cross Blue Shield, Brockton Hospital, Bugaboo Creek Steakhouse, Irving Oil Terminals, Health Services Administrators and Minuteman Press.

Anyone interested in adopting or fostering a child, please call United Homes for Children at (978)640-0089.

Historic Section Saved By Firefighters Fire Kind To Souther Tide Mill

By TOM HENSHAW

Someday those who preserve Quincy's historic legacy may look back on the flames that touched the site of the Souther Tide Mill on Southern Artery early Saturday as a successful fire.

For one thing, no one was injured. For another, the building that was destroyed had been added to the 200-year-old mill later when it was a lumber company and probably would have been razed.

"The part that burned had no historical value," said City Councillor Leo Kelly. "Most of us wanted that part of the property to come down, anyway.

"The Quincy Fire Department did an outstanding job. They saved the tidal mill for future generations."

Kelly is the chairman of a committee that recently voted 9-0 to have the city accept the property as a gift and convert it into an historic site and waterfront park with boat landings.

"From what I understand, most of the historically important buildings escaped damage," said Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, curator of the Quincy Historical Society. "Those of historic interest survived."

Donald Murray, 44, apparently one of many homeless men who had been living in the building, was arrested charged with wanton destruction of real property, breaking and entering and trespassing.

He pleaded not guilty in Quincy District Court and was released on no bail with the condition he seek entry into a work program at Father Bill's Place or the Salvation Army, stay away from the Souther Mill and abstain from using drugs or alcohol, including Listerine.

Vote Seen In 60 Days

Downtown Plan Takes Another Step Forward

Plans to revitalize downtown Quincy took another small step forward Monday night at a City Council hearing that produced mostly praise for the plan from the 50 residents and business owners in attendance.

Council President Doug Gutro said another hearing will be held in the near future to discuss land taking and financial matters and review the entire project with the Council expected to vote its approval within 60 days.

After that it is up to the State Department of Housing and Urban Development to give the final approval to the plan which would turn Quincy Center into a mixture of retail, office and residential use.

The purpose of the plan is to set forth a series of public initiatives intended to stimulate private investment to restore Quincy Center as a significant destination location.

Land-takings for the project have already begun and Planning Director Dennis Harrington said a relocation meeting for displaced tenants will be held Thursday, Jan. 30, at 10 a.m. in the Council Chamber at City Hall.

He said the city plans to open a relocation office in the downtown area in early February to aid those tenants who lose their locations to the land-taking.

Harrington told the hearing that the plan had undergone scrutiny by all parties in the past four months and has gained the approval of the Planning Board as well as the Council's own Downtown Committee.

Public input gathered at local meetings included lively walkable streets, new parking facilities, a downtown cultural district, a course connecting east and west, green space or parks and other amenities.

The hearing was told that 30 per cent of the land in Quincy Center is vacant and is used for surface parking. The city has the potential of producing 13 million square feet of developable lot area in the square.

Police Chief Wanted Revocation

Billiard Club Liquor License Suspended 10 Days

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

"You did a disservice to the City of Quincy, to your patrons and to the people," said Police Chief Robert Crowley to Guy Jolly, owner of Renaissance Billiard Club, 1555 Hancock St. for serving alcohol after closing hours.

Even though these harsh words were spoken by Crowley, his motion to revoke the liquor license, and seconded by Jay Duca, director of inspection services, was amended.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said he thought the revocation of the license for the first offense was "a little drastic" and made the motion to suspend the license for 10 days—"days for serving alcohol after hours and 3 days for violating rules and regulations of the License Board, by not notifying the police during a fight. The vote was 3 to 2 with Crowley and Duca opposing.

The violation happened on New Year's Eve when Officer Mike Powers and Sgt. Michael O'Shea entered the Renaissance to find 20-30 persons outside just before 3 a.m. and more than 150 persons inside the club dancing, drinking, and still listening to music provided by disk jockeys.

Jolly told the board a letter of explanation that the tickets that were printed were for the hours of 10 p.m. to 4 a.m. and that it was a "typo" which should have read 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. He said the entertainment group that was there was supposed to inform everyone who entered that night about the 2 a.m. closing.

Board members through questioning of Jolly didn't seem to buy his story.

Duca said he did not believe anything in the letter and Crowley said it "boggles my mind" that you didn't call

163 Graduate At Quincy College Commencement

Students from more than 50 Massachusetts communities and 16 countries were among the 163 who graduated from Quincy College at its winter commencement.

The commencement was held Saturday in the President's Ballroom at the Quincy Marriott.

Mayor William Phelan, College President Sue Harris and Board of Governors Chairman Peter Tsaffaras welcomed and congratulated the graduates on their accomplishments.

Quincy College alumna, Amy Dwyer, who serves as the college's Director of International Student Services, gave the commencement address. She encouraged the graduates to "find out what you love to do and do it...take risks...and give to others in need of help."

Dwyer was presented with the second annual Distinguished Alumna Award, the first woman to receive it.

Commencement student speakers were Sharron Barrett and Alik Edwards.

Faculty member Susan Cahill was given the distinction of Mace Bearer as the recipient of the President's Award for Excellence.

March 20 Full Day For Elementary Schools

Tuesday, March 20, will be a full day of classes for all Quincy Public School students at the elementary level, except those in pre-school, announces School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristoforo.

This will insure that all students in grade 4 have sufficient time to complete the long composition portion of the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System, he said.

Pre-school sessions will not be held March 20, or on any Tuesday.

School lunches will be served on that day and full-day bus schedules will be in place. Middle and high schools will be in session all day, as originally scheduled.

Elementary Report card conferences will be rescheduled for the afternoons of March 6 and March 13.

Reverse Mortgage Explained To Seniors

The adjustable rate mortgage that got you into your house might not be the right loan for you now

A fixed rate mortgage is a locked-in sure thing. No more getting panicky about rising interest rates or dealing with annual adjustments that make your original "great rate" not so great after all. With a fixed rate, you get stability and an absolute guarantee of what your principal & interest payment will be next month, next year and until the day you pay it off. Taxes, water & sewer and the cost of living generally only keep going up. But your monthly principal & interest payment can stay the same for the next 30 years. And with fixed rates still near historic lows, you may even be able to lower your payment or take out some cash. People who switch to a fixed rate are glad they did! Is switching right for you? The 'Good Old Days'?

The "good old days?"

Apparently not that great.

Especially the "good old, old days."

Seniors at the Beechwood Drop-in Center, East Squantum St., North Quincy, got to wondering about years gone by as 2006 was winding down.

And zeroed in on the year 1906 to see what life was like 100 years ago. They gathered information and shared it with one another.

Executive Director Sharron Beals compiled the tidbits and passes them along.

"They're thought and smile provoking," she says. "They boggle your mind."

Well, you'll find them interesting.

So here is what those "good old days" were like in 1906.

• The average life expectancy in the United States was 47 years.

• Only 14 percent of the homes had a bathtub.

• Just 8 percent of homes had a telephone.

• The average wage in the U.S. was 22 cents per hour.

• The average worker earned between $200 and $400 a year.

• A good accountant could earn $2,000 per year. A dentist $2,500 a year, a veterinarian between $1,500 and $4,000 per year, a mechanical engineer about $5,000 a year.

• There were only 8,000 cars and only 144 miles of paved roads.

• The maximum speed limit in most cities was 10 miles per hour.

• More than 95 percent of all births took place at home.

SHARRON

• Ninety percent of all doctors had no college education. Instead they attended so-called medical schools, many of which were condemned by the press and government as "substandard."

• Sugar cost four cents a pound.

• Eggs were 14 cents a dozen.

• Coffee was 15 cents a pound.

• Most women only washed their hair once a month and used borax or egg yolks for shampoo.

• Canada passed a law prohibiting poor people from entering their country for any reason.

• The tallest structure in the world was the Eiffel Tower.

• Five leading causes of death were: (1) Pneumonia and influenza; (2) tuberculosis; (3) diarrhea; (4) heart disease; (5) stroke.

• Only six percent of all Americans had graduated from high school.

• Two out of every 10 adults could not read or write.

• The American flag had 48 stars.

• There was no Mother's Day or Father's Day.

• The population of Las Vegas was only 30.

• Marijuana, heroin and morphine were available over the counter at the local drugstore. Pharmacists back then said: "Heroin clears the complexion, gives buoyancy to the mind, regulates the stomach and bowels, and is a perfect guardian of health."

There were about 230 reported murders in the entire U.S.

• Eighteen percent of households had at least one full-time servant or domestic help.

• Crossword puzzles, canned beer and ice tea had not been invented yet.

You'd have to say 1906 was an interesting year.

And, as Sharron says: "What a difference a century makes."

LaRaia Moves To Keep North Quincy High School Open

By FRANK McCAULEY

The hour of decision was due to arrive with Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia holding firm against a gathering momentum to shut down the nearly 50 year old North Quincy High School.

School Supt. Lawrence Creedon planned to recommend at a meeting of the School Committee the closing of North Quincy High during renovation and construction and the transfer of its students to Quincy High where they would go on double sessions.

"We may have to sit on this for a week while we study alternatives," said LaRaia who is chairman of the School Committee by virtue of being mayor. "I am definitely against closing the school."

AGATHA DESCHENES NAMED CITY PURCHASING AGENT

Agatha Deschenes, who went to work as a clerk typist in the City Purchasing Dept. in 1961, has been named to the $15,000 a year post of purchasing agent. Deschenes, a 1933 graduate of Quincy High School, replaces Richard Buckley who was released from the job. She is believed to be the first woman to hold the position.

NO POLITICS IN SOLIMINI PROMOTION, SAYS MAYOR

Mayor LaRaia named Police Lt. Corady Solimini a worker in his mayoralty campaign, to the post of inspector division in the Police Department and immediately stood up to fend off the flak. The position is considered to be second in command to Police Chief Francis Finn. Finn said that he plans to protest the appointment in court. The organization of the Police Department is the responsibility of the chief.

QUINCY-ISM

Pasquale S. DiStefano was installed for a third term as president of the Quincy Citizens Association. Other officers include Arthur Chandler, vice-president; Saul Lipsitz, treasurer; and Dorothy Kelly, secretary. Quincy Draft Board No. 27 moved from the Adams Academy in Quincy to Selective Service Headquarters, 150 Causeway St., Boston. Mr. and Mrs. William Weir, 75 Hamilton Ave., North Quincy, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary at a reception given by their three children. William T. Flavin, historian, concert singer and teacher of voice at Curry College, spoke at a meeting of the Williston Women's Club on the topic "Along Our Coast from New York to Calais." The Ward 2 Civic Association held its installation of officers at Montell's Mass. Avenue, Quincy Point. The incoming officers included Ted DeCristofaro, president; James Lyons, vice-president; Dorothy Eaton, treasurer; Phyllis Bagen, recording secretary; and Isabel Brugge, corresponding secretary. Russell Edwards Hair Stylists, 27 Cottage Ave., Quincy, was advertising "Slow cutting for guys and gals for $6.50."

Ruth W. Randle, clerk of the First Baptist Church of Williston, announced that the church's 104th annual meeting would be held Jan. 13. Nine student members of the Quincy High School Honor Society and the school's men's swim team, recently donated a pint of blood at Quincy City Hospital. They included Russell Hodgkins, David Ray, Richard MacKay, Michael Lee, Neil Rodbur, David Rafferty, William Dalton, Joseph Harris, and Kevin Blake as well as swim team coach Elaine Murphy. Ward 2 Councillor Daniel G. Raymond commended the School Committee for placing the $78,000 in the FY 1997-1998 budget for renovation work at the Quincy Point Junior High School Daniel Webster Elementary School Complex. Marion Andrews, director of senior citizens activities in Quincy, installed the officers of the St. John's Senior citizens group. They included Joseph Lawlor, president; Genevieve Lawlor, vice-president; Paul Locarni, treasurer; and Francis Moynihan, secretary. Steve Martinelli, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Martinelli of Quincy, was named to the honor roll at Cushing Academy, Ashburnham. The Plaza Restaurant, 51 Billings Rd., North Quincy, was advertising a "top of the round roast" dinner for $3.25. The Quincy High School hockey team hiked its record to 5-2-2 with a seven to three win over Newton North. Frankie Guest had the "hat trick" and two assists to increase his Suburban League scoring lead. Officials at the Thomas Crane Library announced that Sunday library services would begin Jan. 13. The main library at 40 Washington St. will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. City Councillor and Mrs. John J. Quinn announced the engagement of their daughter, Andrea to Charles E. Santoro, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Santoro of North Quincy.

Praises Phelan For 'Neighborhoods First' But Zoning Changes Needed

Kudos to Mayor Phelan for introducing the "Neighborhoods First" initiative and hosting meetings within the city's neighborhoods thus starting to address residents' concerns regarding the way some of our single family neighborhoods are turning into multiple unit at times crowded transient neighborhoods.

Mayor Phelan has called for projects in neighborhoods for development guidelines-this is what I think the residents like to hear and implemented. "These guidelines would help developers and municipal boards and agencies in protecting the character and the aesthetics of Quincy neighborhoods. New developments should fit the character of our existing neighborhood," quoting Mayor Phelan in The Quincy Sun, Nov. 16, 2006 edition.

The Mayor did not mention that the present zoning, namely Resident B, allows large multiple dwelling units and additions to take place. The foundation and basic improvement in the neighborhoods is based on smart zoning. Mayor's Design Concept will help, but still allows high density development in Residential B zoned neighborhoods.

Historically, Quincy's old neighborhoods, such as South and West Quincy, consisted and still do mostly of single family homes, even the zoning remains residential B. Many small family businesses operated side by side with the owner of the business, particularly the granite industries, barber shops, bakeries, and small grocery stores.

Today, Residential B zoning allows multi-family units. Protecting the character of the neighborhood, as our Mayor has very wisely initiated is going to happen when the zoning from Residential B is changed to residential A, particularly in area where infrastructure alone is not able to carry the added burden and without having a negative impact on its neighbors.

Part of the dilemma is that if the Zoning Board of Appeals, the "Design Board" and the "Smart Zoning" Committee cannot find "solid ground" to make the developers adhere to the by-laws the City will be subject to law suits and the character of the neighborhood continues to be at stake, unless the zoning is addressed.

In Ward 4 for example, one of the oldest and perhaps the most historic neighborhoods in the city, the backyards of lovely single family homes are often converted and turned into "additions" or multi-unit two and three story dwellings.

At present, the City Council's moratorium on this issue perhaps will start to address building permits and zoning variances permitted within present guidelines. Hopefully the new initiative will rectify the loss of green space and quality of life and mitigate the impact and character in form of density, traffic, infrastructure, flooding, parking, water runoff, sunlight and shadowing and clean air, just to mention these.

I hope that this New Year our City Council members continue their forthright toughness to preserve the integrity of our historic character of this fine city and its heritage, and that they examine and review our present zoning and continue to support each others' efforts. Furthermore, that our Mayor continues to use his executive powers to preserve our neighborhoods as he has started and continues to solicit the advice and help of his fellow citizens.

Praise For President Ford

Gerald Ford, the 38th President of the United States, died on the second day of Christmas. He became the American President when his country needed him most.

God has given him the longest life, ever given to any other American President. Betty his wife made a statement that President Ford's life was filled with love for God, for his family and for his country. And since America, his country is the only country. And since America, his country, is the only country consists of all nations and races of the world. Her statement also means that President Ford's life was also filled with love for all countries.

President Ford gave President Nixon a free, full and absolute pardon. He pardoned President Nixon in order to help heal his country.

And if President Ford gave President Nixon a "free, full and absolute pardon." He pardoned President Nixon in order to help heal his country.

And, if President Ford could have given one single, last advice to President George W. Bush, it would have been to treat our former friend and ally, President Saddam Hussein, as President Ford treated President Nixon.

That act by President George W. Bush would encourage all men everywhere "to practice golden rule and brotherhood of men," as President Ford preached and practiced.

Point Webster Students Perform Holiday Concert At Quincy Credit Union

FOR THE THIRD year in a row, 20 students from Point Webster Middle School chorus performed a variety of traditional holiday songs at Quincy Credit Union. The performance was lead by Amy Rogers, Point Webster's music teacher, and accompanied by instrumental teacher, David Buckley. The "Sounds of the Season" were enjoyed by both members and staff alike.

'Concerts At The Crane' Begin Jan. 21 At Library

"Concert at the Crane" will feature music, dance and stories from a variety of cultural traditions Sunday afternoons from 3 - 4 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

Jan. 21: The Amaryllis Chamber Ensemble presents one of Franz Joseph Haydn's famous London Trios paired with the virtuosos Duo Concertante by Bernhard Molique and the charming Baroque Trio Sonata in G Major by George Philipp Telemont. The piece is one of their favorite trios for flute, violin and cello.

Since its inception in 2000, the Amaryllis Chamber Ensemble has established itself as an ensemble-on-the-move by presenting diverse and engaging programs from the chamber music repertoire for wind and string instruments.

Flutist Bonnie Cochran performs regularly throughout the Boston area, and has performed with the Willow Flute Ensemble, Boston Civic Symphony Orchestra, Metrowest Symphony, National Flute Association (NEA) Professional Flute Choir and Harvard Square Chamber Orchestra. She was a 2004 winner of the NEA's Convention Performer Competition.

Violinist Melissa Bull, who began playing at age five, received numerous awards and succeeded at multiple national competitions and music festivals. At age 11, she was the youngest musician to win a professional position with the York (PA) Symphony Orchestra. She has performed in numerous prestigious venues.

Cellist Kate Marsch received an MM and Graduate Performance Diploma from the Boston Conservatory and graduated magna cum laude with a BM in music performance and education from the University of Houston. She teaches cello lessons in Wellesley and performs throughout the Boston area.

Feb. 11: The Chu Ling Dance Academy will perform.

March 18: The Crane Library will feature the Irish Troubadour.

All performances are free and sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library. For more information call 617-376-1301.

The annual "CHILL, CHOWDER, SOUP COOK-OFF" is being sponsored by the FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH OF WOLLASTON.

Fundraiser For Scouts To Canadian Jamboree

City Councillor Joseph Finn is hosting a fundraiser Thursday, Jan. 25, from 6 to 9 p.m. at Sons of Italy Hall, 120 Quarry St., to send 26 Boy Scouts from Quincy and Milton to a jamboree in Canada.

The suggested donation is $20.

"These young people have an incredible opportunity here," said Finn. Not only do they get to showcase their scouting skills, but they also will be representing our city and our country. I'm thrilled to help."

The Canadian National Scout Jamboree will be held on a future date at Camp

Tamaracouta 60 miles north of Montreal to celebrate 100 years of scouting.

Troops from around the world will compete in climbing, swimming and survival skills learned in local community centers and in the Blue Hills.

"The cost of the event might be out of reach for some families," said Finn. "but I think this event will give each scout the resources they need for a once in a lifetime opportunity."

Organizers also are creating an advertising booklet for the event. Prices range from $10 to $125. Contact Nick Puleo at 617-835-1253.

Sticky Walnut Bars

While at our granddaughter's Sophia's birthday party, her other grandmother Alma gave me this delicious recipe for sticky walnut bars. She said she got it from her daughter Laura.

It is very different, quite easy to prepare and it is made with crescent rolls that can be purchased in any grocery store.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

STICKY WALNUT BARS

- 2 packages crescent rolls
- 1 stick butter
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- 3/4 cup brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon water

Open rolls and slice into eight slices each package.

Melt the butter, and place two tablespoons of it on the bottom of a baking dish with 1/4 cup of the walnuts.

Place eight slices of rolls over the butter and nuts.

Add the brown sugar to the remaining melted butter plus one tablespoon of water. Cook until smooth. Add the rest of the walnuts.

Drizzle half of this mixture over the eight slices of rolls. Then add the other eight slices and drizzle with the remaining liquid.

Bake for 25-30 minutes. They are so delicious. I know you will enjoy them as much as we did.

After The Holidays

New Project Helps Families Cope With Alcohol Problems

The holiday season is difficult for many families, especially those struggling with problems of substance abuse.

Individuals and families trying to cope with such problems often seek help in the new year. The Family Project at Bay State Community Services in Quincy offers free counseling for individuals with alcoholism and their family members.

"A lot of people decide to go for help at the beginning of the new year because they want to change their lives, and we are happy this year to have a new program that provides free treatment and enables our clients to participate in an important research project with their family members," said Dr. Daurice Cox, Director of Clinical Services at Bay State Community Services.

community Services.

The Family Project is a research study to find out whether adding family counseling to one-on-one recovery counseling leads to more sobriety for individuals with alcohol problems. Half of the participants in the program are randomly assigned to receive free family counseling and one-on-one counseling.

The other half are randomly assigned to receive free on-on-one counseling, but do not receive family counseling. Treatment includes 24 counseling sessions over 12 weeks for all participants in the study.

In addition to receiving treatment free of charge, participants in the Family Project complete four interviews. These interviews are meant to document improvement in sobriety and family relationships. Clients and their family members can receive up to $200 each for completing these interviews.

Jane Alter, LICSW, Family Project Director, said "We are already seeing that our clients are benefiting from their participation in the Family Project by coming regularly to their treatment sessions, and by learning new skills for maintaining sobriety and having more positive communication with their family members."

For more information, call the Family Project at Bay State Community Services at 617-694-2602. Bay State Community Services is one of the most comprehensive community-based human service agencies in the state.

Stroke Screening Jan. 17 At Squantum 1st Church

Fire Kind To Souther Tide Mill

His next appearance in court is to be Feb. 6.

Police said Murray told them he started a campfire that got out of hand in the building.

The Souther Mill, dating back at least to 1806 and one of the few mills left in the country that used tidal action to grind grain, once ranked as one of the state's 10 most endangered historic sites.

The site has a long history as a mill, as shown in a monograph written in 1981 by the late Quincy historian H. Hobart Holly.

Records have it that one Ebenezer Thayer purchased the land in 1802 and four years later received permission to build a dam across Town River "for the purpose of erecting a mill or mills on the same."

The mill was operating in 1814 when Thayer sold it to David Stetson, who in turn sold it to John Souther, a member of a well-known Hingham shipbuilding family, a year later.

Souther, who gave his name to the mill, operated a shipyard, a wharf, a grist mill and a canal on the site. The Souther sold the properties in 1873 to Wilber F. Lakin, who converted it into a lumber yard.

There are indications that the tidal mill buildings that escaped Saturday's fire may not be part of the original 1806 structures after all.

Another fire ravaged the site around 1850, destroying the original mill buildings, which were replaced in 1854.

The owners, the Quincy Lumber Company, closed its doors in 1983. CVS Corporation, the pharmacy firm, acquired the property in 1998 and agreed to donate it to the city for preservation.

"The mill is in limbo right now," said Leo Kelly.

"CVS gave the city four acres, including the mill. Mayor Sheets at the time formed the Souther Tide Mill Historic Association, a non-profit organization that raised more than $100,000 to shore up the old tide mill buildings.

"Now Mayor Phelan is asking that the city take the mill back from the non-profit. We voted 9-0 to take it back but it still has to be approved by the county land court.

Kelly regards the fire as a wake-up call to the city.

"We've got to get in there and clean it up," he said. "Maybe it will give us a kick in the behind to get us going."

the police when a fight ensued. He added that Jolly was "totally at fault".

Also that he did not tell the disk jockeys to stop playing at 2 p.m. instead he told the board that he "lost track of time".

Chairman Joseph Shea said that Jolly may appeal to the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission.

After the meeting, Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business Association, went over to Crowley and Duca and told them she totally agreed with their decision to revoke Jolly's license saying the vote was "not conducive to what we are trying to accomplish in the city."

Lunar New Year Festival To Be Held Feb. 25

Preparations are underway for the 19th Annual Quincy Lunar New Year Festival to be held Sunday, Feb. 25 from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at North Quincy High School.

The festival is a free event organized by Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) under the leadership of the event's chairmen Frank Poon and David Yizou.

"Last year's festival was a great success with more than 4,000 people attending, and with additional activities being planned this year's Lunar New Festival promises to be bigger than ever," said John Brothers, Executive Director of QARI. "The festival has grown as the Asian community in Quincy has grown. We are pleased to feature many Asian cultures at the event and invite all members of the community to celebrate with us."

The Asian Lunar New Year is celebrated at the end of the annual cycle of new moons and each New Year is named for one of the 12 animals. According to ancient legend, the Lord Buddha once summoned all animals to come to him. When only 12 came, he rewarded them by naming each year for them. This year is the year of the pig.

Lunar New Year celebrations are held in Asian communities throughout the world. Traditionally, the New Year is a family holiday where families come together to visit, share meals and present gifts of "lucky" red envelopes to children. Quincy's celebration will reflect this tradition.

The New Year Festival is a family-oriented event which represents the involvement of more than one hundred local businesses, government and social service agencies and individuals, all working to bring together several generations of the community to celebrate the new year," said Poon. "These many different groups include students of Quincy High and North Quincy High Schools; Grand Sponsors Mohegan Sun and Sunshine Travel; QARI institutional members such as South Shore Elder Services and Quincy Community Action Programs and volunteers from the community."

As a family event the festival will offer entertainment to delight all ages. There will be performances of Asian music and dance and exhibits featuring the work of local Asian artists. There will also be a children's area with Asian games and crafts. Local restaurants will serve different types of Asian cuisine including Chinese and Vietnamese foods.

New additions to the festival are a reading corner where elders will engage and entertain children by reading popular stories. This activity is being carried out in coordination with Project RISE which strives to increase parents' understanding of the importance of reading to their young children as a critical component of school readiness. The festival will also work to bridge the past and present by showcasing traditional Asian garments and modern costume characters, such as Minnie and Mickey Mouse, all of which will be worn by local teens.

License Board Acts On Police 'Sting'

The License Board at Tuesday's meeting heard Lt. Peter Turowski's report on a "sting" operation that culminated in four violations of serving liquor to minors.

On each occasion, a 16 year old youth was sent in the establishments to purchase liquor. The youth was served in all four places.

The first one was at Pete's Grille, 540 South St. Co-owner and manager Louis Gangi said he was "sorry and embarrassed" and said "take a look at our record of 49 years with no problems."

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele made a motion to suspend the liquor license for 3 days with all 3 days suspended.

However, Police Chief Robert Crowley said in light of the fact that Pete's Grille has such a good record for 49 years, he made a motion to suspend for 1 day with 1 day suspended.

The vote was unanimous in favor.

At Atlas Liquors, Adams St., one of the owners Jeff Fine said they used to card those under 30 years of age, but now he said "we card everyone."

He told the board that the person who served the youth has been with Atlas for more than 10 years and is "so diligent" that it surprised everyone. She thought the youth looked "30".

At the Pacific Food Court, owner Kai Cheong Lau said he was "very regretful and embarrassed."

Crowley made a motion to suspend the license for 2 days with 2 days suspended.

The Terra Brasil's Restaurant, (formerly Pacini's) was given a 1 day suspension with 1 day suspended.

Carlo Santos, owner also apologized to the board.

Turowski said when he questioned the person who sold the underage youth, she had only been in United States for one month and could not speak good English.

QUINCY COLLEGE BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Seeks Nominations for Board Members

The Appointing Council Shall Meet To Consider Qualified Applicants For Appointments To The Board.

Nominees are to be considered for appointment to fill vacancies.

Board members are advocates for the institution, and have certain governance and oversight responsibilities for the College as specified in the enabling legislation. Members are expected to attend regular meetings, ordinarily scheduled in the evening, and to participate fully as a member of specific subcommittees, usually meeting several times a month during the day. Additionally, members are participants in Commencement, College Ceremonies, and demonstrate in actions and word a commitment to the mission and purpose of the College. Members must submit an annual financial disclosure form to the City Clerk.

Interested individuals must submit a letter of interest and resume, to the Appointing Council, to be received on or before February 1, 2007. The Appointing Council shall meet to consider qualified candidates, and will provide an optional opportunity for interested parties to address the Appointing Council. The Council welcomes diversity in applicants and encourages anyone who believes he or she might contribute positively to the continued success of the institution to respond.

Letter of interest and resume to:

Evergreen Program Seeks Holiday Trees

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Before chucking that pine needle-dropping Christmas tree in a landfill, consider a more ecologically-friendly approach to post holiday cleaning.

The Quincey Evergreen Program, now in its 18th year, is accepting discarded Christmas trees in exchange for a coupon for a 10-inch evergreen seedling for them to nourish into adulthood.

Participating Quincey residents may turn in unwanted trees at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Center, One Merrymount Parkway, until Jan. 14.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, who has chaired the program since its inception, said that the goal is to prevent Christmas trees from ending up in a landfill where they will not break down as well.

Discarded trees will be processed through a wood chipper at the Public Works Department and turned into mulch, that will then be used in flower beds throughout the city.

Participating tree caregivers are advised to leave seedlings in their pots outdoors in the summer and indoors in the winter, until they reach a point where they can survive on their own.

Trees fostered by the program are currently growing throughout New England, said Kelly, some as far south as the Cape.

"We have thousands and thousands of trees planted everywhere," he said. "Once we give someone a sapling, they can plant it anywhere they want."

"Without trees we would have no clean air to breathe. Planting trees is how we keep the air pure," he said.

The program is sponsored by Jay Cashman, the contractor who funds the seedlings and promotional materials for the program.

7 Deadly Mistakes That Will Cost You Thousands When You Sell Your Home

Quincey - A new report has just been released which reveals "7 costly mistakes that most homeowners make when selling their home, and a 9 Step System that can help you sell your home fast and for the most amount of money."

This industry report shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling homes have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. The fact of the matter is that fully three quarters of home-sellers don't get what they want for their home and become disillusioned and -worse- financially disadvantaged when they put their home on the market.

As this report uncovers, most home-sellers make 7 deadly mistakes that will cost them literally thousands of dollars. The good news is that each and every one of these mistakes is entirely preventable.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "The 9 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and For Top Dollar".

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report, call 1-800-611-0351 and enter ID #1000. You can call anytime, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH was filled with family members and friends as 63 Quincy College Nursing Program graduates received their pins.

Over 60 Graduate Quincy College RN Program

More than 60 students graduated from the Quincy College Registered Nurse Program at the college's winter commencement last Saturday, and were awarded associate degrees.

They also received their pins at the Professional Recognition Ceremony two days before at Bethany Congregational Church.

College President Sue Harris acknowledged the sacrifice each student made to complete the nursing program.

Senior Vice President Keith Cottonco urged the graduates to "dig deep" and "spread your roots."

Peter Tsaffaras, chairman of the college Board of Governors, congratulated the graduates.

Kristin Panks, chairwoman of the AND program, introduced the college faculty and staff.

Recent graduates and current registered nurse Robert Conley shared his thoughts about how each person can keep on learning.

Faculty member Susan Cahill was selected to award the nursing pin to the graduates while some chose family members in the nursing field to pin them.

Gerard Morris and Donna Winiewicz expressed their feelings about being new graduates.

Award certificates were presented to students who had been voted an Outstanding Exhibitor by their peers at the October 2006 Health and Wellness Expo at Presidents Place.

The Faculty Award for Academic Achievement was presented to Patricia Candura.

The Nursing Program graduates:

Tax Tips From the Experts. Telephone Tax Refunds

The IRS has been charging a tax on long-distance phone service since 1898. However, as a result of a recent court ruling, the U.S. Treasury has agreed to refund these taxes paid by consumers between Feb. 28, 2003 and Aug. 1, 2006.

There are two ways to get the refund on your 2006 income tax return, a simplified approach and long-form approach.

The simplified approach is a standard refund amount based on the number of exemptions claimed on your 2006 income tax return. Generally you will get one exemption for yourself, another for your spouse and one for each of your dependants. The refund amount is as follows:

One Exemption	$30
Two Exemptions	$40
Three Exemptions	$50
Four or more Exemptions	$60

A new line has been added to the 2006 income tax return to enter the amount of your standard or long-form refund. Use line 71 on form 1040; line 42 on form 1040EZ, and line 9 on form 1040EZ to claim the refund.

The long-form approach requires your telephone bills from 2/28/03 through 8/1/06. Using Form 8913, you must itemize each federal long-distance tax on your phone bill by quarters. It is necessary to compute tax on both land line and cell phones.

The standard refund amount is an average based on an analysis by the IRS of telephone bills by household size. It's possible the long-form computation will yield a larger refund but it requires dealing with the complexities of telephone bills and the IRS tax form.

Those people who are not required to file a return should use form 140EX-T to claim only the telephone tax refund.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, Dec. 22, 2006, at approximately 9 a.m., numerous patrol and detective units were dispatched to the Citizens Bank at 371 Hancock St. for a bank robbery call.

As the units responded, the Dispatcher described the suspect as a white male, 50-55 years old with a full beard, wearing a jean jacket. The suspect was last seen fleeing out the rear door of the bank, through the parking lot and onto Holmes Street.

Sgt. James McNeil, Officers Kristen Bowes and Kent Yee went directly to Holmes Street while Officer Lauren Lambert secured the crime scene at the bank. Officer Lambert compiled information from multiple witnesses/employees and determined that the suspect did not have a beard, which she passed on to responding officers. She then interviewed the bank teller and learned the suspect gave her a handwritten note stating, "this is a stick up. Don't do anything crazy. I have a bomb in this bag. 100, 50, 20. I'm sorry I had to do this to you, but I need the money."

The teller said she handed him the money and he fled out the rear door.

Officer Lambert then received a telephone call from Officer Chuck Landry, who is familiar with the area and many of the residents. He told her that once he heard that the suspect was clean-shaven, he believed the suspect lived in a second floor apartment on Holmes Street, giving her the exact number. For safety purposes, he also told Officer Lambert that a female and a young child lived on the first floor.

Lt. John Steele arrived on scene and learned officers had surrounded the same two-family home because a witness had seen a man run behind the building. Based on the information provided by Officer Landry and Officer Yee's knowledge of the neighborhood, the second-floor apartment of the suspect was checked but unoccupied. Officer Yee found a framed photo of a man next to a bed, which matched the description given of the suspect.

The focus of concern now was on the first-floor apartment where the mother and young child lived, especially since there was strong reason to believe the suspect lived in the same building, but different apartment.

Numerous attempts were made to reach the first floor tenants by telephone and knocking but there was no response. Concerns grew when neighbors were adamant the family was at home, the family car was in the driveway and the baby stroller was still inside the hall. Detective Paul Pieper grabbed a lawn chair, stood on it, and peeked inside the apartment.

He spotted the suspect in the apartment and ordered him at gunpoint to lie flat on the ground, which he did

Each week in The Quincy Sun, the "Quincy Police Hot Spots" page provides readers with numbers to call to report crimes. The telephone number for the "Drug Hot-Line" is 617-328-4527. You will not be required to provide identification or address, although it would be helpful.

Anonymous information via a letter or by leaving a message does not provide an opportunity for the detectives to ask questions to gain further knowledge. Even without identifying yourself, your information can be corroborated (validated) in many ways, such as surveillance, which was used in this particular case.

Some people are reluctant to report suspicious activity for fear of having to testify or of retaliation, but by calling the hot-line with detailed information, the Drug Unit will be working with you to eradicate drug users in your community.

initially, but then fled to the rear door of the apartment.

Detective Pieper radioed this to the other officers. Lt. Steele, Sgt. McNeil and Officer Bowes kicked in the front door of the apartment and entered quickly, concerned the suspect may attempt to harm possible occupants. Meanwhile, Detective Mike Ward, Officers John Leuchte, Mark Millane and Kent Yee, with guns drawn approached from the rear with the intent of forcing the door, but were met by the suspect attempting to flee. The officers grabbed the suspect and wrestled him into custody.

A check of the apartment showed there was no one else there. However, $1200 was found in a bag in the suspect's possession. Lt. Steele asked the suspect where the family was and he said they were in Jamaica and that he went into the open apartment to hide. The suspect was taken outside to the street.

Detective Sgt. Richard Tapper arrived on scene with the bank teller and she identified the suspect. He then brought the bank manager to the scene and she too identified the man as the bank robber. The suspect, a 53-year-old Quincy resident, was transported to the station, where Detectives John MacIsaac and Dennis Maloney interrogated him after he waived his Miranda rights. The suspect admitted to the bank robbery as well as to the attempted robbery of a video store the night before.

The detectives seized $700 from the suspect during booking, which was the amount taken from the bank. The detectives also received consent from the suspect to search his apartment for the cane he used as a fake shotgun during the video store robbery. The cane was taken as evidence.

The suspect said he has a drug problem and needed the money to support his habit. He added he did not have a bomb and didn't want anyone to get hurt. The suspect has been charged with armed robbery, to wit a bomb breaking and entering in the daytime with intent to commit a felony, false report of a firearm, attempting to commit a crime (video store with sawed-off shotgun, but really a cane).

In cases such as these, split-second decision making by officers from all ranks are being made in the best interests of safety to the public and secondarily, to the officers' safety. The decisions are often made in reaction to what the suspect "just did."

The suspect's actions are not predictable and the officers on scene have to respond quickly to protect the innocent. These decisions are easily criticized when something goes wrong, but the officers are only acting on the available information and choices they have at that moment.

These officers charged in, not knowing what was on the other side of the door waiting for them, to save a family they had reason to believe was in there. They also knew that the suspect claimed to have a bomb and are often armed when committing a bank robbery. There are few people who can do a job like this.

Nice work!

Salvation Army Thanks Kettle Volunteers, Donors

I want to take the opportunity, on behalf of the Salvation Army and those we serve, to express deep gratitude for the generous support of donors from greater Quincy.

Once again our faithful supporters came through in our Christmas fund raising. Our kettles had another successful season. This enabled the Salvation Army to assist 416 families for Christmas in 2006.

We also appreciate the 368 volunteers who gave nearly 1000 hours of volunteer service during the holiday season. Our volunteers and our donors truly are the army behind the Salvation Army. May we continue to work together to improve the lives of the less fortunate in Quincy.

Cost-Effective Energy Efficiency Tips

(NAPS) - As the temperature drops, you shouldn't have to lose sleep over home-heating bills going up. By following a few simple tips, you can help keep those costs under control, while still feeling cozy and comfortable.

Experts suggest the following:

- Check your windows and doors for leaks, sealing any you find. Hundreds of dollars a year can fly out through even a tiny gap.

- Make sure your home is thoroughly insulated, including often-overlooked areas such as switch plates.

- Use energy-saving light bulbs.

- Keep air registers, baseboard heaters and radiators clean and make sure they are not blocked by anything. In addition to saving you money, this can help lower the risk of fire.

- Turn your water heater down to 120 degrees. That should be hot enough for most applications, and it's safer for small children and the elderly.

- Turn down your thermostat and use a heated blanket or mattress pad to warm the bed prior to settling down for sleep at night. With the soothing heat of a heated blanket or mattress pad, consumers can turn down their thermostats considerably and still stay warm while saving money.

- Scatter warming throws around the house. These are perfect cuddling couch companions while watching TV or reading.

- Keep your appliances up to date. Kitchen appliances such as refrigerators, stoves and dishwashers are continually being improved; every few years, investigate your options and see if you can save money by upgrading.

Stain, Stain Go Away

Q. I have two questions. First, how do I clean red candle wax from a beige carpet? Second, how do I clean the wall paint from a hardwood floor? Thanks! — Mimi S., Santa Fe, N.M.

A. For your first question, grab a butter knife or small putty knife and carefully scrape away as much of the excess wax from the carpet as possible. Be careful not to dislodge or tear the carpet fibers; if a particular glob of wax is too difficult, just leave it for now.

Next, plug in a clothes iron and turn it to its LOWEST setting. This is extremely important — nylon carpet fibers will melt if the temperature is too high, making the stain many times worse (and requiring replacement of that piece of carpet). In fact, you may want to test the iron on a hard-to-see part of the carpet first.

Take two or three paper towels and layer them on top of the candle-wax stain. Gently iron over the towels (turn off the steam setting), checking the stain after each pass. Replace the towels as needed and keep ironing. The warmth should melt the candle wax, and the towels should soak it up. You may need to repeat several times, being careful not to scorch the carpet.

Now, to your second question. Latex paint can often be scraped up with a putty knife. Carefully ease the knife under the edge of the paint stain, moving in the same direction as the wood grain, and push the paint up and away. Paint that has set into the wood or that will not scrape up can be loosened by dabbing on acetone (nail polish remover) with a soft cloth, allowing that to sit for a minute, then rubbing to remove the stain. When all else fails, steel wool or sandpaper and a liberal dose of elbow grease can get out deep-set stains.

A quick note: If you are dealing with a stain on laminate, rather than hardwood, do not scrape or sand the stain, and do not use acetone or other solvents. Check with the laminate manufacturer for advice on getting the stain up.

Computer Seminar At Norfolk Registry Jan. 31

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will host an informational seminar on computer-assisted land records research at the Registry of Deeds in Dedham Wednesday, Jan. 31 from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The seminar is intended for both real estate professionals and the public. The program will include a brief presentation, written reference materials, and hands-on exercises.

There will be opportunities for both basic and advanced questions and answers.

Computer-assisted land records research is available both at the Registry and on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"These services have proven valuable tools for our customers," O'Donnell stated, "and we hope that this seminar will be helpful and informative."

There is no charge for the seminar, but persons planning to attend are asked to register by phone (781-461-6116). Include name, address and a daytime phone number when registering.

The Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry receives and records hundreds of thousands of documents each year and is a basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information.

Winter Weather Prompts Increase In Life-Threatening Risks

NFPA Warns Of CO Dangers, Urges Caution

Hundreds of people die from carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning each year and it remains a serious threat no matter the season, but activities that typically increase with the onset of winter weather conditions pose an even greater risk.

Recent tragic events throughout the country have served as sad reminders that carbon monoxide poisoning can result in death when it reaches unsafe levels.

The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) urges the public to be aware of the dangers of carbon monoxide and to take measures to ensure safe practices.

Many deaths caused by carbon monoxide poisoning could have been prevented by installing carbon monoxide alarms in the home to alert residents of its lethal levels before it is too late.

Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odorless gas that enters the body undetected as a person breathes. The gas is produced by burning wood, coal, charcoal, natural gas, gasoline, propane, oil, methane, and other common fuels. It is also produced by automobiles and other gasoline or diesel engines.

When power outages occur, people naturally look for other ways to see and keep warm. As they look for alternatives for electricity and home heating, they should be aware that the risk of carbon monoxide poisoning is sometimes elevated with supplemental equipment that is often used.

"Portable generators are often used to meet electricity and heating needs in emergency situations. Homeowners are sometimes unaware of the risks associated with them like electric shock, electrocution and the most common risk, carbon monoxide poisoning," said Mark W. Earley, P.E., assistant vice president/chief electrical engineer. "Risks associated with portable generators and many alternative sources for electricity and heat are minimized when owners are educated about the potential dangers and equipment is used properly."

Carbon monoxide poisoning can be confused with flu symptoms, food poisoning and other illnesses. Some symptoms include shortness of breath, nausea, dizziness, light headedness or headaches.

For more information on carbon monoxide poisoning, view Fact Sheets on NFPA's Web site at <http://www.nfpa.org> under Research and Reports. NFPA suggests the following safety tips to avoid the dangers of carbon monoxide.

- Install carbon monoxide (CO) alarms (listed by an independent testing laboratory) inside your home to provide early warning of accumulating CO. CO alarms should be installed in a central location outside each separate sleeping area. If bedrooms are spaced apart, each area will need a CO alarm.

- Test CO alarms at least once a month and replace alarms according to the manufacturer's instructions.

- CO alarms are not substitutes for smoke alarms. Know the difference between the sound of smoke alarms and CO alarms.

- Have fuel-burning heating equipment (fireplaces, furnaces, water heaters, wood and coal stoves, space or portable heaters) and chimneys inspected by a professional every year before cold weather sets in.

- When using a fireplace, open the flue for adequate ventilation.

- Never use your oven or grill to heat your home.

- When buying an existing home, have a qualified technician evaluate the integrity of the heating and cooking systems, as well as the sealed spaces between the garage and house.

- If you need to warm a vehicle, remove it from the garage immediately after starting it. Do not run a fueled engine or motor indoors, even if garage doors are open. Make sure the exhaust pipe of a running vehicle is not covered with snow.

- During and after a snowstorm, make sure vents for the dryer, furnace, stove, and fireplace are clear of snow build-up.

NFPA, publisher of the National Electrical Code® (NEC®), recommends the following tips for proper use of portable generators.

- Generators should be operated in well ventilated locations outdoors away from all doors, windows and vent openings.

- The generator should be located so that exhaust fumes cannot enter the home through windows, doors or other building openings.

- Do not refuel the generator while it is running. Turn the generator off and let it cool down before refueling.

- Never store fuel for your generator in your home. Gasoline and other flammable liquids should be stored outside of living areas in properly-labeled safety containers. They should be stored away from any fuel-burning appliance such as a gas hot water heater.

- Plug appliances directly into the generator or use a heavy duty outdoor-rated extension cord. Make sure the cord is free of cuts or tears and that the plug has all three prongs, especially a grounding pin. Do not try to power the house wiring by plugging the generator into a wall outlet.

• If you must connect the generator to the house wiring to power appliances, have a qualified electrician install a properly rated transfer switch in accordance with the NEC and all applicable state and local electrical codes.

NFPA has been a worldwide leader in providing fire, electrical, building, and life safety to the public since 1896. The mission of the international nonprofit organization is to reduce the worldwide burden of fire and other hazards on the quality of life by providing and advocating consensus codes and standards, research, training, and education. Visit NFPA's Web site at <http://www.nfpa.org>.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Group Exercise Class Can Beat Boredom

For many people, exercising alone is difficult and sometimes just flat out boring. Motivating yourself to complete a workout can be a challenge. One solution is to participate in group exercise classes. Not only will you have other people to exercise with, there also will be a certified instructor available to safely motivate you along the way.

Group exercise has come a long way since the early days of leg warmers and high- and low-impact aerobics. There are classes today on land and in water, with weights and boxing gloves. The variety is endless, allowing you to get in shape and have fun in the process.

Below are a sample of fun and innovative group exercise classes that can help you reach your fitness goals.

Kickboxing or Boxing (Simulated): Martial arts-inspired kicks, punches (no contact, of course) and movements are sure to increase your heart rate and are great for strengthening your core muscles. You can burn off a little stress in the process, too.

Yoga and Pilates: Although these two forms of exercises are different, they have in common strengthening, lengthening and stabilizing your muscles. Both focus on balance and strong and centered core muscles (abdominals and back).

Group Resistance Training: These classes use physical balls, resistance balls, dumbbells, steps and other fitness equipment to tone, sculpt and define your muscles.

Salsa/Hip-Hop/Swing Dance Classes: Dance is a great form of exercise, and many facilities are offering versions of these popular dances in a group exercise setting. Normally no previous experience is required, just a desire to have fun and burn some calories.

Deep Water Aquatics: This class uses the deep end of the swimming pool to provide non-impact movements to strengthen your total body. With the use of a flotation belt (so you don't have to tread water), this form of exercise is great for anyone, but especially if you are unable to do certain exercises on land due to any medical conditions.

Group Cycling: Often called "Spinning," this class uses special stationary bicycles for "rides" that condition you for endurance, speed, strength and a combination of all three.

The names of these classes may be slightly different than listed above, but you can ask for classes that have the same components. Be sure to find a group exercise instructor who is certified to teach the class you are attending. The great thing about group exercise is that you can go at your own pace and still have someone there to instruct you on technique and form, and who will be there to keep you motivated.

If you have access to a fitness facility that offers group exercise classes, check it out. This may be the breakthrough to the better fitness level you've been waiting for.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfw@hearstac.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Quincy High School Chemistry Teacher, Dr. Pakamas Tongcharoensirikul had her recent study on the hormonal effects on breast cancer published in the January issue of The Journal of Medicinal Chemistry.

Dr. Tongcharoensirikul is a post doctoral candidate at Northeastern University. She received her bachelors degree in Thailand and received her masters and doctoral degrees at Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

As a doctoral student at WPI, she was honored as "Teaching Assistant of the Year".

DR. PAKAMAS
TONGCHAROENSIRIKUL

Dr. Tongcharoensirikul began teaching chemistry at Quincy High School this past fall. She brings a high level of enthusiasm to the science department, said Department Chairman Peter Swanson.

"She approaches her students in a most nurturing way. She has worked very hard developing her expertise in her subject area and knows how to manipulate the subject so that all of her students are able to learn and enjoy chemistry."

Principal Frank Santoro said he has been impressed with her involvement within the entire school community.

"Dr. Tongcharoensirikul makes a point to attend many of her students' athletic events and other school functions. I am very impressed with her extraordinary ability to relate to her students. She is making a daily impact on their lives."

Dr. Tongcharoensirikul decided to work in Quincy because she felt she wanted to make a commitment to the young adults of her own community. She says she enjoys meeting students and parents' of students as she does her shopping locally.

"Quincy is a great place to live and I enjoy working at Quincy High School. I am very excited about having my work published and just as excited to share my research with the students that I teach." Her expectations are that students will have great careers in whatever they pursue.

Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates Presents Ebert Award Of Distinction

Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates in Quincy recently awarded its Robert H. Ebert Award of Distinction to Ann Butler, NP, Lisa Kingsbury, India Henshaw, and Deborah Steeves at a ceremony held at the Westin Copley Place.

The award honors the memory of Robert H. Ebert, MD, who was widely recognized as a pioneer in managed health care.

The Robert H. Ebert Award of Distinction acknowledges Harvard Vanguard employees who stand out as role models and whose contributions reflect extraordinary initiative and effort within and beyond their specific roles in a way that makes a critical difference.

Ann Butler, NP, joined Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates in 1974 and works in the internal medicine department at both the Peabody and Peabody-Lynnfield Medical Associates sites. She was nominated for the Robert H. Ebert Award of Distinction by her fellow colleagues for her "ability to always show compassion, take on extra roles when needed, and for consistently going above and beyond what is asked of her".

Lisa Kingsbury works as a systems analyst at Harvard Vanguard's Quincy site and was nominated for her tireless efforts to implement and maintain Harvard Vanguard's electronic medical record system and her participation in a key upgrade of the system. Her nomination described, "Lisa's knowledge and dependability make her an exemplary employee". Lisa is a resident of Medway.

India Henshaw is a medical secretary in the behavioral health department at Harvard Vanguard's West Roxbury site. She was nominated by her fellow co-workers for continually providing exceptional service to both patients and staff and ensuring that the clinical operations in the behavioral health department run seamlessly.

Deborah Steeves has worked in the obstetrics/gynecology department at Harvard Vanguard's Watertown site for eighteen years. She was nominated for providing a consistent level of caring and professionalism for patients as well as her colleagues.

Steeves was also recognized for displaying exemplary leadership and dedication. She is a resident of Watertown.

About Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates is a multi-specialty physician practice with many convenient locations in eastern Massachusetts. For more information, visit www.harvardvanguard.org.

Dry Mouth Can Be Managed

(NAPS) Did you know that the human mouth produces an average of two to four pints of saliva each day? Yet from time to time, anyone can feel as if his or her mouth is completely dry. You probably know the feeling: that parched, sticky, cotton-mouth sensation you may get when you're nervous or after you speak for a long time.

For millions of people, however, this feeling occurs every day as a result of a condition called dry mouth, or Xerostomia. Reports indicate that approximately one in four adults suffer from dry mouth and that figure increases to 40 percent in populations over the age of 55.

"Imagine having problems with persistent bad breath, speaking, swallowing and even tasting your food," said Harold Crossley, DDS, Ph.D., who suffers from dry mouth. "Some chronic sufferers may have a raw feeling that's similar to what you might experience after you burn the roof of your mouth with hot foods."

Beyond physical discomfort, the condition can affect the quality of life. Chronic sufferers worry about treating their symptoms to avoid awkward moments in social situations and may even have problems tasting their food.

The most common cause of dry mouth is medication use. More than 400 common medications can cause dry mouth. The condition can be a side effect of cancer treatments and diseases such as diabetes, Alzheimer's, Sjogren's syndrome, hypertension, Parkinson's disease and stroke.

"Saliva plays a significant role in oral hygiene by helping the mouth fight infection, protecting teeth from decay, and aiding in food and speech-related functions," said Dr. Crossley. "Many people may not be aware that there are effective ways to manage their dry mouth symptoms."

Until recently, those with dry mouth had to sip water or suck on candy in hopes of finding relief. They can now use a new over-the-counter treatment: Oasis Moisturizing Mouthwash and Mouth Spray, from the makers of Sensodyne. It uses patent-pending Tri-Hydra Technology to coat and moisturize the mouth, lock in moisture and protect the mouth for up to two hours.

"With Oasis, sufferers can avoid the inconvenience of carrying around packages of candy or bulky bottles of water to manage dry mouth," said Dr. Crossley. "Oasis was developed specifically to help chronic sufferers but can also be helpful for those who experience dry mouth when they're nervous or those who often speak for a long time."

Dry mouth sufferers interested in trying Oasis can call (800) DRYMOUTH for a free sample and brochure. For more information, visit www.oasisdrymouth.com.

GETTING INTO A REAL SCRAPE

You may think that garlic is the culprit of your bad breath. It is true that this food is rapidly absorbed into the bloodstream. Then, the blood is carried back to the lungs, where food smells are released by the lungs and evaporate into the air, causing food odors from the mouth. However, after the odors run this course, the breath eventually returns to normal through evaporation. More problematic are the bacteria that cannot survive in oxygenated areas and therefore hide as a sort of compost at the back of the tongue. They emit a sulfur compound that causes the offending odor. This problem must be addressed with scraping the tongue, which should accompany daily brushing and flossing the teeth.

Maintaining good oral hygiene, eliminating periodontal (gum) disease and scheduling regular professional cleanings are essential to reducing bad breath. Regardless of what may be the cause, good oral hygiene is essential. If you wear dentures, be sure to remove them at night and clean them thoroughly before replacing them the next morning. To alleviate your worries and to address such conditions as bad breath, a visit to our office is in order. Please call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you will receive a professional exam to detect and address any existing or impending oral health problems. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

Impressive Red Raiders Post 7-2 Record

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raider girls basketball program has struck gold early in the season.

The Raiders currently have an impressive 7-2 overall record and a solid 3-1 record in the Atlantic Coast League, and with the dominating play of junior Rebecca Goreham (more on her later) and the eye-opening performances of sophomores Siobhan Carnell and Catherine O'Connell, head coach Doug MacFarland's squad is off and running and winning this winter.

Last Friday (1/5), North Quincy defeated Nauset High School, 62-41. Senior point guard Lauren Stille led all scorers with 17 points and Goreham finished the game with 16 points, 17 rebounds and seven assists.

"The whole team is playing great," MacFarland said. "The team played awesome defense against Nauset and the final result reflects that."

North Quincy, whose only league loss was a three point defeat to Falmouth High School (12/22), entered the Nauset game on a high. Three days earlier, the Red Raiders traveled to Marshfield High School to take on the Rams in an important early season ACL contest and won a close game. Carnell, who is averaging 12 points per game in her first year at the varsity level, finished the game with a career high 25 points. Sophomore Catherine O'Connell had ten points for North Quincy in the win, but the star of the game was Rebecca Goreham.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

Goreham, who has been a force for the Red Raiders since becoming a starter as a freshman, eclipsed the previous North Quincy record of twenty rebounds in a game by pulling down twenty-three boards against Marshfield. Goreham also added nine points in the win.

"This was a tough game for us being that it was a league game and it was against Marshfield," MacFarland said. "Carnell was huge for us and for her to be able to come to the varsity level and do what she has been doing is real big for the team. Also, O'Connell (who had missed the three previous games with an injury) came back and provided us with some points, but Rebecca was the story."

Goreham came close to breaking the school record for rebounds in a game earlier in the season when she grabbed 18 boards against Malden High School (12/13), but her monster performance against Marshfield puts her in a class of her own.

Unlike previous years, when opposing defenses could double or triple team Goreham and limit the number of times she touches the ball in a game, this year's team is more rounded. Stille, who continues to provide senior leadership at the point guard position, has played well all season, as has fellow seniors Meagan Therrien, Danielle Kelly, Shannon Malone and Caroline Cunningham, but the key thus far for the Raiders has been the play of Goreham and Carnell.

"I am very happy with our 7-2 record and I would have been happy with a 6-4 record," MacFarland said. "We have shown that we can play with anyone. Having Carnell and O'Connell playing as well as they are and scoring points, it takes some of the pressure away from Rebecca. Not having her (Goreham) be the only scorer and threat has been good for the whole team because it forces other teams to play a more honest defense."

The Red Raiders played Plymouth North last night (12/9), and before the game Rebecca Goreham was honored at half-court, not for her record breaking rebound performance against Nauset, but because she broke the 20 year school rebound record. The ceremony was a surprise because Goreham did not know that she had broken the record.

"I wanted her to get the rebound record at home against Plymouth North, but the 22 point lead that we had against Nauset was suddenly down to 12 points," MacFarland said. "I needed to get her back in there, but I didn't tell her about the rebound record. She will be surprised with the ceremony."

Presidents Rebound With 2 League Wins

The city of Quincy is quickly becoming the hotbed of high school basketball dominance. The Quincy and North Quincy basketball programs, both boys and girls, are rolling through the competitive Atlantic Coast League North Division and all four teams are making a case to be called the best team on the South Shore.

One of these programs is the Quincy girls basketball team which has rebounded from a 2-3 start to their season with two consecutive league wins over Plymouth North and Plymouth South. The Presidents are now 3-0 in the ACL and 4-3 overall.

On Jan. 2, Quincy dispatched of Plymouth North in convincing fashion, 53-33. The Presidents took a 34-18 lead at the break and never looked back. Freshman Leslie Campbell had a breakout game with her first career double-double (14 pts. and 10 rebounds) and junior Marybeth Torpey added eight points and five blocks. Senior Brigid Kyle came up big with 10 points and junior Meagan Tobin finished the game with nine points.

"The girls proved to the Eagles of Plymouth North that there is indeed another team in the ACL North to be reckoned with," head coach Jeff Bretsch said. "Off the bench the team got an impressive defensive effort from Kathryn Carella and Hilary Mills scored a hoop for the third consecutive game. This was a big win for us against an up-and-coming Plymouth team."

The Presidents completed the Plymouth sweep with a 56-37 win over Plymouth South on Jan. 5. In winning their third straight game, Quincy never trailed, taking an early lead and maintaining it throughout. Campbell, who is quickly becoming one of the top freshmen in the ACL, scored 14 points in the first half and finished the game with a career high 18 points.

"We cruised to a 34-21 lead at half-time, but the stubborn Panthers refused to give in until we went on a 10-0 run early in the second half," Bretsch said. "The game tonight proved to be a breakout game for junior center Liz Bock. Liz scored eight points and snagged a season-high 13 rebounds. It was a good win and we are now a perfect 3-0 in league play."

Also playing well for Quincy was Tobin (nine points) and Carella (five points).

Quincy takes its perfect league record on the road the next three games. The Presidents played Whitman-Hanson last night (1/9) and next travel to Dennis-Yarmouth on Friday and then have to make the trip to the Cape once again next Monday to play Sandwich High School.

THIS SHOULD SPARK SOME INTEREST

During cold and dry climate conditions, the stage is potentially set for static electricity-related incidents at retail gasoline outlets. This situation may occur when there is a buildup of static electricity as a result of re-entering the vehicle during refueling, particularly when the air is cold and dry. If the driver returns to the gasoline pump after re-exiting the vehicle to complete fueling, the static may discharge at the fill point to cause a flash fire or a sustained fire with gasoline vapors. To guard against this possibility, vehicle owners are urged to resist the temptation to get back into their vehicles while fueling in cold, dry weather. Staying outside the vehicle greatly reduces the likelihood of static electricity buildup.

Although it is a rare occurrence, it is always best to be safe. Please use caution next time you fill up at the pump. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, your safety is our number one concern. Six Youngsters Win Elks Free Throw Contest

Six Quincy youngsters have taken the first step on the road to the National Championship in the Elks "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw contest sponsored by the Quincy Lodge of Elks 943 and supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department. The champions were crowned at the City Championship in three age categories.

The champions are Garrett Reynolds and Kayleen Lenihan in the 8-9 age group, Colin Evans and Joanne Ruan in the 10-11 age group and Ryan Evans and Taylor McKay in the 12-13 age group. They all advanced to the District Championship on Jan. 13 in Marshfield, MA.

Boys and girls all over America are involved in the first level of the shoot-off, which consists of shooting 25 free throws, with the best shooters advancing. The Quincy Recreation Department conducts the event in cooperation with the Quincy Lodge of Elks 943.

"For more than 30 years the Quincy Lodge of Elks has committed its money and more importantly its time to ensuring that the youth of Quincy have the benefits of this fine program. I want to thank the Lodge and the Exalted Ruler, Lorraine D. Coriveau, on behalf of the participants," stated Recreation Director Barry J. Welch.

The Elks provided trophies to all the champions and all participants in the City Championship. Ed Miller, retired Quincy Public Schools Athletic Director, is the Hoop Shoot chairman and oversaw the activities of the championship event. Mr. Robert Evans, vice-chairman of the Parks and Recreation board, assisted Welch in presenting the trophies. Over 250 youngsters took part in the contest which started at local neighborhood gyms.

The runner-ups in each age group were Darius Norris and Molly Minton in the 8-9 age group, Kyle Richardson and Jasala Laracuente in the 10-11 age group and Peter Campbell and Julie Ross in the 12-13 age group. Third place trophies went to Nolan Flynn and Sydney MacPherson in the 8-9 age group, Tim Keenan and Jane Minton in the 10-11 age group and Andy Chen and Ashley Saunders in the 12-13 age group.

Other Center Champions in the Elks National Free Throw contest were: boys age 8-9: Quinlan Evans, Tyler Sheldon, David Tran, Dayvon Robinson, Joseph Dwyer, Paul Forde and Liam McCarthy. Girls age 8-9: Laqueen Arias, Alexandria Nablam, Mary Elizabeth Duggan and Kate McCormack. Boys age 10-11: Andrew Schaaf, Jackson Lan, Matt Zolowski, Steve Ross, Edward Paulino, Justin Commisky, Anthony Green, Kenny Kelly, Mike O'Donnell and Michael Bina. Girls age 10-11: Madeline Kamb, Nkechi Kamalu, Leah Prasinos, Breanne Norris, Stacy Gallagher, Kelly McDonald, Stephanie Paulino, Courtney Ryan and Michelle Lee. Boys age 12-13: Raymond Wong, Bobby Lawless, Joe Alibrandi, Emmitt Harrow, Danny Hennessey, Jerry Liu, Chris Keenan and Bobby Kozlowski. Girls age 12-13: Colleen Cox.

Welch also thanks and commends the Recreation Leaders who supervised the Center Championship events at the thirteen school locations. "These leaders are enthusiastic in supporting this program and they encourage each participant to enjoy the 'Hoop Shoot' experience."

The National Championship will be held at the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, MA.

North Sends Message, Defeats Marshfield

By SEAN BRENNAN

It may be way too early in the season to crown the North Quincy Red Raider hockey team as champions of anything, but the team played in and won what can best be called a statement game last week against a very talented Marshfield High School team. Last season the Rams were the South Sectional champions, and the Red Raiders missed the postseason for the first time in eight years, so this win was big.

The Red Raiders stormed out to a 4-1 third period lead behind two goals from sophomore sensation Brandon Gilmore, one goal from junior Zac Deegan and a goal from senior captain Jimmy Fitzpatrick.

"This win helped cap off a great week for the team," head coach Bob Doyle said. "Marshfield was the defending champs and we played so well after coming off a bad game against Archbishop Williams the previous game."

North Quincy almost gave the game away in the third period with a slew of penalties and missed opportunities. Marshfield took full advantage of the Raiders' miscues by scoring three times in the third, including the tying goal on the power play with just 55 seconds left in regulation.

"We played well, but once again our lack of discipline almost cost us the game," Doyle said. "Too many costly penalties almost cost us, but when it came down to it we made enough plays to earn the win."

The biggest play of the game came courtesy of the stick blade of Fitzpatrick. After Marshfield tied the score at 4-4, North Quincy continued to attack and it paid off when Fitzpatrick skated in on a breakaway with 11 seconds left in the game and netted the game-winner. The goal was the second of the game for the senior captain.

"That was a statement game," Doyle said. "My first line was strong, my goaltender was strong and it really was a big win for the team."

Senior defenseman Ken Patey (two assists) and Joe Canavan (one assist) played a strong game on the backline and junior forward Joe Morris chipped in with an assist. Senior goaltender Max Adams withstood the Rams' onslaught and earned the win between the pipes.

North Quincy finished off their week with another ACL victory over Nauset High School, 5-2. Behind some solid play from sophomore Matt Furey (one goal) and senior Chris Burke (one assist), the Raiders took an early 2-0 lead after one period. Nauset would tie the score at 2-2 with six minutes left in the game, but once again the Raiders dug deep and scored three goals in the final minutes of play to earn the victory.

"I didn't call for a timeout after they tied the score at two," Doyle said. "I knew that we had the better team and I just let the kids play it out. To their credit they stayed focused and pulled out the win."

Senior captain Nash Winters finished with two goals and senior forward Josh McKeon also scored for North.

"I was happy for McKeon," Doyle said. "He had several chances in the game, and he kept plugging away and finally scored. He was a key part of the win."

North Quincy, whose record now stands at 3-2 overall and 3-1 in the Atlantic Coast League, has impressed Doyle with their play in the early part of the year, and with three solid lines and good goaltending the Raiders are primed to go far this year.

"The team is coming around and coming together as a group," Doyle said. "We have a tough stretch of league road games, but with our top three lines playing as well as they are and our goaltending standing on its head, we are in good shape moving forward."

After playing at home today (1/10) versus Plymouth North, the Raiders travel to Sandwich on Saturday before returning to the Quincy Youth Arena to take on Scituate High School at 3 p.m. Monday.

Quincy Challenging For League Supremacy

The Quincy Presidents are entering the meat of their 2007 schedule, and for the moment coach Bob Sylvia's young team is in the mix for Atlantic Coast League supremacy. Quincy's record stands at 4-0-1, but Sylvia knows that his team has the ability to get much better.

"We are not close to being where we can be," Sylvia said. "Our defense has been stout (only 76 shots allowed in 5 games), our goaltending, with Bo Craig and Jeff Giordani, has been consistent, and we have had a good scoring balance."

The Presidents earned themselves a quality league win last Wednesday (1/3) on the road against Plymouth North. Quincy, behind goals from Ted Walsh (1), Andrew Bythrow (1) and Mark Gibbody (2), upped their league record to 2-0-1 with a 4-1 victory.

"It was a good game for us because anytime you can win against a Plymouth team it is a plus," Sylvia said. "There is a lot of chaos whenever you play down in Plymouth, but the redline play of Bythrow, Kevin Shea and Zach McCaul was solid. Bythrow played his best game of the season and his goal was big."

The Presidents, who play six of their next seven games against ACL teams, may not be where they want to be, but in a league that is all about competitive balance, Quincy is headed in the right direction.

"This league is so balanced from top to bottom," Sylvia said. "This time of year little things come into play. Factors like injuries, sicknesses and the upcoming eligibility of certain players due to grades closing, will decide how teams perform."

In the ACL, any team can win or lose on any given day. If a team takes us for granted we can beat them, and if we take a team for granted we could lose. But at the moment, North Quincy and Falmouth are the two teams playing the best."

Before Quincy faces-off against their cross-town rivals on Jan. 27, the team will play four home games and two roads tilts. The Presidents travel to Whitman-Hanson (today) before playing four home games against Dennis-Yarmouth (1/13), Blue Hills (1/15 at 11 a.m.), Sandwich (1/17) and Falmouth (1/20).

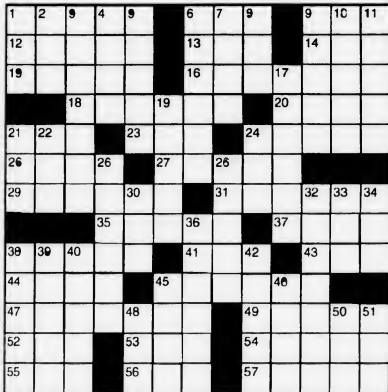

"We may not be where I want us to be, but we still have yet to lose," Sylvia said. "The next couple of weeks will determine how far this team can go."

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A hectic period begins to wind down. Take time to draw some deep breaths and relax before getting into your next project. A long-absent family member makes contact.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to move forward with a new challenge that suddenly dropped in your lap. But you'd be wise to take this one step at a time to allow new developments to come through.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're almost ready to make a commitment. A lingering doubt or two, however, should be resolved before you move ahead. An associate could provide important answers.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Caution is still the watchword as you move closer toward a decision about a new situation. If you act too hastily, you might miss some vital warning signs. Go slowly and stay alert.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your new goal looks promising, and your golden touch does much to enhance its prospects for success. In your private life, Cupid does his best to make your new relationship special.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That impatient side of yours is looking to goad you into moving before you're ready to take that big step. Stay calm and cool. Let things fall into place before you act.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A legal matter you hoped could finally be settled could be a pesky problem for a while, until all the parties agree to stop disagreeing with each other. Be patient.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Partnerships — personal or professional — which began before the new year take on new importance. They also reveal some previously hidden risks. So be warned.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your associates are firmly on your side, and that persistent problem that has caused you to delay some activities should soon be resolved to your satisfaction.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Favorable changes continue to dominate, and you should be responding positively as they emerge. Someone wants to become more involved in what you're doing.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A friend wants to share a secret that could answer some questions you've wondered about for a long time. Meanwhile, travel aspects continue to be strong.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Stay on your new course despite so-called well-meaning efforts to discourage you. Rely on your deep sense of self-awareness to guide you to do what's right for you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have the capacity to meet challenges that others might find overwhelming, and turn them into successful ventures.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Dr. Samuel Johnson's injunction "Keep your friendships in repair" should be applied to books as well as to persons. Books are friends at all times if we treat them well; we can enjoy their companionship when human friends have passed beyond our reach or have grown out of us. In every phase of life they are loyal friends, and, if they show signs of wear, that only proves how much we have cared for them. They repay us by linking youth with middle age and refreshing us in our later years as they inspired us in our earlier years. Unlike friends who never answer letters, our books always speak when we open them.

Books are keys to wisdom's treasure.

Books are gates to lands of pleasure.

Books are paths that upward lead.

Books are friends. Come let us read.*

INVITATION TO BID

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS

Department of Public Works

INVITATION TO BID

The Purchasing Department for the City of Quincy, Massachusetts will receive sealed bids for 2007 Water Main Replacement Project until 11:00 AM local time January 24, 2007, in the offices of the Purchasing Agent, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, Massachusetts 02169, at which time and place all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The scope of work includes construction of approximately 3,200 linear feet of 16-inch, 3,700 linear feet of 12-inch and 5,900 linear feet of 6- and 8-inch ductile iron water main, transfer of water services, replacement of all non-copper water services in the street, and construction of hydrant assemblies and appurtenances. Most of the existing water main will be removed and replaced with the new water main, thus requiring the installation of temporary water service during construction. Approximately 1,300 linear feet of the 16-inch water main will be installed within Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) owned right-of-way of Willard Street. Approximately 550 linear feet of the 16-inch water main will be installed within Massachusetts Highway Department (MHD) owned right-of-way of Willard Street.

All work under this contract shall be completed within two hundred ten days (210) calendar days from issuing the Notice to Proceed. The 210 days from the Notice to Proceed excludes winter shutdown, between November 15, 2006 and April 15, 2007.

A refundable deposit of $50.00 in cash or check payable to the City of Quincy, shall be required for each set of Contract Documents. Bidders requesting Contract Documents by mail shall also include an additional non-refundable mail fee of $20.00 in cash or check payable to the City of Quincy. The Contract Documents may be obtained during the business hours of 8:30 AM to 4:30 PM at the Purchasing Department, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169 after Monday, January 1, 2007.

Each bid shall be accompanied by a bid security in the amount of five percent (5%) of the total value of the bid in the form of bid bond or certified/treasurer's check. The selected contractor shall furnish a performance bond and payment bond in the amount of 100% of the contract price.

The bidding and award of this contract shall be in full compliance with Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 30, Section 39M, as last revised. All Federal, State and City of Quincy regulations in relation to Minority Business Enterprise, Women's Business Enterprise, Minority Work Force, Equal Employment Opportunity, Employment of Quincy Residents and Prevailing Wage Rates shall apply. The City reserves the right to waive any informality or to reject any or all bids when such an action is deemed in the best interests of the City. Non-responsive and/or unbalanced bids may be rejected.

Kai Lau, part owner of the Quincy Fair Mall property, said he was all for the revitalization plan but expressed concerns that the Asian community had difficulty understanding such terms as "eminent domain" and "land-taking."

"Give us some idea how the eminent domain process works," he said. "We don't know how the process starts until the appraiser comes down. We don't understand how the compensation is worked out."

Annie Johnson, the community activist and founder of the Farmers' Market in Quincy Center, resorted to quoting Oliver Wendell Holmes to express her approval of the plan.

"The greatest thing in the world is not so much where you stand but what direction you are moving," she told the Council hearing. "You are moving in the right direction."

The New Look

THIS 50-FOOT flagpole was erected at the Fore River traffic rotary Tuesday by the City Park Department, replacing the Granite Ball which had been there 68 years until it was moved back to City Hall last June. The flagpole has a yardarm from which the state and city flags will also fly. A Navy ship anchor is also sought to be placed at the base. The flag was raised and then lowered to half-staff in honor of President Gerald Ford.

From Buildings To Weeds

Coughlin Ordinance Aimed At Ending Neighborhood Blight

By TOM HENSHAW

The old Wollaston Foundry building, once occupied by the Pneumatic Scale Company but now abandoned for at least a decade, rankled on Kevin Coughlin for years.

He recalled an article in a 25-year-old magazine that warned:

"If a window in a building is broken and left unrepaired all the rest of the windows will soon be broken and left unrepaired."

"One unrepaired window is a sign that no one cares, so breaking more windows costs nothing."

"Unattended property becomes fair game for people out for fun or plunder."

Now that he is city councillor from Ward 3, where the battered old foundry building is located, Coughlin is finally in a position to do something about it.

KEVIN COUGHLIN

The result is the Neighborhood Property Preservation Ordinance defining blight and how to deal with it which Coughlin was scheduled to file with the Council Tuesday night.

"I started two and a half years ago," he said, "researching municipal ordinances and programs, I cherry-picked the best ideas from them."

"Polite efforts by neighbors to have blight cleaned up have been met with silence. I'm trying to get a dialogue to bring owners to the table with neighbors so they can work together."

The proposed property preservation ordinance defines blight as "any condition that is detrimental to the public health, safety or general welfare or that constitutes a public nuisance."

And "any condition of deterioration or disrepair that creates a substantial adverse impact on neighboring properties."

No-nos include, among others, the accumulation of rubbish or weeds that constitute a safety hazard or detract from the aesthetics and value of neighboring property, including grass that is more than 12 inches high.

Saturday At Mound Street Beach

You're Invited To Take The John Hancock Plunge

Attention all you hearty souls.

The John Hancock Birthday Plunge is set for Saturday at 11 a.m. at the Mound Street Beach, Quincy Point.

"You're all invited," says Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, chairman of the sponsoring Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Proceeds will go to the Interfaith Social Services. Registration fee is $10.

The event coincides with Hancock's birth Jan. 23, 1737.

The Quincy born patriot was the first signer of the Declaration of Independence and later became governor of Massachusetts.

Kelly feels Hancock doesn't get the recognition he deserves, thus the John Hancock Plunge.

He is also planning a John Hancock penmanship contest for elementary school students.

The names of those registering for the Hancock Plunge will be entered into drawings for prizes. There will be hot refreshments.

Those taking the plunge are asked to make a $10 check payable to Interfaith Social Services and send it to Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, care of Chickie Abdallah, 48 Silver St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Or bring one Saturday.

MLK Breakfast Celebration

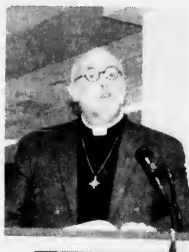

Quincy Asian Community Challenge Of King Legacy

The Rev. David Heffling, rector of St. Chrysostom's Church in Wollaston, warned that "the challenges facing Quincy in terms of its rapidly growing Asian population are exactly what Dr. King's legacy is about."

Heffling was the keynote speaker before some 150 people at the 11th annual Martin Luther King Jr. Breakfast Celebration in the cafeteria of North Quincy High School.

In spite of growing diversity, he said, "at work, in our neighborhoods and socially, we continue to interact primarily with people from our own races."

"Our 'limited' socialization and interaction patterns only exacerbate the issues of distance and mistrust."

REV. DAVID HEFFLING explains how Martin Luther King Jr.'s legacy applies in Quincy in the 21st century.

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN welcomes the MLK Jr. breakfasters to the North Quincy High cafeteria.

"A recent study by the University of Massachusetts states that the potential for change depends on the frequency of interaction among and between the peoples of various races."

"Imagine that? The amount of time you spend with people from other races does affect whether or not you are going to change your views!"

"As Dr. King said so

many years ago, 'People are not easily moved from their mental ruts or purged of their prejudiced and irrational feelings. The key word is respect.'

"Martin Luther King Jr.'s dream was not just about equal rights for all people, but of people living and working together in harmony."

The breakfast, held annually on the holiday named for the slain civil rights leader, is the largest and most visible activity of the Quincy Human Rights Commission.

Awards were presented to longtime commission members David Ezickson, the vice chairperson, and Nancy MacDonald, the secretary. Musical presentations were made by Germantown Neighborhood Center Chorus and Andrew and the Expressions, who sang spirituals and civil rights songs.

Welcoming remarks were delivered by Ann Yeomans, the moderator, Mayor William Phelan and Norfolk District Attorney William Keating.

Special guest at the celebration was the Right Rev. Gayle Elizabeth Harris, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

"For many years," said the Rev. Heffling, "the bishops of the Episcopal Church have been dealing with and continue to address the issue of racism."

"In 1994, the clergy received a pastoral letter regarding the 'sin of racism.'"

"What the bishops wrote, and which is especially pertinent to us here today . . . was that the essence of racism is 'prejudice coupled with power . . . prejudice coupled with power.'"

"It's rooted in pride and exclusivity which assumes that 'I and my kind are superior to others and therefore deserve special privileges.' Racism is pervasive. It continues to plague our common lives with corrosive effects."

"Just last month, Justice

Gutro Calls Meeting On Eventide Rezoning

City Council President Doug Gutro has called a neighborhood meeting regarding proposed rezoning for redevelopment at the William B. Rice Eventide Home, 215 Adams St.

The meeting will be held Tuesday, Jan. 23 at 7 p.m. in the gymnasium at the Bernazzani School, 701 Furnace Brook Parkway.

The Eventide Home is located in Ward 5, represented by Gutro in the City Council.

Eventide plans to raze its present Colonial style building and build one similar to it but larger.

Eventide is seeking to have the property rezoned from Residence A to Planned Unit Development.

Gutro said there have been two neighborhood meetings and three open houses at Eventide but this will be the first meeting regarding the rezoning.

Residents, he said, are concerned over the request for the PUD zoning and would like to know why it is needed.

Gutro has asked City Solicitor Monica Conyngham and Jay Duca, Director of Inspectional Services to attend the meeting and provide an overview of what the PUD zoning designation would permit and the process.

He is also asking representatives from Eventide to explain why they are seeking to change the zoning for the redevelopment project.

CRONIN'S PUBLIC HOUSE on Des Moines Road erupts after Patriots rookie kicker Stephen Gostkowski hits the winning field goal for a thrilling 24-21 victory over San Diego. Vicky Cook (#12) and bartender Paula Donovan give the "It's Good" signal as Kevin McGroarty, Charlie McNamee and Liz Gallagher cheer. Cronin's served over 900 of their famous ten-cent-wings during the game and expects to serve over 1000 wings during this Sunday's AFC championship game against the Colts. (Trish Bossart photo)

Inspectional Services Moving To 55 Sea St.

The City's Inspectional Services Department will move to 55 Sea St. Monday, Jan. 29.

All of the phone numbers, fax numbers, and email addresses to reach department personnel will remain the same.

Included in the move are Director of Inspectional Services Jay Duca, the building inspectors, plans examiner, conservation officer, code enforcement officer, plumbing inspectors, wire inspectors, and all associated support staff.

The office, currently located in a privately owned building at 1595 Hancock St., is being moved to save taxpayers from having to pay rent for municipal office space. The Health Department is expected to be moved from the same location later this spring.

"We are constantly searching for ways to cut our costs and save taxpayers' dollars," said Mayor William Phelan. "By reorganizing our existing space we can save more than $175,000 in the upcoming budget. I will continue to look for ways to implement similar savings to our taxpayers in the coming year."

The Department of Public Works office was reorganized and relocated to allow for the Inspectional Services' space. The main office for the DPW will remain at 55 Sea St., with supporting staff and managers being moved to another building inside the 55 Sea St. complex.

The main contact number for Inspectional Services is (617) 376-1450.

Drug Program For Mothers Jan. 30

The Mayor's Commission on Women will present a program on alcohol and drug abuse by children Tuesday, Jan. 30, at 7 p.m. in the Richard Koch Park & Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway.

Ted Stevenson will discuss in a realistic, non-sense format the tell-tale signs that a child maybe taking drugs and what a mother can do about it. The program is free of charge.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 21, 1789, the first novel by an American writer to be published in America is printed in Boston. The first edition of the book, "The Power of Sympathy or the Triumph of Nature Founded in Truth," was a thinly veiled account of the seduction and suicide of a young woman.

• On Jan. 18, 1912, after a two-month ordeal, the expedition of British explorer Robert Falcon Scott arrives at the South Pole, only to find that Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, had preceded them by just over a month. The frozen bodies of Scott and his two companions were recovered eight months later, 11 miles from base camp.

• On Jan. 17, 1949, the first Volkswagen Beetle in the U.S. arrives from Germany. The little Volkswagen ("people's car") was a sturdy vehicle designed by Ferdinand Porsche at the request of Adolf Hitler. Its reputation for affordable reliability made it a profitable export.

• On Jan. 19, 1953, 44 million viewers, a full 72 percent of all U.S. homes with a television, tune in to episode

No. 56 of the popular '50s television sitcom "I Love Lucy." In "Lucy Goes to the Hospital," Lucy Ricardo, famously played by Lucille Ball, gives birth to a son.

• On Jan. 16, 1963, Los Angeles' first disco, Whiskey-A-Go-Go, opens on Sunset Boulevard. The underground disco subculture turned into a national sensation when the film "Saturday Night Fever" was released in 1977.

• On Jan. 15, 1974, the first episode of "Happy Days" airs. The show portrayed the comic antics of 1950s Milwaukee high-school student Richie Cunningham and his pal Potsie Weber. A minor character, super-cool biker Arthur "the Fonz" Fonzarelli, soon came to be the show's central character.

• On Jan. 20, 1984, movie star and champion swimmer Johnny Weissmuller dies. He starred in MGM's Tarzan movies, starting with "Tarzan the Ape Man" in 1932 and continuing through the late 1940s.

A Double Milestone For Fr. Bill

Father Bill will mark a double milestone in a life and priesthood humbly dedicated to the homeless and needy.

His 80th birthday and the 55th anniversary of his ordination will be celebrated Saturday, Feb. 10.

Father Bill, of course, is Fr. William McCarthy, former pastor of St. John's Church who inspired the founding of Father Bill's Place, the Quincy Interfaith shelter for the homeless which was named in his honor.

He will celebrate a Mass of Thanksgiving at 4 p.m. Feb. 10 at St. John's Church, Quincy Center. A reception and dinner will follow at 5:30 p.m. at The Lantana, Scannlon Drive, Randolph.

Tickets are $55 per person. Tables of 10 are available at $500. They may be obtained by calling (617) 770-3314, ext. 233.

Proceeds from the dinner and program book will go to Father Bill's Place to help continue giving shelter to the homeless and providing other needed services.

The first shelter was an emergency one opened in 1984 in the basement of the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps., housing five men.

That same year a larger shelter was opened in the basement of St. John's School.

In 1988, the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition obtained the old Registry of Motor Vehicles building on Broad Street and in 1997 built an addition.

The facility today has 104 beds, 79 for men, and 25 for women. In the winter it's a "full house."

It takes a lot of fundraising to keep Father Bill's Place open and operating.

And, Father Bill is usually at the forefront in that department, never missing an opportunity to raise a few dollars.

"He has his hand in your pocket but you really don't mind," one admirer said. "When I see him coming, I automatically take out my checkbook," said another.

And Father Bill likes to tell a joke on himself. The one about retired Quincy police officer Tim Tobin, who asked him if he had a gun permit.

"What do I need a gun permit for?" Father Bill asked. "For all the people you hold up," Tobin replied kiddingly.

Fr. McCarthy, a native of a Haverhill, was ordained in 1952 by Cardinal Richard Cushing. After assignments at St. Rose in Chelsea and St. Gregory's in Dorchester, he was named pastor of St. John's Church Feb. 1, 1977.

He served 18 years at St. John's before retiring as pastor in 1995. But he's far from retired, helping out at parishes on the Cape where he lives and fondly watching over things at Father Bill's Place.

His generosity to those in need has long been legendary. He literally and figuratively will give you the shirt off his back. And if it doesn't fit he will go out and get you one that does.

While he was at St. John's, many came knocking at the rectory door in need of financial assistance. The door was always open to them.

There's also the story about the time a flustered housekeeper came running to tell him that a bed and blankets were missing.

That didn't exactly surprise him. He had given them to a needy Quincy family.

Fr. McCarthy has had a few honors in the past.

He was The Quincy Sun's "Citizen of The Year" in 1994. And in 2004, received the first Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Service Award presented by the Quincy District Court. Rabbi Mann was the spiritual leader of Beth Israel Synagogue for nearly 62 years.

There have been other honors, too.

But perhaps a former homeless drug addict-once so desperate he even planned suicide-knows better than anyone else what Father Bill is all about.

Brian Taylor was one of the lesser known of some 500 people honoring Father Bill at his Golden Jubilee reception at the Quincy Marriott in 2002.

Noting the notables on the podium with him-including a congressman, two mayors, a former mayor, a city councillor and a bank CEO, Taylor said quietly:

"Because of Father Bill, I feel as important as they are."

A friend had told him about Father Bill's Place. "The night I went there I was going to commit suicide," Taylor said.

But the warm welcome and the help he received at the shelter and from the man for whom it is named, he got his life turned around, he said.

"If I could be half the man Father Bill is, I would be a great man. Father Bill is a true hero."

And with that, he walked over to Father Bill and gave him a hug.

There are those who wish Father Bill's Place would relocate. Like somewhere out of Quincy. And take the homeless there.

To which Father Bill says:

"Homeless people are not only those we see on the street, alleyways and village greens, but also people who had professional and high paying jobs in the community such as doctors, engineers, lawyers, bankers, etc.

"We don't criticize those people until we have walked in their shoes.

"There but for the grace of God go all of us."

Thinks Curtain Should Come Down On First Night

In due respect to Quincy Mayor Phelan, I hope he would seriously consider cancelling Quincy's First Night celebration for the near future.

The event the last few years has been an embarrassment to the city. A few ice sculptures, a "parade" that has just a few cars and lasts, maybe, five minutes.

City money wasted on police details, and inconvenience to drivers who must detour around closed streets. Who's benefiting? No one but the merchants who are "cashing in."

Who suffers? Quincy taxpayers who pay for this spectacle, and the city's image; word gets around, and fewer and fewer people show up.

Please, Mayor Phelan, put this event on the shelf until they either raise more money and/or attract or create better ideas. One idea is to have a much smaller event inside, maybe at one of the high school's auditorium, or at the Sons of Italy facility.

The Flag At Half-Staff

On Wednesday, Jan. 3 as I drove through Wollaston Center I looked up at those flag poles and saw the American flag flying at half-staff on one of the poles. The other pole bare.

If I can protest the United Chinese Association group over one flag in 2006, I can commend the same group for respecting the life and death of former President Gerald Ford.

This action in Wollaston Center is to be commended.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1910 real photo postcard showing the old wooden Wollaston School that was on the corner of Winthrop Avenue and Beale Street. In 1871 when the Wollaston Heights area was first developed the first school was held in an old land office. Then, in 1873, the land company built the small building shown here on the left with two classrooms. The then Town of Quincy rented and furnished it and hired the teachers. The larger section shown here in the foreground was an 1890 addition built and paid for by the new City of Quincy. The present brick Wollaston School was built in 1912 and the building shown here was demolished. This site is now known as Safford Park. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Because It Does Matter

Every spring in an annual ritual, residents across Quincy gather in neighborhoods throughout the city to clean lots, parks, school yards and other public places as part of Cleaner Greener.

Contemporaneously, groups like the Wollaston Garden Club and the Seaside Gardeners strike out on their regular mission, in concert with the city's Park Department and DPW, in an effort to make our city cleaner, more attractive and aesthetically appealing, raking, sweeping, picking up leaves and trash, and planting flowers.

Today, on a cold January day, when the landscape looks so barren, as I watched two Park Department workers pick up trash at Bishop's Field in Montclair, I thought of all the people who walk by the field oblivious to the hard work so many volunteers put into it each spring and city workers put forth the rest of the year. I thought about the fact that in a few months when activity blossoms at this park, the dog excrement will have sprouted, more leaves will need to be removed, trash will be gathered, and much of our hard work will appear to have been for nothing.

So, who wouldn't ask themselves "why bother? What is this all for?"

Then I looked down and across Holbrook Road at the old Wollaston Foundry Building, a building that has laid essentially dormant for years. Windows are broken, trash surrounds it; it's neglected condition shows contempt for the neighborhood every day this building, that sits at the gateway from Newport Ave. to my neighborhood, continues to disintegrate. It reflects poorly on our neighborhood and is insulting to all the people who live and care about this area. A few interested parties have wanted to redevelop this site, but have been rebuffed by the owner. One proposal was for attractive traditional two family housing that would greatly improve the neighborhood.

It is easy to boil the effects of this blighted building, the trash in the city park, the people who don't clean up after their pets in the street, the overgrown and uncared for yards throughout a neighborhood down to something as simple as the impact on property value. Although this impact weighs on my mind as both a resident and city official, it is my recollection of Malcom Gladwell's The Tipping Point that helped remind me why we clean up each spring. In his book where he seeks to understand and explain the incredible decline in crime in New York in the 1990s, he attributes the decline in great part to an approach taken by the NYPD inspired by the "broken window hypothesis" referenced in this excerpt:

"Some of the best new ideas in preventing violence borrow heavily from the principles of epidemic theory. Take, for example, the so-called 'broken window' hypothesis that has been used around the country as the justification for cracking down on 'quality of life' crimes like public urination and drinking. In a famous experiment conducted 27 years ago by the Stanford University psychologist Philip Zimbardo, a car was parked on a street in Palo Alto, where it was sat untouched for a week. At the same time, Zimbardo had an identical car parked in a roughly comparable neighborhood in the Bronx, only in this case the license plates were removed and the hood was propped open. Within a day, it was stripped. Then, in a final twist, Zimbardo smashed on the Palo Alto's windows with a sledgehammer. Within a few hours, that car, too, was destroyed.

"Zimbardo's point was that disorder invites even more disorder - that a small deviation from the norm can set into motion a cascade of vandalism and criminality. The broken window was the tipping point."

I encourage everyone to read this book so that they don't have to rely on one tiny little excerpt, for it's the small crimes and infractions that in a sense give others "permission" to commit the bigger crimes. The psychology is simple: when there is graffiti, when there are blighted property conditions it gives would-be criminals the impression that people don't care, that crime is "ok" because no one is there saying you can't by enforcing the very rules meant to deter such activity.

And that is precisely why it is important to clean our own property as well as our public places and yes, plant flowers. Why it is so important that we all take pride and ownership of our neighborhoods. Because it matters when the grass is overgrown and the gutters are falling off the house and the windows are broken, and there's a rotting carcass of a boat or car in the yard.

It matters if there is dog excrement in the field or by the curb. It matters if there is Wendy's, Dunkin' donuts or McDonald's garbage in the gutter. Its presence sets the tone for the neighborhood. Conversely, when our yards are all well-kept, when our houses are in good repair, and yes, when there are flowers in bloom throughout, it sends a positive message to everyone who passes through it.

Because it matters.

This letter is submitted in honor of Paul Zambrano, an irreplaceable man who cared as deeply as anyone I've ever known about the City of Quincy and its beautification. Paul, was literally everywhere I looked and dedicated his lifetime of work to the Park and Forestry Department to make Quincy a clean, attractive and fun place to live where the parks could be enjoyed by those of all ages for many and varied events. For Paul it truly mattered and he and his service to us all will be missed forever.

Nicastro Succeeds Golden As City Solicitor

By FRANK McCaULEY

Atty. Dean Nicastro has been named City Solicitor of Quincy effective Feb. 7, succeeding William B. Golden who resigned to private practice.

Appointment of the 30-year-old Nicastro, who has been an assistant city solicitor since February, 1982, was announced by Mayor Francis X. McCauley.

At the same time, McCauley announced he was moving the city's equal opportunity administrator, Joseph A. "Jay" MacRitchie, into Nicastro's old position of assistant city solicitor.

Nicastro, a summa cum laude graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School, served from 1978 to 1982 as a trial attorney in the eminent domain utilities division of the attorney general's office.

$1,885,000 REVENUE BOND SOUGHT FOR PILGRIM PLAZA

The Pilgrim Plaza $1,885,000 industrial revenue bond would be used to finance a new mini-mall at the corner of Quincy Avenue and Scammell Street. It was referred to the council's finance committee.

Approval by the city council would enable the developers, a Boston group, to borrow funds at below market rates since financial leaders can collect interest on the bonds free of federal taxes. Both city and state approval of such bonds are necessary.

Spinach, Ricotta Stuffed Rigatoni

We were having the usual gang over for Sunday dinner and instead of cooking stuffed shells, I purchased some large rigatoni and used them in place of the shells.

Today's stuffing is made with spinach and ricotta cheese and can be made a day ahead.

RIGATONI STUFFING

1 -10 ounce package of frozen chopped spinach or 1 pound fresh spinach
1 egg (beaten)
2/3 cup ricotta
1/2 cup grated parmesan
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 tablespoon chopped onion (optional)
Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Cook the frozen spinach as directed on package. Drain well. If using fresh spinach, drain and chop.

Boil the pasta according to directions and drain them when they are half cooked. They will be easier to stuff. Baking them after will then cook them well.

While they are cooking, saute the onion in the butter or margarin and blend. Add the egg, ricotta, parmesan to the spinach.

Place some tomato sauce on the bottom of a baking pan. Stuff each rigatoni with the mixture. Add tomato sauce over and some grated cheese. Bake for 20 minutes covered. Then uncover and bake at least another 15 minutes or until bubbly.

This mixture can be used for stuffed shells or rolled lasagna. For the lasagna, cook and then lay out flat and place stuffing on each piece and then roll. They are a lot easier to serve than the traditional lasagna.

BC High's Concert Choir Sings At White House

Boston College High School sophomores Eric Jaukkuri, Don Luchini, Nick Mendros and freshman Keegan Hannon, all of Quincy and members of the school's Concert Choir, recently gave a 90-minute concert in the East Room of the White House.

The 20-member choir (18 students and 2 faculty) under the direction of Doctor Marina Rozenberg of Quincy flew into Dulles on Jet Blue at 1 p.m. on Dec. 4 p.m., then were bused to the Holiday Inn Central, had lunch, changed into their new concert attire and rehearsed in the Mayor's Conference room at the hotel.

At 3 p.m., they set out on foot for the 20-minute trek to the White House. At the White House they were met by security and then greeted by White House hostesses who ushered them to the East Wing waiting room and then the staging area where various performers were warming up.

At 4:30 p.m. the choir took position on the steps and sang a 12-song cycle for 90 minutes as tourists passed through the rooms of the East Wing. Many tourists gave the thumbs-up sign and others stopped and applauded between songs.

Then at 6 p.m. the choir took the East Wing tour viewing the spectacular Christmas decorations, the huge replica of the White House made of ginger bread and the enormous White house Christmas tree.

The next day they took a chartered bus tour of the DC/ Georgetown area, visited St. John's Chapel (the Chapel of Presidents), and had a photo-op in front of the White House. They also visited the souvenir shop, stopped at the WWII Memorial, drove by the Lincoln and Jefferson Memorials, visited and sang in the National Cathedral, saw the "Creches of the World" exhibit, took a bus tour of Embassy Row, visited the Viet Nam Memorial and ended their tour at Georgetown University.

Quincy Medical Center Seeks Gift Shop Volunteers

Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, seeks volunteers to assist in the new gift shop.

Volunteers are needed for a three-hour shift.

The shop, managed by Caryn Smith, owner of the Caryn's Corner boutique in Quincy, offers stuffed animals, greeting cards and magazines as well as artisan jewelry, fashionable accessories and unique floral arrangements designed by local vendor, European Floral Design.

The shop also is finalizing plans to become an agent of the Massachusetts State Lottery, selling lottery and "scratch to win" tickets.

The shop, located within the medical center's first floor, A-Wing lobby, adjacent to Dunkin' Donuts, is open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays.

A percentage of the shop's sales will be donated to the QMC Auxiliary, a volunteer fundraising committee that has raised more than $1 million in support of Quincy Medical Center's advanced, high quality clinical programs and services.

For more information, call Marilyn McAllister at 617-376-5368.

MAUREEN DOOLEY of Quincy receives from State Secretary William Galvin first prize in the Mixed Media Category in the 10th annual Senior Citizens Artistic Interpretation of the State House Holiday Card contest sponsored by the secretary.

NANCY RANDALL, on behalf of the Senior Olympics volleyball team, presented Mayor William Phelan with an autographed practice ball at a recent breakfast at the Beechwood Community Life Center. She told him he and his team should get in shape for the big Seniors - Mayor's Team volleyball playoff in May.

Seniors Getting In Shape For Olympics

Senior from Quincy and the South Shore are getting ready for Quincy's 25th annual Senior Olympics Games at Beechwood On The Bay.

"We hope our winter fitness activities will help more retirees get ready for the Olympic Games in May", said Maryann Mahony the Center's Senior Center Coordinator.

"We have a full range of Winter fitness activities, and are dedicating Fridays to Fun & Fitness."

Quincy Medical Center and Boston Medical Center have once again been invited to be primary benefactors of the Senior Olympics, assisting with the costs of the 11-day citywide events. The hospital's partnership logo is worn on the Senior Olympics shirts. Quincy Rotary Club each year supports as a sponsor and the Rotary designation will be on each competitor's ID number card.

Each Friday morning seniors are invited to Beechwood On The Bay to participate in special activities and skill building. Volleyball, basketball, free throw and darts start the morning. Co-ed volleyball players meet at Beechwood Wednesdays and Fridays at 11 a.m. There is no cost for the Friday morning "Fitness Fun." Olympics planners are hopeful the "drop in and try" invitation will appeal to retirees 55 and above who have yet to get active with the senior games.

QEA Gives Its Position On City Employee Benefits

At the beginning of collective bargaining we signed an agreement with the School Committee not to make "press releases" about specific items on the bargaining table. But, in his mid-term address, and at recent School Committee meetings, Mayor Phelan spoke in some detail about employee benefits, with particular attention to one of those benefits. Is he, as Chair of the School Committee, violating the agreement we signed? I don't know. That discussion would come down to quibbling. Nonetheless, it's time that Quincy citizens and the Quincy Sun questioned the statements being made about City employees and their benefits.

First, let's be clear, City employees have good benefits. Quite good. It's a big attraction and the Quincy Public Schools uses our benefits to recruit the best teachers. It works. Our total pay package, though, is nothing special. Furthermore, we readily acknowledge that our benefits are good. We acquired them through collective bargaining, the way the City didn't want to pay us a lot of money, compared to industry and to other communities. Benefits were cheaper. What we did to help the City back in those days has suddenly been noticed, because some benefit costs have gone way up.

The City's employees helped the City control those costs over the years, despite statements to the contrary. Over the years:

- City employees went to a single insurance company, designing the new plan in cooperation with the City, in a way that especially helped Quincy Hospital. We saved Quincy millions!

- City employees also volunteered (among the first in the state to do so) to force our retired employees who qualify for Medicare go on Medicare. That saved Quincy in the last year alone $4.3 million! And more every year!
- We capped Medicare reimbursements to our fixed-income retirees, saving Quincy more and more each year.
- We agreed to create a cheaper Medicare-eligible wrap plan, again featuring Quincy Hospital.
- We agreed to a three-tiered prescription co-payment plan.

We've been "good citizens." When approached respectfully we have responded. Perhaps our cooperation over the years is just old news to this City administration. Or perhaps it is taken as a sign of weakness. This time in bargaining, a proposal appeared on our table and we were told that "This is it. This proposal will appear, word for word in the final statement." All other unions report that the same tactic has been used on them. No discussion, no bargaining. My union, the Quincy Education Association, officially asked the School Committee during bargaining last October (three months after our contract expired) to have somebody from the City administration come explain to us why the City demands a pay-cut from us. Without getting specific about the proposal, the proposal amounts to a pay-cut for the next three years. We have never received the courtesy of a response.

Consider this, Sun readers: the City of Quincy has been paying for our benefits packages over the last three years, budgeting the required amounts. After paying for these "ticking time bomb" benefits, the City of Quincy still ended the last three years with "free cash" surpluses, of $4 million, $10 million and (according to reports) $11.3 million. Add it up, folks. We don't think our total compensation, pay and benefits, is greatly out of line with anyone. The total package we want is reasonable, affordable, and responsible.

The Mayor didn't even mention employee contracts in his mid-term "state of the City" address. I think I know why. There are about 20 unsettled contracts. If YOU were a City employee, and YOU were told to take a pay cut, and YOU asked why and they wouldn't answer, and YOU knew that the City ends each year with rising surpluses, wouldn't YOU question the Mayor's statement that the City's employees are the Dark Cloud in the City's future? His speech says we're a "ticking time bomb," but don't we deserve to be treated respectfully when we ask WHY? And when the Mayor outlines plans that include planting trees, and fixing sidewalks and opening an arts center, all the while demanding we take a pay cut, wouldn't any smart person want to know why?

The Mayor cannot say that the City is in good shape when his bargaining punishes the City's employees. We are the reason the City is in good shape.

Milton Hospital Gift Drive Benefits Germantown Center

Milton Hospital completed a very successful gift drive to benefit the Germantown Neighborhood Center of Quincy.

Over 200 holiday gifts were collected to benefit disadvantaged families in Quincy's Germantown and Hough's Neck neighborhoods.

Typically an employee event, this year's drive attracted gifts from a few grateful patients and their families, who donated to the drive as a means of thanking the hospital staff for the care they delivered.

Over a dozen extra-large

"leaf bags" full of gifts were loaded onto Santa's sleigh (actually, a pick-up truck) on the Monday before Christmas. The gifts were delivered to the Germantown Neighborhood Center for their Holiday Program, which supports families of low to moderate income by providing nutritious meals and gifts, as well as confidential advocacy, crisis intervention, and counseling services to area residents.

The gift drive has become a tradition at Milton Hospital, being held for the past several years.

Milton Hospital provides community-based health care to people of all ages in Milton, Quincy, Braintree, Randolph, Canton, Hyde Park, Dorchester and other local communities. Services include general medical and surgical inpatient care, a complete complement of outpatient health services and 24-hour emergency services. The hospital is a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, and has more than 250 physicians on staff, representing primary care and 22 different medical specialties.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Seeks Nominations for Board Members

The Appointing Council Shall Meet To Consider Qualified Applicants For Appointments To The Board.

Nominees are to be considered for appointment to fill vacancies.

Board members are advocates for the institution, and have certain governance and oversight responsibilities for the College as specified in the enabling legislation. Members are expected to attend regular meetings, ordinarily scheduled in the evening, and to participate fully as a member of specific subcommittees, usually meeting several times a month during the day. Additionally, members are participants in Commencement, College Ceremonies, and demonstrate in actions and word a commitment to the mission and purpose of the College. Members must submit an annual financial disclosure form to the City Clerk.

Interested individuals must submit a letter of interest and resume, to the Appointing Council, to be received on or before February 1, 2007. The Appointing Council shall meet to consider qualified candidates, and will provide an optional opportunity for interested parties to address the Appointing Council. The Council welcomes diversity in applicants and encourages anyone who believes he or she might contribute positively to the continued success of the institution to respond.

Quincy, North Students Attend Session With Patrick

Students from Quincy High and North Quincy High School were among those attending a question and answer session with Gov. Deval Patrick Jan. 4 at the City/Shubert Theatre following his inaugural.

Ann M. Mahoney, a member of the Quincy School Committee accompanied the group and said "This was a great opportunity for our students as history was made in our state, when the Mendi Bible, a gift to John Quincy Adams was used to swear in Gov. Patrick at the state house.

Mahoney added that approximately 1,400 students attended.

Among those attending were the following students and teachers from Quincy High and North Quincy High School

Those from Quincy High School were, Dierdre McCombes, a senior and Student Council President: Brendan Paine, a junior and Student Council Vice President: and Fred Harris, a teacher and Student Council Advisor.

Representing North Quincy High School were Molly Smith and John Costello, juniors, and Bob Bradley, a social studies teacher.

The event was concluded by a performance by the Brockton High School Band.

Citizens Group Formed To Preserve Neighborhoods From Unwanted Development

A citizens' group of more than 50 concerned citizens called The Adams National Historic Association (ANHNA) has been formed to preserve neighborhoods and open space in Quincy.

They said that a recent filing to rezone several parcels of land seeks to change the currently zoned residential A to a business zone Planned Unit Development (PUD). This would give blanket, unwanted developments to be built in residential neighborhoods.

The ANHNA is concerned that this change in zoning would set a dangerous precedent, giving future developers the ability to gain PUD status and to overdevelop Quincy's neighborhoods.

Last week, the following officers were elected: Mike Linnane was elected president; Rich Fanning, vice-president; Jean Plante and Karen Krause are co-secretaries; Bill O'Brien, treasurer, and Richard Sweeney, information officer.

For more information, call 617-770-0166. Or email, ANHNAforQuincy@yahoo.com

Citizens' Legislative Seminar To Be Held At State House

Senator Michael Morrissey announces a Citizens' Legislative Seminar series will be held at the State House beginning in March.

The sessions, designed to help constituents learn more about the workings of the Massachusetts legislature, are scheduled for Wednesday March 14, 21 and 28 and April 4 and 11.

The seminars will begin with a presentation based on the topic of the day. There will be two presenters per day, and the presenters will include legislators, agency heads, and other policy makers. After a brief intermission for coffee and conversation, participants break up into small groups led by a legislator faculty member for informal discussion. The sessions are an opportunity for people to have candid conversations of the issues.

"State government affects nearly every aspect of our lives. It is important for every citizen to understand how the legislature functions," Morrissey said.

Those interested should contact Alicia Gardner in Morrissey's office at 617-722-1494 with their name and address by Thursday, Jan. 25, in order to apply. "We cannot guarantee a placement in the spring for everyone, but will serve as many as we can on a first come, first served basis," Morrissey said.

TOENAIL FUNGUS

Toenail fungus is usually noticed at the tip of the toenail first and looks like a thickened, yellow nail. It is not painful or uncomfortable, and patients don't usually notice it until it has spread to much of the nail. The fungus prefers a warm, moist environment, so people with sweaty feet are more at risk. If left untreated, the nail can get crumbly and appear distorted. The organism that causes the fungus is the same that causes athlete's foot. If caught early, the fungal toenail can be treated with over-the-counter medications. If it is more involved, your podiatrist may prescribe oral medications. If you have sweaty feet, changing socks during the day will keep your feet dry.

Fungal nails can also be persistent. They don't disappear on their own, sometimes resist cure, and may become re-infected. Seek professional treatment if this problem plagues you every step. Because your comfort during treatment is our utmost concern, our skilled professional staff works as a team to make your visits pleasant as well as productive. For an appointment for a consultation regarding your particular foot care concern, call us at 781-986-3668. You'll find high-tech service with old-fashioned care at 999 North Main Street, Randolph in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING, as well as at our Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building offices. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

HINT: Occasionally, a podiatrist may recommend removal of a seriously affected fungal toenail.

Grant Provides Free Career Training For Recent Quincy College Grads

Quincy College is offering free career training programs to recent GED and high school graduates ages 17-21 with financial need and who live on the South Shore.

"The primary goal of the Workforce Scholars of the South Shore program is to provide eligible students with short-term career training programs, leading to jobs or further education," said Joseph Bradley, executive director of college and community development at Quincy College.

The programs, which are slated to begin in January and early February, include high demand occupations such as Certified Nursing Assistant (CNA) and Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) in collaboration with the American Red Cross, Medical Billing and Coding, Microsoft Computer Skills, and Early Childhood Education/teacher that can lead to state certification.

The college said that this is an exciting opportunity for young students to earn a Quincy College certificate or national certification, plus a Workforce Scholars certicate recognizing various career development activities the graduates also complete.

Students who meet eligibility criteria will also receive various perks such as free tuition, books, parking, testing, job development and counseling. After completing the program, those who are interested in pursuing a college degree may request assistance with financial aid paperwork, application materials, and registration forms.

New classes are forming now. Those interested in becoming a Workforce Scholar should call 617-984-1645 and request an application. Seats will be filled on a first-come first-served basis from those who meet eligibility requirements. Applicants must reside in one of the following communities: Quincy, Braintree, Carver, Halifax, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Middleboro, Milton, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth, Plympton, Randolph, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Workforce Scholars program is funded by a $100,000 grant from the South Coastal Workforce Investment Board.

National Fire Protection Association Recognizes Exceptional Staff

The National Fire Protection Association based in Quincy recently honored four employees in recognition of their commitment to exceptional service.

The employees are: Marie Crowley of Braintree, Anne Hooper of Middleboro, Carl Peterson of Hingham and Joseph Sheehan of Braintree. Each employee received an award named after a former NFPA president at a ceremony held at the Marriott Hotel in Quincy.

Marie Crowley received the National Fire Protection Association 2006 Franklin H. Wentworth Award in honor of her exceptional service. Crowley, a senior general accounting associate, has worked at NFPA for 5 years.

Anne Hooper was recently honored for her exceptional service with the National Fire Protection Association 2006 Charles Morgan Award. Hooper is a customer service representative and has worked for NFPA since 2001.

Carl Peterson, assistant director of public fire protection, has been recognized for his exceptional service with the 2006 Percy Bugbee Award. Peterson has worked for NFPA since 1967.

Joe Sheehan, recipient of the National Fire Protection Association 2006 George D. Miller Award given for exceptional service, is a principle electrical engineer for NFPA where he has been employed since 1993.

National Fire Protection Association Headquarters is located at Batterymarch Park in Quincy.

NFPA has been a worldwide leader in providing fire, electrical, building, and life safety to the public since 1896. The mission of the international nonprofit organization is to reduce the worldwide burden of fire and other hazards on the quality of life by providing and advocating consensus codes and standards, research, training, and education.

Domestic Violence Organization Will Focus On Under Represented Communities

Department Of Social Services Approves DOVE Funding Request

DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended), one of the state's oldest and most successful domestic violence social service agencies has been approved for funding by the state Department of Social Services (DSS) through June 30, 2008.

According to DOVE Executive Director Stephanie Flaherty, DSS notified DOVE it had approved DOVE's request for an annual grant of $249,000 plus six months additional funding to carry the agency through June 2008.

In addition to its current outreach and intervention efforts in the Greater Quincy communities, DOVE pledged it would expand its outreach and intervention efforts in the Asian and Latino communities as well as among gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender individuals whose access to domestic violence services have been complicated by language and cultural barriers.

The outreach effort is one of the priorities outlined by DOVE, Inc. in a recent bid application to the state Department of Social Services (DSS) for $249,990 in 2007 funding consistent with its current DSS funding allocation that is due to expire at the end of 2006. The DSS funding makes up nearly half of DOVE's $585,000 annual budget that supports a domestic violence emergency shelter in Quincy and extensive crisis intervention and family support services for 28 communities in eastern Massachusetts.

"We do an extraordinary amount on a very tight budget," said Flaherty. "The challenge everyday is that we are constantly reminded of what we cannot do, people we cannot serve and families that we cannot shelter because of our financial limitations. We are very committed to doing more, both within our budget but also as we identify new sources of funding that allow us to be even more effective."

Founded in 1978 by a group of volunteers, DOVE was required to file the rebid with DSS despite being the only multi-service domestic violence emergency shelter and community-based services agency in Norfolk County and on the South Shore.

DOVE supports families impacted by abuse with services such as crisis intervention, safety planning, shelter, individual, group and family case management and support, mental health and substance abuse services, legal advocacy, and medical, benefits and systems advocacy.

During FY06, DOVE answered 1590 hotline calls, sheltered 152 families (152 women and 149 children), triaged 326 calls at our Outreach and Family Services Center, provided 73 trainings with 2,315 attendees, and provided intervention, education, and prevention services to more than 769 youth.

Despite its best efforts to reach into all communities within its service area, DOVE Executive Director Stephanie Flaherty said the agency will expand its efforts under its new DSS contract. The Asian community in Quincy alone grew by 157 percent from 1990 to 2000. Flaherty said that DOVE continues to recruit staff and volunteers from within the target communities to enhance its understanding and responsiveness to those families. DOVE is collaborating within targeted communities to better understand their needs.

DOVE is expanding its on-site services to increase job training and placement. The agency currently offers programs in financial literacy, resume writing and job interview skills, GED preparation, self-esteem and women's health.

Flaherty said that even with full DSS funding for the coming year (actually a six-month funding commitment by DSS), DOVE has recently embarked on a strategic development plan to identify long-term financial "friends" that will support DOVE's work and allow the organization to expand its shelter and crisis intervention services that are now limited by its funding.

Broad Meadows Teachers' Night At McDonald's Jan. 22

Broad Meadows Middle School Student Council, under the direction of Donna Miller and Maureen McKenna, will hold its annual Teachers' Night Monday, Jan. 22 from 5 to 7 p.m. at the McDonald's Restaurant, 547 Southern Artery, Quincy.

Teachers will cook French fries, flip burgers, and work at the drive-up window.

All past, current and future students and families are encouraged to attend.

A percentage of the sales during that two-hour period will benefit Broad Meadows.

Each week in The Quincy Sun, the "Quincy Police Hot Spots" page provides readers with numbers to call to report crimes. The telephone number for the "Drug Hot-Line" is 617-328-4527. You will not be required to provide identification or address, although it would be helpful.

Anonymous information via a letter or by leaving a message does not provide an opportunity for the detectives to ask questions to gain further knowledge. Even without identifying yourself, your information can be corroborated (validated) in many ways, such as surveillance, which was used in this particular case.

Some people are reluctant to report suspicious activity for fear of having to testify or of retaliation, but by calling the hot-line with detailed information, the Drug Unit will be working with you to eradicate drug users in your community.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Jan. 1, a approximately 13 minutes after midnight, the second call of the New Year came in as a "family disturbance." Officers Stephen O'Donoghue, Robert Kelly and Daniel Church were dispatched to this Houghs Neck home for the disturbance in progress.

As Officer O'Donoghue arrived, he witnessed two people pushing each other in the middle of the street, so he stepped from his cruiser to break up the combatants. The pushing stopped and a male then focused his attention on Officer O'Donoghue, walking angrily and rapidly toward him. The officers ordered the male to stop and show his hands, but the male kept coming and then punched Officer O'Donoghue in the upper right side of his head.

Officer O'Donoghue wrestled the suspect to the ground and was assisted by Officers Kelly and Church in handcuffing him. Officers O'Donoghue and Church led the struggling, kicking suspect to a cruiser and attempted to get him inside, but the suspect made numerous twisting movements trying to break free.

The suspect, when told to cease or he would be sprayed with OC (mace-type chemical), swore at the officers and then became rigid to prevent getting him into the cruiser. After a prolonged struggle, the officers were able to get the suspect mostly in the cruiser, but couldn't get the legs in without injury to the suspected, so the suspect was sprayed with a quick shot of OC, which resulted in the suspect complying without further incident.

Officer Kelly then started interviewing the victim, the suspect's mother, to determine what occurred prior to the police arriving. She said her son came home drunk just before midnight, woke her up and began arguing with her. When he told her that he was going back out and she tried to stop him, he grew angrier and began pushing her around the room. The suspect then grabbed his mother's head and banged it against the wall "three or four times." As the suspect walked out the front door, he punched a wall mirror and shattered it.

She then followed him outside and this was when the police arrived. The victim, who had small lacerations on her right hand and elbow, but refused medical care, claiming that this was the first time that her son had ever harmed her. The mother was given her rights (not to be confused with Miranda rights) under the domestic violence laws, but she opted not to get an emergency restraining order.

The suspect, a 26-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, assault and battery on a police officer and willful malicious destruction of personal property under $250 (the mirror = misdemeanor). Nice work!

According to Lt. Charles Santoro of the Quincy Police Training Unit, many times victims of domestic violence may initially be satisfied with the response of the police and believe (or want to believe) that it won't happen again. Sadly, delaying the issuance of a restraining order only increases the chances of being victimized again.

Aggressive intervention and prosecution can significantly decrease the abuse. The restraining order is the key! It puts the abuser on notice that their behavior is unacceptable and any future acts will be severely dealt with by the courts. When the courts are closed, police officers will assist victims in getting an emergency restraining order.

As far as alcohol being involved in domestic violence incidents, counselors and court advocates commonly hear from the abuser that "I never would have done that if I wasn't drinking." This is just an excuse for the behavior and statistically speaking, if abuse has occurred, it is likely that it will occur again, and secondly, the abuse itself actually gets worse!

Red Cross To Salute Jerry Dacey At Gala Feb. 14

Supporters of the American Red Cross Chapter of Massachusetts Bay will hold its 28th annual Spring Gala Wednesday, Feb. 14 at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

The local Red Cross chapter will honor the memory of the late Jerry Dacey who served the Red Cross as a volunteer for 25 years.

The gala's theme will be Valentine's Day.

The event will feature hearts and flowers, cocktails, dinner, and music by Suzanne Lockwood.

JERRY DACEY

Chairing this year's gala are Lynn Houghton and Dr. John Pasciucco, assisted by Quincy Chapter Council members James Chiccinio, Donna Feenan, Paul Flavin, Daniel Flynn III, Mae Harris, Michelle Higgins, Maralin Manning, Kevin Meskell and William Reilly. Jackie Gardner, executive director of the local chapter, notes the American Red Cross is always there for families facing emergencies including fires, floods and other disasters.

For tickets and/or other information, call Gardner at the Quincy Red Cross office, 617-770-2600.

Ian Edwards New CEO At Twin Rivers

Ian S. Edwards, formerly with Procter & Gamble is the new CEO of Twin Rivers Technologies, Inc. (TRT), with a plant in Quincy Point.

Edwards, Board Chairman from Heller and President and COO of Angelico will comprise the new leadership team.

Heller had been serving as both chairman and CEO. He will remain as board chairman with Edwards running the day to day operation. Angelico's focus will remain on the operational and manufacturing aspects of the business.

"Edwards is the ideal person to step into the CEO role at this time. His in-depth expertise in the oleo chemicals industry makes him uniquely suited for this position," Heller said.

"I am delighted to welcome Ian to the team," said Angelico. "His broad based strategic and commercial expertise and international reputation will be invaluable in serving the needs of Twin Rivers diverse customer base."

Edwards began his career in the manufacturing division of Procter & Gamble in Manchester, England in 1970. During his 30-plus years with the company, he worked in chemical sales for Europe, eventually becoming European Manager. Edwards moved on to be Director and General Manager of P & G Chemicals. He holds a B.S. in chemistry from the University of Wales.

"I have worked with the team at Twin Rivers Technologies for many years. I am aware of their excellent capabilities," said Edwards. "I look forward to expanding the company both geographically and in its product offerings. Instant communication and a challenging infrastructure and energy climate mean that the business that is the most agile is the one that survives. Supply chains and markets are increasingly global and my experience at Procter and Gamble convinced me that no one company operating alone can have all the answers. Twin Rivers is well positioned to build the necessary partner relationships to thrive in this environment."

Edwards will divide his time between Ohio and Massachusetts and in addition seek strategic alliances for TRT with partners outside North America to further globalize Twin Rivers operations to meet the needs of its increasingly global customer base.

One of North America's largest oleochemical producers and suppliers of premium quality oleo chemicals including fatty acids, esters and glycerin serving the food ingredients, fabric and personal care, industrial and energy markets. Twin Rivers has manufacturing and distribution facilities in Massachusetts, Ohio, Illinois, New Jersey, North Carolina and Texas serving customers throughout North America and Europe.

Ordinance Proposal Would Ban Graffiti Implements

A proposed ordinance that would strike at those who deface the city with graffiti and which may have inspired recent activity by the state legislature is awaiting a hearing before the City Council's Ordinance Committee.

The ordinance, filed Nov. 20 by Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin, would send a message to parents and retailers that they may face fines as much as $1,000 for letting implements such as spray cans fall into the hands of teen-aged graffiti artists.

"We know that graffiti has a negative impact on the entire community," said Coughlin.

"This ordinance is not a simple reaction to a complex issue that many cities and towns struggle with."

"Rather it seeks to rationally address it from several angles and will provide appropriate measures for responsibility and accountability."

He said he forwarded a copy of his proposed ordinance to Sen. Michael Morrissey, who announced last week that he and the Quincy House delegation along with Ward 6 Councilor Brian McNamee had also filed anti-spray can state legislation.

"The bill filed by the Quincy delegation offers no leeway," said Coughlin. "If you are under 18 and have a spray can it is assumed that you are a graffiti artist."

Coughlin's ordinance would ban possession of graffiti implements by a person under 18 near public property or private property without written consent of the owner. The exception would be a youngster who has a magic marker for use in school.

Also banned is possession of such an implement within 50 feet of an underpass or bridge abutment, two favorite targets of graffiti makers.

Persons other than parents or guardians would be forbidden from furnishing a person under the age of 18 with graffiti implements without written permission of said parents or guardians.

Perpetrators would be required to remove the graffiti if they could be identified. If they could not, it would be the responsibility of the property owner to do in 30 days, unless he lacks the financial ability.

Violation of the ordinance would call for a $250 fine for the first offense, $500 for the second and $1,000 for each subsequent offense. Parents or legal guardians would be responsible for the payment of fines levied against minors.

Failure to pay the fines may result in a lien on the property of parents or guardians.

Alternatives to fines could be at least 30 hours of community service under a provider approved by the chief of police or suspension or delay of driving privileges of any person 13 to 21 convicted of violating the ordinance or any state law banning graffiti.

One-Day License Suspension Imposed

The License Board issued a one day suspension for the retail alcoholic license to Edy Yasmin, owner of Old Colony Liquors, 519 Southern Artery for selling liquor to a minor.

The suspension was suspended.

Chairman Joseph Shea said if another violation should occur within a year, then the board will reexamine.

Lt. Peter Turowski, liquor agent for the board said on Nov. 9, 2006, he observed a man purchasing vodka and beer. He showed the clerk his ID and was allowed to purchase the liquor.

However, as Turowski was heading outside to his cruiser, he noticed the driver of the car waiting for the youth. After questioning both the driver and the youth who purchased the alcohol, he asked them how old they were and they both answered they were 17 years old. Both had fake ID's and both were from Hingham.

Shea displayed a real and fake ID and said it would be difficult for the "untrained eye" to see the difference.

Atty. Louis Cassis, counsel for owner Yasmin told the board that in the seven years that Yasmin has owned the establishment there has never been a problem.

The night of the violation, Yasmin said the machine that scans fake ID's was broken. He has since purchased a new one at a price of $1,600 he said.

Police Chief Robert Crowley suggested that send his employees to attend the next TIPS class which will be held next month.

Foot Screening For Seniors

Podiatrist Jordana Szpiro will be available to seniors for foot screening on the first Monday of every month at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St.

She will also treat feet for a fee of $20 per person payable at the time of the visit. Such payments are not covered by health insurance.

Treatments will include nail trimming and general diabetic foot care.

For an appointment, call 617-376-1506.

Tax Tips From The Experts.

Some Old Deductions Return for 2006 at the Last Minute

The Tax Relief and Health Care Act of 2006, signed in December, restores significant tax deductions that had expired. Those deductions are:

- The $4,000 deduction for higher education expenses.
- The $250 above-the-line deduction for educator expenses.
- The itemized deduction for sales tax in lieu of state and local income taxes.

Great news, but unfortunately, 2006 Federal tax forms have been designed and printed omitting these deductions. The Treasury fixed this problem by making certain lines on the federal tax return double duty. For instance:

- The deduction for tuition and fees will be claimed on Form 1040, line 35, "Domestic production activities deduction." Enter "T" on the dotted line to the left of that line entry if claiming the tuition and fees deduction, or "B" if claiming both a deduction for domestic production activities and the deduction for tuition and fees.
- The deduction for educator expenses will be claimed on Form 1040, line 23, "Teacher's expenses." Enter "T" on the dotted line to the left of that line entry if claiming educator expenses, or "B" if claiming both teacher's expenses and the deduction for educator expenses on Form 1040.

If claiming both deductions on one line you must attach a schedule to the return.

The following line on Schedule A (Itemized Deductions) will have dual use:

- The deduction for state and local general sales taxes will be claimed on Schedule A, line 5, "State and local income taxes." Enter "ST" on the dotted line to the left of line 5 to indicate you are claiming the general sales tax deduction instead of the deduction for state and local income tax.

Tom Hurley, CPA, is president of South Shore Tax Services, a local, independent tax preparation service. They're located on 716 Hancock St. in Quincy; he can be reached at (617)376-6226.

Stephen Breyer stated that the Supreme Court must promote the political rights of minorities and look beyond the Constitution's text when necessary to ensure that "no one gets too powerful."

"He said judges must consider the practical impact of a decision to ensure democratic participation because society is constantly changing and they must look at the real world context rather than focusing solely on the framers' intent."

Dr. King's dream, said Heffling, "is the essence of the partnership between St. Chrysostom's Church and the Asiamerica Ministry," headed by the Rev. Dr. Thomas Pang.

"Representatives from the parish and the Episcopal Quincy Chinese Center meet monthly and implement co-operative efforts between the groups and to plan for future initiatives and integration," he said.

"To tell you that we are not without our challenges — on both sides — would be untrue and the parish itself continues to wrestle with identity and ownership issues.

"We struggle daily but we are committed to continuing to learn and grow and reach out.

"Our ultimate, long-term goal is to become one community united by a common faith and a common humanity.

"And I believe that goal to be eminently achievable and very much in the spirit of Dr. King's legacy for the 21st century."

BROAD MEADOWS MIDDLE School Student Council, under the direction of Donna Miller and Maureen McKenna, has voted to become a founding sponsor to the Martin Luther King National Memorial Project. The Broad Meadows name will be added to the permanent Founders' Roll of Honor that will be forever on display in Washington. The council will be invited to the dedication in 2008. Front row from left are: Ashley Gouthro (holding check), Tim Nazari (holding picture of MLK) and Erica Amato. Night To Remember William Dunn Feb. 3

Friends and family of Nicole Sheffer will host a benefit for Nicole in memory of her late friend, William Dunn, Saturday, Feb. 3 at 7 p.m. in Florian Hall, 55 Hallett St., Dorchester.

Dunn, a plumber and a fine athlete recently inducted in the Quincy High School Hall of Fame, went for a swim while boating off Grave Light in Boston Harbor and was never seen again.

He and Sheffer, a fourth grade teacher, have owned a home together in West Quincy for the past three years and Sheffer has left to struggle with the mortgage and other household expenses.

Proceeds of the benefit will go to the Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Scholarship as well as the Friends of Nicole Sheffer.

The evening will include a silent auction and a raffle. The Friends are accepting donations of gift certificates and merchandise for the raffle. All will be acknowledged.

Donations may be made to:

Friends of Nicole Sheffer

Hybrid Systems Combine Comfort and Savings

(NAPS) - With the rising price of natural gas, homeowners are constantly looking for ways to cut utility costs. For many, gas furnaces are often the primary heat source. This means all of the heat in the home is coming from the gas furnace, which can get costly. Fortunately, there are options.

Outdoor air always has heat in it even at very low outdoor temperatures. That's what makes a heat pump a logical choice: In summer, it draws heat out of your home to cool it, and in winter, it draws heat from outside an into your home to warm it.

However, when outdoor temperatures drop below freezing, it becomes more difficult for a heat pump to provide enough heat to ensure comfortable indoor temperatures. For this reason, many homeowners choose to supplement their heating system with electric resistance heaters. A Hybrid Comfort System couples an outdoor heat pump with a natural gas furnace for supplemental heat. This hybrid or dual-fuel system turns off the pump and turns on the furnace when outside temperature dips below preset level.

According to the experts at Johnson Controls, pairing a York Affinity heat pump with an Affinity gas furnace offers homeowners a number of benefits, beginning with more personalized comfort. By utilizing a Hybrid Comfort System, consumers can shift the bulk of their heating requirements to the heat pump during mild winter days and rely on the furnace for bitter cold days.

The furnace is sized to heat the home on the coldest winter days, while the heat pump operates most efficiently during mild winter days. So by pairing a heat pump with a gas furnace, the overall efficiency of the heating system is improved. The resulting benefit to the homeowner is savings on utility bills.

With two different units in place, homeowners also have the option to choose the least expensive way to heat their home, especially during a mild winter, and take advantage of utility incentives. This has the potential to offer additional savings.

In addition to improved comfort levels and increased savings, the selective use of the heat pump and the furnace helps to extend the life of each. High-efficiency York Affinity heat pumps from Johnson Controls offer (NAPS) - Homeowners finally have a way to unlock the eternal problem of forgetting (or losing) one's keys or locking oneself out of the house.

It's estimated that millions of keys are lost each year in the U.S. and, short of calling a locksmith or waiting for a family member to come home, there's not much to do when you find yourself in such a position. But biometric technology is changing all that, giving homeowners a way to open the front door with just a swipe of the finger.

The new BioLock from Sequiam Biometrics and Weiser, a Black and Decker Company, features a simplistic design that on the outside resembles traditional deadbolt door locks. How-

Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratios (SEER) that reach up to 18. Affinity gas furnaces feature an Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency (AFUE) as high as 95 percent, which may qualify homeowners for additional tax credits.

For more information, visit www.yorkupg.com/affinity or call (800) 910-YORK.

New Lock Technology

ever, the biometric deadbolt lock features a battery-powered locking mechanism that is activated when the homeowners swipe their finger across AuthenTec's FingerLoc fingerprint sensor-eliminating the need for traditional keys.

Homeowners can enroll up to 50 family members, friends or other individuals to activate the lock, which has an easy-to-use instructional keypad on the part of the lock that is inside the home. Homeowners can also easily delete or add authorized users using the same keypad.

This fingerprint sensor is unique because it reads below the surface of the skin-making it possible to read virtually every fingerprint. It was designed to be easy to use and reliable, to help prevent homeowners from being locked out of their homes.

The AuthenTec creators tested the TruePrint technology in extreme weather environments such as tennis camps in Florida and ski slopes and in prisons and hospitals where the individuals' prints might be hard to capture.

The lock is powered by four AA batteries, which will last through more than a year of normal use. The lock signals ahead of time when batteries need to be replaced-similar to a smoke detector. It also features a traditional key entry option as a backup.

The BioLock is available via select retail outlets and the internet and in national home supply stores. Online, go to www.sequiam.com/products/biolock.

Computer Seminar At Norfolk Registry Jan. 31

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will host an informational seminar on computer assisted land records research at the Registry of Deeds in Dedham Wednesday, Jan. 31 from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The seminar is intended for both real estate professionals and the public. The program will include a brief presentation, written reference materials, and hands-on exercises.

There will be opportunities for both basic and advanced questions and answers.

Computer assisted land records research is available both at the Registry and on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"These services have proven valuable tools for our customers," O'Donnell stated, "and we hope that this seminar will be helpful and informative."

There is no charge for the seminar, but persons planning to attend are asked to register by phone (781-461-6116). Include name, address and a daytime phone number when registering.

The Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry receives and records hundreds of thousands of documents each year and is a basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information.

THIS IS A HAMMER

Keep the Heat On

Winter is no time for a heater to suddenly conk out, so knowing the steps to take before calling a professional — and waiting for hours or days for a response — can get the warm air back on quickly and safely.

If a heater is not working, check the circuit box first — a blown fuse could be the culprit. If that checks out, look at the thermostat to see if it has been lowered or turned off; adjust it if necessary. Next, check the heating system's emergency switch, and turn it on if needed. If you have a gas system, check the pilot light.

An oil-burning system may be out of fuel. Check the tank level (many homeowners and professionals keep a long stick, marked in feet and inches, near the tank; dip the stick into the tank until it hits bottom and check how high the stick is coated). If the fuel level is fine, press the system's safety relay button once. If the heat doesn't come on, reset the burner motor (press the switch located near the motor).

If your home uses a hot water or steam (radiator) system, try releasing trapped air from each radiator by opening the air vent — if there is one — with a screwdriver and keeping open until water shoots out (careful, it's hot). If using a steam boiler system, check the water-level gauge. If the water level is too low, turn the water supply valve until the gauge rises to the correct level.

These steps can correct a heating problem; if they don't, you can relay the steps you took to the heating repair professional when scheduling a visit.

Always stay safe when checking the heating unit. If you smell a strong odor of gas in the area, get everyone out of the house and call the fire department immediately. If standing water is next to an electrical circuit, don't play around with the circuits — call a heating professional or an electrician if necessary, and drain the water from the area if possible.

Energy Bucks Program

Are Frigid Forecasts Causing Concern?

Make your home more energy efficient and utilize special programs designed to help you save money.

You can reduce energy bills by as much as 30 percent by taking a few simple steps:

- Determine if you are eligible for an energy savings program.

Energy Bucks is a collaborative campaign sponsored by Massachusetts investor-owned utilities, energy efficiency organizations, the Low Income Energy Affordability Network (LEAN) and Massachusetts Association for community Action (MASSCAP) to help Massachusetts families save on energy bills.

Eligibility requirements for fuel assistance, discount utility rates or energy efficiency services vary annually based on the size and income of the household. Call 1-866-LESS-COST (1-800-537-7267) or visit www.energybucks.com.

- Maintaining an efficient heating system is an important step to conserving energy. Have your heating system serviced once every two years and never try to repair it yourself.

- For every 1 degree F you set your thermostat back, you can save one to three percent on your annual heating costs.

- An energy specialist can make sure your home is properly sealed with special tools, like a blower door, to find hidden leaks, and develop a plan for the most cost effective measure to improve your home.

- Caulk, seal and weather-strip all seams, door frames and openings to the outside to reduce air leaks. The biggest holes are most often found in the attic and the basement.

- Shut off heat to unused rooms and close the fireplace damper to seal air leaks.

- Insulate your attic, outer walls, ceilings and floors to prevent heat escaping to the outdoors.

- Clean and replace filters on furnaces once a month.

- Keep draperies and shades on windows that face south open during the day to let sunshine in. Close them at night to keep out the chill.

- Take showers instead of baths (which use 40 percent more hot water) but keep them short. A shower costs about 3 cents per minute if you have an electric water heater.

- Leaky faucets waste gallons of water fast. Repair them immediately.

- Use toaster ovens and microwaves as much as possible. They use less than half the energy that ovens use.

- Turn off VCRs, stereos, and TVs when not in use. Unplug them when you are away from home longer.

Basic Homebuying Tips

(NAPS) - Following a few basic buying tips can help open the door to home ownership.

For instance, something as simple as creating a budget that earmarks your spending for a year can help you know what you can afford while signing up to have a portion of your paycheck automatically deposited in your savings account can help you be certain you'll have cash for the down payment.

Try these additional tips. They come from experts at Countrywide Financial.

- Clean up credit. Make sure none of your bills is past due for at least 12 months before applying for a home loan. Also, check your credit report and clear up any errors.

- Obtain a written preapproval form from a reputable mortgage lender before you start house hunting. Doing so helps you know in advance how much home you can afford.

- Decide on the down payment. Today's home loans often only require 3 or 5 percent of the home's selling price. Explore your options.

- Find a real estate agent whether through a referral from friends and family, or by contacting your local real estate professional association.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Why Exercise Resolutions Fail

The start of a new year seems to trigger the exercise bug. Resolutions of a firmer, stronger, leaner and healthier self echo through homes and fitness centers around the country. Fitness and exercise equipment seems to fly off the shelves, and fitness facilities can anticipate the influx of current members returning and new member joining.

Fitness industry professionals don't need a calendar to identify the start of a new year, thanks to the sudden increase in attendance. The same thing happens a few months later, when fitness instructors know it's spring by the slow but gradual decline of member attendance. Why is this?

It could be tradition. It seems customary to include exercise and fitness into our New Year's resolutions. Resolutions provide the opportunity to admit to others that we have a desire to feel and look better. The question is what happens between January and April to derail our ambition and goals of leading a healthy lifestyle.

Often the culprit is, believe it or not, honesty. Yes, honesty, because most issues that surround becoming fit and exercising have nothing to do with exercise itself.

People often set themselves up for failure by setting fitness goals that they know will be almost impossible to maintain or continue over a long period of time. This is where honesty with yourself can make the difference in your sticking with your program throughout the year.

Issues of poor self-image, unhappiness, disappointment, stress, poor time management and depression can all get wrapped up in one resolution of "losing weight" or "getting fit." However, not dealing with these issues individually can prevent you from reaching whatever exercise goal you may desire.

Can exercise be used as a tool to help you cope with these issues? Definitely, but be honest with yourself and don't confuse your exercise and fitness goals with other goals that can keep you from reaching them.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hcares.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Youngsters should be made to understand that tobacco in any form is unhealthy. While some kids believe that chewing tobacco is safer than smoking cigarettes, it is not. A person can get the same poisons and cancer-causing agents in chewing tobacco as from smoking tobacco. While it may be true that a person does not inhale chewing tobacco, it greatly increases the chances for oral cancer. In addition, chewing tobacco poses a real threat to the health of teeth, gums, and the bones that hold teeth in place. Thus, aside from being very addictive, chewing tobacco causes cavities; periodontal disease; a precancerous condition called "leukoplakia"; and cancer of the mouth, pharynx, and throat. Even chewing gum is preferable.

Smokeless tobacco can irritate your gum tissue, causing it to recede or pull away from your teeth. Once this gum tissue recedes, the roots of your teeth are exposed, increasing your risk for tooth decay. The roots of your teeth may also become sensitive to hot and cold or other irritants, which means you could experience some discomfort when eating or drinking. Call us at 617-479-6220 if you have questions about your dental health. We provide a wide range of innovative dental services specifically tailored to the needs and wants of our patients. At all times, our focus is on you and what you want from dentistry. Ultimately, you manage your own oral health. We're located at 44 Greenfield Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. As headlines in recent years can attest, baseball players do not always make the right health choices. Young players should respect themselves and not emulate unhealthy behaviors of their heroes.

Increasing Good Cholesterol Reduces Cardiovascular Risk

(NAPS) — It's common knowledge that high cholesterol increases the risk of heart attack and strokes.

What's less well known is that statins, the drugs most often prescribed to lower cholesterol, may cause side effects that can even lead to heart disease.

Some medical experts think that rather than trying to lower overall or "bad" LDL cholesterol, a more effective course of heart disease prevention would be to raise HDL, or "good," cholesterol.

"It is estimated that every 1 percent increase in HDL can decrease the risk for heart disease by 2 percent in men and 3 percent in women," said Dennis Goodman, M.D., former Chief of Cardiology and Medical Director of the Cardiac Treatment Center at Scripps Memorial Hospital. "This is especially important because a low HDL level is one of the most common cholesterol problems found in people with heart disease."

In a six-month pilot study at Scripps Memorial, Dr. Goodman and investigator George Dennish, M.D., tested a cardiovascular nutritional supplement and found it increased HDL up to 23 percent, which would indicate a reduced risk of heart disease. The study found no adverse effects and demonstrated that the combination is safe to use with statin drugs.

The vitamins and minerals in the supplement include vitamin C, E, B6, B12, niacin, folic acid, magnesium and selenium, with protein-building amino acids, antioxidants such as CoQ10, alpha lipoic acid, N-acetylcysteine and policosanol and extracts of hawthorn, garlic, grape seed and soy isoflavones, all of which have been shown to beneficially affect heart health.

In one group tested, the HDL was raised by 23 percent; in another, by 40 percent.

"We are excited by these findings because they show the efficacy of essential vitamins and minerals, at levels recommended by the American Heart Association," said Dr. Goodman, who originally formulated the HDL Booster supplement, now sold by Enzymatic Therapy in health food stores nationwide.

For maximum heart health, Dr. Goodman recommends eating a well-balanced low-fat diet, staying active, quitting smoking if you smoke, and losing weight if you weigh too much. For more information, visit www.hdlbooster.com.

Avoiding The Cold And Flu

(NAPS) — When it comes to colds, the old adage usually holds true: An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. And there is little that can prevent the common cold virus from infecting you if you have been exposed to it.

If you do catch a cold, however, there are ways to make things a little easier on yourself. The first step is to do yourself, your friends and co-workers a favor and stay home. That way, you won't spread your illness and you'll have the opportunity to get plenty of rest.

Also, keep in mind that while there is no cure for the cold, several studies have shown that zinc lozenges products such as COLDEEZEE could help reduce the duration of a cold by nearly half.

Cold treatments can vary widely. Another brand is a combination of vitamins, herbs, minerals and amino acids, but because of questions regarding its effectiveness, the company that makes it no longer claims the product has any clinical effect. In addition, there are concerns about the possibility of kidney stones because of the megadoses of vitamin C one would take in if that product were used per instructions.

Still, your best bet is to not catch a cold in the first place. Try these tips:

- Wash your hands frequently. This is often your best defense. Wash the entire hand using warm water and soap. Don't forget to clean under your fingernails.
- Avoid putting your hands near your eyes, nose or mouth, unless you have washed. Most bacteria and germs are spread from a surface to your hands to your face.
- Cover your cough. Covering your mouth when you cough prevents the airborne spread of viruses and bacteria.
- Clean your "shared spaces" often. Remember phones, keyboards, steering wheels, office equipment and other items typically used by several people during the day.
- Get a flu shot. Flu shots are especially beneficial for those with weakened immune systems, the elderly or those who come in contact with a lot of people. Plus, the vaccine has been shown to shorten the duration of viral illness that are not flu.
- Get enough sleep. During sleep, your body's immune system goes into high gear to protect you from illness. Lack of sleep can reduce immune functioning, making you susceptible to sickness.
- It's sometimes easy to overlook your thirst and get dehydrated. Make sure you consume eight glasses of water a day. But don't reuse or share water bottles.

• Keep a moderate exercise schedule. Try to maintain a three-to-four-day-a-day exercise routine.

• Eat a healthy diet. A well-balanced diet helps maintain a healthy immune system.

Presidents Down D-Y, Tied For First Place

By SEAN BRENNAN

If you watched last Sunday's Patriots/Chargers game (who didn't, I know) you noticed that New England's experience and 'been-there attitudes' were both major factors in deciding the final outcome.

What you may have also noticed was just how much San Diego wanted to attack that bulls-eye on the backs of each and every Patriot player. When you have won before, every team you play wants to be the team who knocks off the best.

This winter, the Quincy Presidents' boys basketball program is the team that every opponent wants to beat. Quincy, which is off to its typical fast start at 6-2 overall and 4-1 in the highly competitive Atlantic Coast League, is the defending league champions, and thus far the team has responded to most of the challenges it has faced.

"We have that bulls-eye on our backs this season being the defending league champions," head coach Bob Fisher said recently. "For every team we play this year, their game(s) against us become the biggest game on their schedule. It is their chance to make a statement or in some cases would make their season if they beat us. We need to be ready to handle the best of each and every team we play this season."

Coach Fisher's team has handled the challenge early in the season; even if his team's play is not where it will need to be come post-season tournament time.

"This year's team is not as talented as last year's team," Fisher said. "We are a different team compared to last year, but we have the right combination this year to be a more talented team."

The Presidents' talent is spread out amongst a solid starting five and a very deep and ever-improving bench. Starters Steve Connolly, Paris Amado, Doug Scott, DeShawn Matthews and Jared Tucker and bench players Joe Pantano, Matt Boyle, Sean Boyd and Martin

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Bowes have helped Quincy race out to a first-place tie in the Atlantic Coast League.

"We have good scorers in Connolly, Amado and Scott," Fisher said. "And with guys filling in from the bench due to injuries, they have started to step up. In the total picture, we are playing fairly well."

Quincy played last Friday night against a good Dennis-Yarmouth team and came away with a huge league win. Not only was this victory big for the Presidents because it was a league game, but it was doubly important since Quincy was coming off of a blowout loss to Whitman-Hanson last Tuesday.

In the game versus Dennis-Yarmouth (which lost by only three points to W-H), sophomore sensation Doug Scott's twenty-two first-half points led Quincy to an early lead. Scott finished the game with twenty-eight points. Senior captain Steve Connolly finished with a double-double (18 points/12 rebounds) and junior guard Paris Amado tallied eleven points for the Presidents.

"That (game) was our most intense and aggressive game of the year," Fisher said. "We played with a sense of urgency after getting beat at home by Whitman-Hanson. It was a good win. We shot the ball well, we penetrated the paint and we attacked the glass. One of the biggest keys to victory was that we got to the foul line seventeen more times than they did."

The aforementioned tilt against the Panthers of Whitman-Hanson came down to a lack of execution on the part of the Presidents. The team got down by eighteen early in the first-half, and could never mount a significant scoring run to get back into the game. Connolly led all President scorers with 15 points and Scott finished the home loss with 13 points.

"We got down early and could never get a sizeable run going," Fisher said.

"Whitman-Hanson shot great from the three-point line and had one player hit seven of them. We had a tough night shooting and our lack of height hurt us in the rebounding category. We were short-handed, but that is not an excuse, we seemed to come out of the gate in a fog."

The Presidents defeated Plymouth North and Plymouth South in the two league games before the Whitman-Hanson loss.

Against Plymouth North, Quincy's guards controlled the pace of the game. Amado finished the contest with game-high eighteen points and Scott scored fifteen points as the Presidents went on to win 65-54. Connolly (12 pts.) and Matthews (11 pts.) also played well in the win.

Scott's twenty-seven points helped lead Quincy to a 68-52 win over Plymouth South. Matthews (14 pts.) and Connolly (12 pts.) again provided secondary scoring to compliment Scott's outstanding play.

If the Whitman-Hanson loss was an eye-opener for the Presidents, then the Dennis-Yarmouth game was a reminder to Quincy and Coach Fisher just how good this year's team can be.

"Win or lose you need to find things to help improve the team and create opportunities to win," Fisher stated. "The W-H game turned up our intensity, and immediately after that loss, we had three great practices followed by the win over D-Y. We are establishing a defensive presence and we are starting to create offense with this defense and we are turning the corner."

"You need to push these kids to improve and with the players we have the team will only get better."

COLD-WEATHER BATTERY CHECK

Electrical storage batteries become less efficient as the temperature drops during the cold-weather months. Further complicating the matter is the fact that an engine may be more difficult to turn over in colder weather. These two factors may combine to cause problems.

Thus, while a battery in less than peak condition may be acceptable at moderate temperatures, it becomes more vulnerable as the cold season settles in. Have your vehicle's battery checked before you face the stark reality of having a dead battery on a dark night. Check the sticker on your battery to find out its age, and see if it falls within the safe limit of a battery's ability to hold a proper charge, to carry four years.

In extreme temperatures, a battery is more susceptible to problems. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we recommend having your battery checked before there is a problem. As in most car matters, preventative maintenance can save you grief. To have your battery checked, or if you need it replaced, please come to 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree. If you have questions, please call 781-843-1550. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: In extremely cold weather, engine oil may thicken to make starting a vehicle harder.

Red Raiders Showing Steady Improvement

By SEAN BRENNAN

Transition (n) passing or change from one place, state, style etc., to another.

The North Quincy boys' hoops team is in a state of transition this winter, but according to head coach Kevin Barrett, the team is steadily improving with each game.

"We are struggling in the early part of the season," Barrett said this week. "We are playing very inconsistently, but there is time to change this as we enter the second season and the rest of our schedule."

The Red Raiders currently have a 2-6 overall record and a 1-5 record in the Atlantic Coast League. For a team that was 17-6 last season and co-champions of the ACL along with Quincy, North Quincy is having a time of it adjusting to league play this season. The team's only league win came versus Marshfield High School on January 2.

The Raiders defeated the Rams by a score of 58-49. Junior Phouc Nguyen scored a game high sixteen points in the victory. Three other North Quincy players finished the game with double figure points and they were seniors Terrell Johnson (11 pts.) and David Ray (10 pts.) and junior Dennis Martin (10 pts.).

"Nguyen played an overall great game against Marshfield," Barrett said. "He was steady on offense and defense the entire game. This was a good win for the program."

Woodward Basketball Wins Holiday Tournament

The holiday season may have already come and gone, but before it was over, the Woodward School for Girls basketball team gave their fans a present.

The team took part in and won the N.E.P.S.A.C (private school) holiday tournament which was held on Dec. 15 and 16 at The Beaver Country Day School in Chestnut Hill, MA.

Woodward, in the semifinals of the tournament, defeated Manianapolis Prepitory (CT) by a score of 35-20. Senior captain Brittany Norton (10 points) and her sister Michelle Norton (18 points), both Quincy residents, lead the way for Woodward. A great defensive performance from the entire team helped hold Manianapolis to a total of ten points in each half.

Woodward tipped off against Beaver Country Day

BOYS' BASKETBALL

The Red Raiders' only other win was against Barnstable High School in the season opener. North won that game 82-77. Junior Marcellus Lee's twenty-six points helped the Raiders hang on in a very tight contest.

"As you can tell by the final score, this game was up and down for two halves," Barrett said. "It was a good way to start the season, and if we can get back to what we worked in this game, then we should be able to get back on track for the rest of the season."

Martin, who is leading the Raiders' with 12 points per game scoring average, finished the season opener with seventeen points. Ray (15 pts.) and Johnson (14 pts.) also played solid games for North Quincy.

Last week, the Raiders lost two tough Atlantic Coast League games to Plymouth Northland Sandwich. Against Plymouth North, North Quincy fell in defeat, 66-53.

The team's game versus Sandwich came down to execution, and unfortunately for the Red Raiders, their good effort was not good enough. North Quincy left twelve points on the floor, as they went a paltry 15-27 from the charity stripe.

"It was a good effort, but as the final score indicates we came up short," Barrett said. "I saw progress being made, but if we want to win we need to make our free throws. We left twelve points off the scoreboard."

Although North Quincy is off to a slow start, the team and Barrett know that in the ACL any game on any night can result in a win if you execute and play to your abilities. The Raiders have a shot at advancing to the post-season, but will need a serious finishing kick to get to the required 10-10 plateau.

"The progress is slowly being made," Barrett said. "The team's morale is high and I feel like we are a better team than our record indicates. We are working hard in practice and with the extra work the game experience that is needed will come."

"We are ready for a breakout win, something that will turn our season around. I know that we are capable of beating anyone if we play consistent. In this league, on any given night you can win or you can lose."

For the Red Raiders, the transition stage needs to end, and their game play experience needs to stand out, and if that happens then North Quincy may surprise a lot of teams in the second half of the season.

North hits the road this Friday when they travel to Dennis-Yarmouth to play an important Atlantic Coast League game, and again next Monday when they travel to Blue Hills Regional High School to tip-off in a non-league game.

in the tournament championship, and because of injuries and previous family obligations, the team was forced to take to the court with only five players. Brittany Norton, Michelle Norton, Mary Harris, Dana Gaymond and Sarah Bender played hard in the first half, but trailed 20-16 at halftime. The second half saw Beaver Country Day expand their lead to eight points, but the Wildcats rallied to tie the game in regulation, 32-32, to force overtime. Michelle Norton blocked two shots at the buzzer to help Woodward maintain the tie.

In overtime, the Wildcats outscored Beaver Country Day, 9-1. Michelle Norton scored all nine points in overtime and finished the championship game with 16 points. Brittany Norton finished the game with 15 points and Harris, Gaymond and Bender contributed to the win with solid defense and rebounding.

"Give all the credit to the players. In all my years of coaching I have never been more proud of a group of players," head coach Bob Giordano said. "More importantly, I couldn't respect a team of young women any more than I do this group. They gave their heart, soul and sweat, not just for themselves but for each other and for Woodward. This is a game they will always remember."

The tournament win has propelled the Woodward School to a fast start this winter. The team currently has a 2-1 record in league play and a 4-2 record overall.

On Jan. 4, the Wildcats disposed of Brimmer & May, 52-19. The Norton sisters once again lead Woodward to victory. Brittany Norton scored 22 points and Michelle Norton dropped in 18 points.

North Quincy Wins 2 Matches, Record 10-3

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raiders wrestling team stepped up to the challenge this past weekend with two come-from-behind victories over Arlington High School and Walpole High School in a quad-match at Chelmsford High School. The Red Raiders' record now stands at 10-3.

North Quincy, which had a number of its top wrestlers out with injuries, took a tough loss against host Chelmsford, but the team responded to a 30-0 deficit against Arlington by storming back to take a convincing and team-oriented 45-30 win.

Senior captain Phil Kelly got the comeback rolling with a pin-win in the 285-pound division. Other winners for the Red Raiders included Hung Ly (103 lbs.), Dennis Leung (112 lbs.), Kenny Lok (119 lbs.), Jon Tan (125 lbs.), David Duong (130 lbs.),

WRESTLING

Danny Sok (135 lbs.), Jack Leung (140 lbs.), and Louis Chin (145 lbs.).

North Quincy earned its second win of the quad-meet with another comeback victory over Walpole, 42-36. Down 30-6, the Red Raiders got the winning rally started with a Dennis Leung pin-win at the 112-lbs. division. Other wrestlers winning against Walpole included Jon Tan (119 lbs.), David Duong (125 lbs.), Danny Sok (130 lbs.), Jack Leung (140 lbs.), Louis Chin (145 lbs.), and Dewar Tan (152 lbs.).

"The team stepped up today," head coach Dan Regan said. "We have ten more matches left on the season before sectionals-the last two matches of today's quad showed a team coming together. I think and hope the team will grow as a squad from the excitement of coming down from two big deficits and digging deep to come up with two victories."

On January 6, North Quincy played host to twenty teams at its annual winter wrestling tournament. The Red Raiders finished in seventh place overall, and had one champion, Phil Kelly took first place in the heavy-weight division. Other notable results included second place finishes for Jon Tan (119 lbs.) and Danny Sok (130 lbs.), a third place finish for David Duong (125 lbs.) and a sixth place finish for Kenny Xu (135 lbs.).

Quincy High School sophomore Paul Reggiani was the champion in the 135 pound division. Quincy senior, Camilo Arredondo finished in second place in the 171-pound division.

Avoid using rock salt to melt ice, it contaminates soil and destroys nearby plants. Calcium chloride is less toxic to plants but is more expensive than rock salt and more difficult to handle.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your batteries should be fully recharged by now, making you more than eager to get back into the swing of things full time. Try to stay focused so that you don't dissipate your energies.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to charge straight ahead into your new responsibilities. But you'll have to paw the ground a little longer, until a surprise complication is worked out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Rival factions are pressuring you to take a stand favoring one side or the other. But this isn't the time to play judge. Bow out as gracefully as possible, without committing yourself to any position.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Reassure a longtime, trusted confidante that you appreciate his or her words of advice. But at this time, you need to act on what you perceive to be your own sense of self-interest.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You need to let your warm Leonine heart fire up that new relationship if you hope to see it move from the "just friends" level to one that will be as romantic as you could hope for.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) There's still time to repair a misunderstanding with an honest explanation and a heartfelt apology. The sooner you do, the sooner you can get on with other matters.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect a temporary setback as you progress toward your goal. Use this time to re-examine your plans and see where you might need to make some significant changes.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some missteps are revealed as the cause of current problems in a personal or professional partnership. Make the necessary adjustments and then move on.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Jupiter's influence helps you work through a pesky problem, allowing your naturally jovial attitude to re-emerge stronger than ever. Enjoy your success.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Set aside your usual reluctance to change, and consider reassessing your financial situation so that you can build on its strengths and minimize its weaknesses.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some recently acquired information helps open up a dark part of the past. Resolve to put what you've learned to good use. Travel plans continue to be favored.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Act on your own keen instincts. Your strong Piscean backbone will support you as someone attempts to pressure you into a decision you're not ready to make.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Each year thousands, and thousands of people just like you pre-plan their funeral arrangements. These people are from all over the country, and right here in our own community.

We at the Deware Funeral Home are always ready and available to answer any questions you might have concerning pre-planning or pre-financing. We are always available to discuss with you our numerous plans. Please feel free to call us or stop by to discuss any questions or thoughts you may have on pre-planning. We have specially prepared pamphlets you may take home and read at your convenience.

Making decisions in advance of need is becoming more and more common among those who believe that pre-planning eases the immediate post death experience for survivors. Pre-planning ranges from a very simple agreement between husband and wife or family to a very detailed and financed funeral plan.

Four Chaplains Sunday Observance Feb. 4

The Quincy Veterans' Services Department of Quincy reminds residents Sunday, Feb. 4 has been mandated by the Congress of the United States as "Four Chaplains Sunday."

The day commemorates a cold February morning in 1943 when the troopship Dorchester slowly made her way through frigid waters on the north Atlantic toward Greenland and suddenly a German torpedo struck amidships and released suffocating clouds of steam and ammonia gases. Many men were killed instantly. Others groped and stumbled their way to the upper deck.

The ship was mortally wounded and listing badly; she would sink in only 20 minutes. Out of 902 men only 230 men were saved that awful night.

However, moving reassuringly among the frightened men were four chaplains: George Fox, Methodist; Alexander Goode, Jewish; Clark Poling, Dutch Reformed; and John Washington, Catholic. These chaplains worked to calm the men and handed out available life jackets.

Soon, the supply of extra life jackets ran out, calmly and without hesitation all four chaplains stripped off their own life jackets, giving them to the frightened men near them, never asking whether they were Protestant, Catholic or Jewish. It is said that these men of faith linked arms, bowed their heads, and each in their own manner, led the men in prayer, putting their lives in the hands of God.

Survivors recounted the sight and sound of that terrible night picturing those four chaplains who performed a tremendously heroic act.

STATEMENTS OF QUALIFICATIONS

STATEMENT OF QUALIFICATIONS
CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS
PURCHASING DEPARTMENT
1305 HANCOCK STREET
QUINCY, MA 02169

The City of Quincy seeks Statements of Qualifications for PUBLIC WORKS PUBLIC CONSTRUCTION MANAGER AT RISK SERVICES

FEBRUARY 2, 2007 AT 11:00 a.m.

Pursuant to M.G.L. Chapter 149A, the City of Quincy, the Civil Engineering awarding authority, seeks Statements of Qualifications (SOQ's) for Public Construction Manager at Risk Services (CM at Risk) for the construction of a new Quincy High School ("QHS").

This Request for Qualifications (RFQ) is the first phase of a two-phase procurement process as set forth in Chapter 149A. Only those respondents deemed qualified will be invited to respond to a Request for Proposal to be issued in the second phase of the procurement process.

The RFQ will be available on January 17, 2007 at the Office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169. SOQ's are due on February 2, 2007 at 11:00 a.m. at the Office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169. The City will respond to SOQ's within 60 days from the date of receipt of said SOQ's.

The project involves the construction of a new QHS located on the current site of the existing QHS and Center for Technical Education ("CTE") to be approximately 323,000 SF with an overall footprint of approximately 132,000 SF. Anticipated duration of the project is 44 months. Estimated construction cost is $98 million.

Project team includes the City, architect Symmes Maini & McKee Associates and Project Manager Fishman Construction Corp. of MA.

The specific description of the CM at Risk scope of services, preliminary concept designs and key factors important to the final selection, and the evaluation procedure and criteria are contained in the RFQ and are incorporated herein by reference. A prohibition against any unauthorized communication or contact with the City is contained in the RFQ and is also incorporated herein by reference.

Whether an individual firm or a joint venture, proposers must be certified in General Building Construction by DCAM for a single project limit in the amount of the estimated construction cost set forth above or greater and must also be within the aggregate limits of its DCAM Certificate of Eligibility Form.

This project will be subject to the minimum wage rates set under the Massachusetts Prevailing Wage Laws.

The City reserves the right to reject any and all SOQ's and to waive any informalities in the RFQ process if it is in the best interest of the City to do so.

Also buildings that have deteriorated or been defaced by graffiti, property that is unsecured against illegal entry both by vagrants and children, abandoned wells, unsecured pools and chemicals and other hazardous materials.

The Health Commissioner, Fire or Police Chief and the Building Inspector would be charged with enforcing the ordinance and face a penalty of not more than $200 for each violation. When a property is deemed a nuisance, the owner would be given not more than 60 days to take corrective action starting within 30 days of the date of the notice.

If the responsible party fails to remedy the nuisance in a timely fashion, the director of Inspection Services can have it removed at the owner's expense as provided by state law.

"Over the last few years," said Coughlin, "I have heard a number of concerns that residents have about a variety of matters including over development, graffiti and property conditions which adversely impact the neighborhoods."

"I have responded by crafting and introducing new and amended zoning initiatives, a new graffiti ordinance and this blight ordinance in order to effectively address the quality of life."

Suspect Identified In Shea Starbucks Caper

Police now know the name of the robbery suspect who escaped the clutches of City Clerk Joe Shea outside Starbucks Friday night after his car and the lost behind.

He is identified as Shawn Murphy, 27, of Quincy, who is known to police.

was in Revere and who was ID'd through an address book in the coat pocket.

The address book contained his mother's name and address in Quincy, an easy trail for police to follow. As of Tuesday afternoon, however, Murphy was still at large.

Shea, 40, and Health Commissioner Drew Scheele were having a cup of coffee at Starbucks in Quincy Center when a customer came to the counter with the news.

"Hey, someone just tipped you guys off!"

Shea gave chase, caught him outside the store and pinned him against the wall. The man struggled and escaped but Shea managed to rip his coat off.

The man continued to flee to the MBTA Red Line but he left behind the 18 CDs he had stolen as well as his coat with the telltale ID in the pocket.

Complaints have been issued for the arrest of Murphy for the theft of merchandise valued at more than $300.

Stranded Wollaston Beach Dolphins Signal Something Amiss

By TOM HENSHAW

The eight dolphins, six of whom died, that were stranded on Wollaston Beach Sunday has drawn national attention and may signal that something is amiss with the dolphins that make their homes off the New England coast.

"No one can recall such a mass stranding in Boston Harbor," said Tony LaCasse, spokesman for the New England Aquarium.

"There have been dolphins in Buzzard's Bay and off Gloucester. There have been dolphins trapped in shallow water off Long Island."

"One of the members of our staff coming to work on the commuter boat saw six dolphins today in the inner harbor."

"A preliminary autopsy of two of the animals showed an enlarged lymph node, indicating some type of infection or illness. We sent tissue samples to the lab and we'll know in a couple of weeks."

"The preliminary autopsy showed that the animals were not well-nourished, that they were not eating well."

LaCasse said the two dolphins that were sent back to sea by residents have not been located and the aquarium staff is concerned that they will strand themselves again and take well dolphins with them.

"They are very social animals," he said. "They are inclined to support each other. The two who were return to the sea may be just off shore and sending out signals that draw in healthy dolphins to the beach."

"The thing to do if you come across stranded dolphins is to keep the animal wetted down, keep dogs away from it and call 911 or the aquarium. We will examine it and, if it can be put back, we'll take it to deep water for the release."

"We can understand the efforts of people to save dolphins but they may be putting other dolphins at risk."

The dolphins that beached themselves on Wollaston Beach were common dolphins, which are residents along with white-sided dolphins, of the New England coast.

"People don't realize that we have resident dolphins," said LaCasse. "We've had three or four strandings of dolphins and small whales already on the Cape. That's 38 animals, a high number."

"Most of the strandings on the Cape are accidental, well dolphins following food too close to shore. We have hopes that the two dolphins that were put back in the harbor are found before they draw healthy ones in."

600 Demonstrate At School Committee Meeting Teachers Protest Pending Cuts In Health Benefits

By KELLY-ANN GARLAND

Specific details of Mayor William Phelan's contract offer to Quincy's school teachers have never been disclosed but the teachers, seeing an assault on their health benefits, turned out to protest any way.

Some 600 of them, who have been working without a contract for the past five months, showed up at the School Committee meeting at the Point Webster Middle School last Thursday to demonstrate their displeasure.

Paul Phillips, president of the 900-member Quincy Education Association, said the mayor's offer, which was presented to the union six months ago, was the equivalent of a three-year pay cut.

'WE WON'T ACCEPT a pay cut,' QEA President Paul Phillips declared at the school committee meeting.

"We haven't asked for the moon but we will not accept a pay cut," said Phillips. "Pay cuts hurt our families. They take food off our tables. Our Veteran Park Commissioner Thomas P. Koch will challenge Mayor William Phelan in this year's city election.

Koch made his announcement Tuesday after submitting his resignation to Phelan as executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, a post he has held for 12 years.

Koch personally handed his resignation to Phelan and informed him he was running for mayor.

In his announcement to mayor, he said,

"With our children and grandchildren counting on us, the stakes are just too high and our potential too great to face our challenges standing still.

"The time is now to create a positive new vision for our city's future. The bottom line: We can do better."

It may be the first time a department head has challenged an incumbent mayor.

Koch will be Phelan's strongest opponent since the latter took the mayor's office away from six-term incumbent James Sheets in a stunning 17-vote margin win in 2000. Phelan was elected to a fourth term but is certain to do so.

TOM KOCH

Phelan turned back a challenge from former Ward 6 Councilor Joseph Newton in 2003 and had only written opposition in 2005.

Koch has served 19 years with the city, including five as executive secretary to former Mayor James Sheets and two as director of the Council on Aging in addition to his 12 as park commissioner.

Koch, 44, said he will spend the next several weeks meeting personally with as many residents as possible to share his ideas for Quincy.

and listen to their concerns. He said he is energized about the opportunity to bring his message to neighborhoods across Quincy. The campaign will launch a website, www.kochforquincy.com to complement Koch's outreach effort.

"There's no limit to what we can accomplish when we bring a committed group of people together, and we're going to do it," Koch said.

Koch said he will make himself available as the city during the transition to a new park commissioner as any way possible.

"While this endeavor is undoubtedly a risk for me personally, the powerful obligation I feel to do everything possible to protect this city's future has convinced me it's a chance worth taking," Koch said.

Koch said he learned the value of public service early in life from his mother and first began the late Richard J. Koch. Koch was Park Commissioner before.

Eventide Home Withdraws PUD Redevelopment Bid

The Webster School Eventide Home withdrew its bid to develop a new assisted living facility and nursing home at 205-215 Adams St.

As a result, the City Council's public hearing into the change from Residential A to Planned Unit Development (PUD) scheduled for Monday, Jan. 29, at 6:30 p.m. at City Hall has been canceled.

Joyce Haglund, administrator of the Eventide Home, made the withdrawal known to City Council President Richard J. Mondak Monday morning at the 10 a.m. public hearing meeting, the second of a three-part series.

Quincy requested the withdrawal to demonstrate good faith to work with this neighborhood that has legitimate questions and concerns with the current petition.

Eventide directors, wrote Haglund, "agree to reexamine the viability of pursuing its proposed redevelopment project under either existing zoning" or Section 17.12.030 of PUD.

Section 17.12.030 specifically states the school district is not to be used for a public facility, such as a nursing home or assisted living facility.

The City Council, which unanimously approved the PUD application, will meet on Monday, Jan. 29, at 6:30 p.m. at City Hall, 215 Adams St., to vote on the PUD application.

Items in that section are subject to a vote of the City Council sitting as the permitting authority.

The withdrawal, said Haglund, is done "with the

Quincy Asian Resources Offering English Courses To Asian Community

Quincy Asian Resources Inc. (QARI), a Quincy based non-profit social service agency, will offer five ESOL (English for Speakers of Other Languages) classes in three levels in February.

The primary emphasis of the program is on ESOL for living and employment, including English skills that will allow individuals to compete successfully in the workplace and pursue a higher standard of living.

The classes are made possible by grants from the Comcast Foundation and the Sovereign Bank Foundation.

"Through the support of the Comcast and Sovereign Bank Foundations, QARI has been able to expand the ESOL program and reach more people in need of language classes," said QARI Executive Director John Brothers.

QARI's classes are designed for flexibility and are structured around student demands and schedules. Any individuals interested in taking an ESOL class in the Quincy area are encouraged to call our office and make an appointment to register.

QARI trains community volunteers to assist students enrolled in classes with supplemental tutoring. Tutors do not need to be bilingual how ever additional language skills are a plus.

For the spring semester, QARI will offer five classes at the Beginner, Advanced Beginner, and Intermediate levels. ESOL classes are scheduled to start in early February. Classes are offered in the morning and evening to accommodate the busy schedule and demands of our adult students. Classes meet twice a week for 16 weeks.

All of QARI's ESOL classes are taught by instructors with extensive experience and training in language instruction.

Registration is on a first come first served basis and class size is limited. The fee for the classes will be $90. Registered students may purchase their books for $25 from QARI.

Quincy Asian Resources Inc. is a non-profit social service agency dedicated to promoting the development of the Asian-American community to benefit the wider community.

In addition to ESOL classes, QARI also offers information and referral services, sponsors educational seminars, the Quincy Lunar New Year Festival and the Quincy August Moon Festival.

For more information about these programs, contact QARI at 617-472-2200.

City Hires Two New Police Officers, Both With Chinese Language Proficiencies

Mayor William Phelan announces the hiring of two new Quincy Police Officers, both with Chinese language proficiencies.

Bennett Chin and Jimmy Chen were sworn-in during a ceremony at City Hall Monday.

"We are proud to add two fine new officers to an already professional department," said Phelan. "The skill sets that our new officers bring to the job will complement our existing force and assist our city's population well. We will continue to seek ways to improve the provision of City services to our entire population."

Chin has a Masters Degree in Criminal Justice Administration and a Bachelors Degree in Criminal Justice from Western New England College. He has been employed as a police officer at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology since March of 1996. Chin is proficient in both Mandarin and Cantonese.

Chen is also proficient in both Cantonese and Mandarin. His former employers Phelan said, describe him as an excellent worker who is always making those around him better. He is described by others as a hard-working, self-motivated, honest person that would be a great asset to the Quincy Police Department. He has displayed an exemplary attendance record throughout his employment career, Phelan added.

Chief Robert Crowley said: "Our department is a young, well-educated, department that provides the services and community policing that helped make our city the 2nd safest in Massachusetts. Officers Chin and Chen will complement our existing force well and help us continue to improve our department."

Quincy Point Restaurant Gets Several Licenses

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After several abutters and Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond spoke to the License Board Tuesday opposing a request for a Keno, Juke Box, Pinball/Video License at Coop's Bar & Grille, 520-530 Washington St., owner Mario Recupero was granted all of his requests.

Abutters said they had issues with the noise and parking on Shaw and Lebanon Streets. They also feared that once the owner received those requests, that a cabaret license would follow.

Raymond said that times have changed since it was the Knotty Pine. He said that the Atlantic Restaurant as a family restaurant tried very hard, but he said for some reason, "nothing seems to work."

He cited persons urinating on the lawn, beer bottles and cans strewn around the area, plus illegally parked cars on several streets.

Recupero, stressed that his is a "family restaurant" and added he often picks up the debris which he said is not his. He said he doesn't sell bottles or cans of alcohol at his restaurant.

The Keno request according to Chairman Joseph Shea will go to the State Lottery Commission for approval. He added that "Keno doesn't make a lot of difference."

However, when the board voted for the Juke Box license, it was a 4-1 vote with Shea voting against it.

The vote was unanimous for the Pinball/Video License.

Blood Pressure Clinics Free For Seniors

Weekly blood pressure screenings for elders will be held every Monday from 10 to 11 a.m. at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy.

Appointments can be made but walk-ins also are accepted. For more information, call 617-376-1506.

QUINCY COLLEGE BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Seeks Nominations for Board Members

The Appointing Council Shall Meet To Consider Qualified Applicants For Appointments To The Board.

Nominees are to be considered for appointment to fill vacancies.

Board members are advocates for the institution, and have certain governance and oversight responsibilities for the College as specified in the enabling legislation. Members are expected to attend regular meetings, ordinarily scheduled in the evening, and to participate fully as a member of specific subcommittees, usually meeting several times a month during the day. Additionally, members are participants in Commencement, College Ceremonies, and demonstrate in actions and word a commitment to the mission and purpose of the College. Members must submit an annual financial disclosure form to the City Clerk.

Interested individuals must submit a letter of interest and resume, to the Appointing Council, to be received on or before February 1, 2007. The Appointing Council shall meet to consider qualified candidates, and will provide an optional opportunity for interested parties to address the Appointing Council. The Council welcomes diversity in applicants and encourages anyone who believes he or she might contribute positively to the continued success of the institution to respond.

Hidden Shutoff Gas Valves Seen Danger To Residents, Firefighters

The City Council's Public Works Committee got the disquieting word Monday night that dozens of emergency gas shutoff valves in the city have been paved over and street maps are so old that many of them cannot be found.

Ernie Arienti, president of the Firefighters Union local, said he had a gas leak at his own house several years ago and it took gas company workers more than 45 minutes to locate the valve in the street due to poor mapping.

"These gas leaks are a danger to all of us," he said. "I ask you to put into place some type of ordinance that would require the gas company to remedy this situation."

If they can't find these boxes, they are putting citizens and firefighters in harm's way."

The consensus of the councillors was to have the valves elevated to street level and accessible to the Fire Department and Keyspan officials should there be a need to turn them off to avoid a catastrophe.

Council President Doug Gutro said he feels responsibility for the problem lies with Keyspan, the Public Works Department and the contractor.

Working together with the Fire Department, he said, all parties should make this issue a number one priority when the city is resurfacing streets.

Fire Chief Tim Pettunelli read a portion of the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) handbook to the hearing:

"...Any delay in the start of emergency operations will result in a larger loss of property and the possibility of injury or death to civilians and firefighters."

He said he believes that a coordinated effort between Keyspan and the DPW can identify and correct any issues with gate valve and shutoffs.

Mark McDonald, chairman of the New England Gas Workers Association with 3,000 members in the state, said mapping the locations of gate boxes or valves is the key to quick, accessible shutoffs.

Gutro said he feels strongly that the issues boil down "to life and death."

"We've seen explosions in other communities that have been catastrophic in terms of person property damage and loss of life. We need to make sure people are safe."

• On Jan. 24, 1907, Florida engineer Glenn Curtiss sets an unofficial land-speed record on a self-built V-8 motorcycle: 136.29 mph. In 1911, Curtiss built and demonstrated the world's first seaplane for the U.S. Navy.

• On Jan. 28, 1917, American forces are recalled from Mexico after nearly 11 months of fruitless searching for Mexican revolutionary Pancho Villa, who was accused of killing 17 Americans. In 1920, the Mexican government pardoned Villa.

• On Jan. 23, 1922, at Toronto General Hospital, 14-year-old Canadian Leonard Thompson improves dramatically after becoming the first person to receive an insulin injection as treatment for diabetes.

• On Jan. 26, 1934, producer Samuel Goldwyn buys the film rights to "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz" by L. Frank Baum. The film was released in 1939.

• On Jan. 22, 1950, Tucker auto builder Preston Tucker is cleared of all 31 counts of fraud that had been brought against him. But it was too little, too late — the Tucker automobile was history. Many believe that the legal actions against Tucker were sponsored by the Big Three U.S. automakers, who feared his competition.

• On Jan. 25, 1960, the National Association of Broadcasters proposes that disc jockeys accepting payment from record labels for broadcasting particular songs (a practice known as "payola") be charged a $500 fine and spend a year in prison. The end result was approval of an amendment to the Communications Act of 1934 outlawing pay-for-play.

• On Jan. 27, 1975, bipartisan Senate investigation of activities by the Central Intelligence Agency is launched by a special congressional committee. Koch Puts Kick In Election

Tom Koch has put a kick into what was looking like a ho-hum election year.

His announcement that he will challenge Mayor William Phelan came as a surprise to many but not really to those who keep a close eye on the political scene.

Koch is "the well known city figure considering a run" reported here Jan. 4.

But speculation he might run went back to November and December when his name was among those in a couple of political polls taken to size up the political strengths of potential mayoral candidates.

Koch, long-time executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department, a post his late father, Dick Koch, held before him, submitted his resignation to Phelan Tuesday.

That set the stage for the announcement that he will seek the mayor's office.

This could be the first time a department head has opposed an incumbent mayor.

Koch will be Phelan's most formidable challenger since taking office.

In 2003, former Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton jumped into the race as a last minute candidate and never really got an election campaign off the ground.

Phelan cruised to a second term with 73 percent of the vote to Newton's 27 percent. Phelan's vote was 13,117 to Newton's 4,775.

A third candidate, Harvey Kurtzman, owner of a Quincy gas station and a political novice, was eliminated in the preliminary election that year.

In 2005, Phelan had only a write-in opponent who got fewer than 40 votes to Phelan's 9,545.

Unlike Newton, Koch made his decision to run early enough to give him time to plan fundraisers, and to organize a campaign and strategy.

It's estimated that a mayoral candidate needs something like $150,000 to wage an effective campaign. Phelan already has a war chest. Koch has to build one.

Could there be a third candidate—one from the city council? Doesn't look like it.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1923 POSTCARD was the first that we published in this Scenes from Yesterday series that begins its 14th year this week. This view was from the then newly opened Foy's Market at 1259 Hancock St. in Quincy Square looking down Washington Street. Today, the view would be from the doorway of the South Coastal Bank. One the left the W.G. Shaw's Furniture store later become the site of the Bargain Center and is now home to the President's Place complex. The trolleys went straight down Washington Street to the shipyard and left on Coddington Street to Houghs Neck. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Opposes Rezoning Rice Eventide Home

I have felt very fortunate to live in a city and be able to go to neighborhood meetings to express my opinion, hear opinions of others and work together with people from the Mayor's office to improve our neighborhood and make our city a better place to live.

One issue that has come up several times is open space and how important it is to the quality of life, preserving historical sites, and protecting unique aspects of our beautiful city.

On Tuesday, Nov. 7, 2006, the voters of Quincy adopted the Community Preservation Act to preserve open space.

When the tax bill arrived with the charge for the Community Preservation Act included, I thought, wow, finally we have some protection. Hopefully, I will not be disappointed along with many other Quincy residents. Same day I also received a notice from the Quincy Planning Board (thank you very much) notifying me that the William B. Rice Eventide, Inc. is looking to have the land rezoned from Residential A to Planned Unit Development. Examples of property on Planned Unit Development are Wal-Mart and Quarry Hills apartments and condos.

The developers want to demolish the beautiful building that is already there and replace it with a much larger one. Sixteen years ago these same people requested an addition and after many meetings and discussion did and promised they would be satisfied and never requested to build on to the home. Where does it end?

I do hope that our hard working Ward Councillor Doug Gutro and the rest of the illustrious councillors will listen and really represent the will of the people and not allow the land that the William B. Rice Eventide, Inc. is located on to be rezoned.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Quincy Artists Draw Crowd To Weymouth Art Gallery

Several hundred people attended the recent opening of the Art Treasure Gallery, the Dickinson Group's new art gallery in South Weymouth, where some of Quincy's most prominent artists are on display.

The gallery is in a new building next to the entrance to the old South Weymouth Naval Air Station and featured the works of 20 local and national artists.

Tops among the Quincy artistic delegation are Marilyn Reisberg, a master of gold leaf acrylic painting, and Christopher Myers, who is often called upon to capture celebrities in pencil, charcoal or oils.

The next show at the gallery will start in February and consist of the works of two artists.

Quincy Resident's Art Exhibit At Library

Quincy resident Adah Shumway will exhibit her artwork from Feb. 1 to 28 in the Coletti Reading Room on the first floor of the Crane Library.

A public reception will be held Thursday, Feb. 8 from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

The title of the show is "Nature" featuring a combination of slate and sculptural pieces from nature. Shumway is most interested in the intricate details of texture, color and shape, which can be found in the natural world.

She attended Mass Art and received her BFA in Fibers. Since her graduation she has worked for several local artists as well as at Gateway Arts, a day program for developmentally challenged adults. She has also exhibited her artwork locally and in Vermont.

The purpose of her art is to help each person who views it to notice nature and its beauty wherever they are. Her work online is at <http://adahshumway.com>.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

February Film Features At Thomas Crane Library

The free anime and adult monthly film features at the Thomas Crane Public Library will continue through February with Thursday showings of "Fruits Basket" and "A Simple Curve."

"Fruits Basket," which kicks off volume two of the Japanese anime series, will be shown Thursday, Feb. 8, at 7 p.m. at the Main Library, 40 Washington St.

The story revolves around the Sohma family's terrible secret — when a member is hugged by a person of the opposite gender, he or she turns into the 12 animals of the Chinese zodiac.

The program is intended for adults and teens 13 or older and is not suitable for younger audiences.

"A Simple Curve," a Canadian film, will be shown Thursday, Feb. 15, at 7 p.m., also at the Main Library.

It's the story of a small town entrepreneur, juggling mounting debts and free-loading hippie guests, who strikes a deal with a wealthy American that can either make him successful or destroy his way of life.

The film is unrated and not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission.

For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

HEADLINERS. Marilyn Reisberg, shown here with fellow artist William Beyer, was one of the featured artists at the opening. Reisberg employs gold leaf to highlight her acrylic paintings.

OIL WORKER. Kris Kreitman was known for his work in the abstract until recently when he turned to portraits and scenic views in oils. (Nancy Santry Photos)

Accepting Change Key As Kitty Crowley Turns 100

By KELLY ANN GARLAND

"As one grows older," muses Catherine "Kitty" Crowley, "one must be prepared for and willing to accept change."

And she has done just that.

Kitty, a Quincy resident for 65 years, turned 100 the other day, still cooking up a storm, balancing her own check book and talking to friends on her cell phone.

She and her son, Harold, a retired Quincy school teacher, frequently attend the theater and the Museum of Fine Arts together.

They share a common birthday, Jan. 23, thirty years apart. Harold is 70.

Twice a month, Kitty's daughter, Ann, picks her up at her Flagg Street, Wollaston, home and takes her to Plymouth for a bit of shopping and lunch.

Besides Harold and Ann, she has two other children, George and Danny, as well

MILESTONES - Catherine "Kitty" Crowley and her son, Harold, shared birthday milestones Tuesday. She is an active 100 and he an active 70. Quincy Sun photo/Robert Noble as nine grandchildren and eight great grandchildren.

"Money isn't everything," she says. "Family is the most important thing."

Kitty was born while Teddy Roosevelt was president and hasn't missed an opportunity to vote since his cousin Franklin D. was in the Oval Office.

A former bookkeeper, when she isn't entertaining friends she can be found reading historical novels, crocheting writing letters to those closest to her heart.

"My mother has always lived a productive life," says Harold Crowley, "and to live a productive life is to live a good life."

Kelly O'Connell Receives Paul Harold Scholarship

Kelly O'Connell, a member of North Quincy High School Class of 2006 was recently presented the Paul D. Harold Scholarship at the Quincy Marriott.

She is a freshman at UMASS Amherst studying Government.

Each year the Paul Harold Memorial Fund offers scholarships to Quincy and North Quincy High students who will be studying Government. The scholarship is to help students defray the cost of school and hoping that these students will follow the lead of Paul Harold in becoming a community leader.

Scholarship applications for the Class of 2007 will be available in March for this year.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Ann Marie's Easy Pumpkin Pie

With the holidays way behind us and with some having a few extra pounds to shed, here is a great recipe from our daughter Ann Marie. Especially if you still feel deprived and still crave something sweet. When you taste this wonderful crustless pumpkin pie, one would never know it's "light."

It is also a safe one to use for those who are watching their sugar intake.

Easy Pumpkin Pie

- 1 16-ounce can pumpkin (unsweetened)
- 1 13-ounce can skim evaporated milk
- 1 egg
- 2 egg whites
- 2 tablespoons sugar

- 8 packets of sugar substitute
- 2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
- 2 teaspoons vanilla

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly spray a nine inch pie plate with vegetable spray.

Place all of the ingredients in a mixing bowl. Beat for two minutes in a mixer.

Pour into pie plate and bake for 50 minutes.

To serve, cut the pie into eight pieces. Even though there is no crust, it cuts as though there is.

Here are the great numbers for this incredible pie. For each serving, only 114 calories, 18 grams of carbs and only two grams of fat.

Quincy College Expands At New Plymouth Campus

Quincy College's Plymouth campus has moved to Cordage Commerce Center in Plymouth.

The Plymouth campus, established in 1991, was created to serve students from Plymouth, Southeastern Massachusetts and much of Cape Cod. The new facilities hold classrooms, two computer labs, and nursing lab, faculty offices, and a library.

The section of Cordage Commerce Center, once an old rope-making facility, has been transformed by "a great architect we hired to develop our spacious classrooms at Plymouth," said Quincy College President Sue Harris. "High ceilings, tall windows, and insulated walls line the many rooms at the new Plymouth campus. New desks, chairs, and overhead projectors are in place for students to arrive for spring sessions on Jan. 29".

"Quincy College is growing and expanding, and the new Plymouth campus is a direct result of that," said Harris. "Day and evening classes provide plenty of options for Plymouth students on the new warm and welcoming campus. Students can take all their degree requirements at Plymouth, and still have the option of taking classes and using the resources of the Quincy campus."

"With the new Plymouth campus, we have much added opportunity for more diverse programming. "The new campus provides additional classroom space, better entry-way for disabled students, and wireless internet, as well as plenty of parking.

Our lease agreement is good for five years with an option to renew for another five years and another five years after that." Cordage Commerce Center is also home to restaurants and a fitness center, making it the perfect place for students to hang out between classes.

The address of the new Plymouth campus is Cordage Commerce Center, 36 Cordage Park, Suite #228, Plymouth MA 02360. Call 508-747-0400 or visit www.quincycollege.edu for more info.

Edgewater Drive Beach Walk Set For Saturday

A free walk of the Edgewater Drive Beach in Houghs Neck will be held Saturday.

The walk will be hosted by the Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures program and the Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly and local artists lead the walk, which will give participants the opportunity to collect shells, sea glass, pottery shards and other objects brought in by winter storms.

Participants will meet at noon at Brill Field at the end of Sea Street where it meets Island Avenue.

For more information call 617-472-0799.

Stop & Shop Raises $2,630 For Local Food Banks

Food for Friends, the holiday fund-raising arm of the Stop & Shop Companies, raised $1,563 for Quincy Community Action Program and $1,067 for St. Vincent de Paul Society at the Quincy store on Newport Avenue.

"It was another great year for Food for Friends," said

Bill Holmes, executive vice president for operations. "People who are in need this holiday season will benefit from the generosity of our customers and the hard work of our associates."

The Food for Friends program raises funds through the sale of paper turkeys and other events held at Stop & Shop stores. All told, the company raised $1 million to support hunger relief efforts.

All the money will go to local and regional food banks in states where Stop & Shop maintains stores.

George DePaulo Troop Drive Underway At Sterling School

The first annual "George DePaulo U.S. Troop Drive" has begun at Sterling Middle School to help supply our armed forces in the Middle East with the little personal things Uncle Sam has overlooked.

Until Feb. 16, students at the school will be collecting such things as phone cards, shaving cream, Chapstick, sun block, deodorant and insect repellent to pass on to the soldiers.

The drive honors George DePaulo, a decorated Army veteran of World War II who recently retired after 60 years of custodial service in the Quincy Public Schools.

"George knows first hand what our troops need and how much it means to them to have our support," said Earl Metzler and Christine Barrett, principal and assistant principal respectively.

"George . . . has never stopped living the values the Army instilled in him many years ago.

"Values such as loyalty, duty, respect, service, honor, integrity and personal courage are only a few attributes that describe George.

"We are fortunate to have had George to share his personal and Army values with us."

Some non-GI items that could be included in Sterling's "Care Boxes" include:

Writing paper and pens, sweatpants, Tabasco sauce, bags of peanuts, white cotton socks, disposable cameras, powdered drink mix like Gatorade, baby wipes, Q-Tips and baby powder.

White T-shirts, small packs of cereal, gum, Life-savers, batteries, games and puzzles, DVDs and CDs, mouthwash, toothpaste, dental floss, thank you cards and hand warmers.

The only restrictions are travel sizes only, no aerosols, no glass and nothing that will melt.

Supplies can be dropped off at Sterling Middle School, 444 Granite St., Quincy. For more information, call 617-984-8729.

LORETTA DEGRAZIA (center), CEO and president of East Coast Petroleum in Stoughton, was recently named to the Babson College and the Commonwealth Institute list of Top 100 Women-Led Businesses in Massachusetts. With DeGrazia is Maureen Mahoney (left), Boston Beauty Supply, Salon Direct; and Dolores Antonellis, senior administrator, ThermoElectron Corp. The award is based upon 2005 revenues as well as the leadership capabilities of the women who run the businesses. East Coast Petroleum, a full-service heating and air conditioning business, was started by DeGrazia 26 years ago. It is now a $6 million company with 27 employees. ECP recently moved from Quincy to Stoughton due to business demand and increased need for space. A reception for the honorees was held at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Boston.

JWV To Honor 5 High School Students

The Quincy Jewish War Veterans will honor five high school students at its 53rd annual "Classmates Today, Neighbors Tomorrow" breakfast meeting Sunday, March 11.

The breakfast will be held at 9 a.m. at the Morrisette Legion Post, 81-82 Liberty St., South Quincy.

The five students who were selected by their schools as best exemplifying brotherhood in their daily activities are:

Wendell Cosgrove,

Quincy High School; Christopher Boyd, North Quincy High School; Daniel Pope, Weymouth High; Alexander Gilman, Hull High School; and Kelly Ryan, Hingham High School.

JWV Past Commander Harvey Solomon is chairman of the Brotherhood Program. Serving with him on the committee are Commander Bertrand Shaffer, Past Commander Irving Isaacson, Bernie Schaper, Carl Goodman, Richard Korb and Herb Fontaine.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

A Refresher

I'm back.

I pretty much exhausted the fire safety subjects that I was concerned about for you, and so I stopped writing these articles. I think I wrote about 34 in all, which pretty much covered most of my fire safety concerns. However, this cold weather has compelled me to write this article in review of some of the subjects that I have previously covered. I hate fire; I hate seeing what it can do to a household, and so I'll make one more stab here at helping you reduce the risk of a household fire incident.

Let's start in your basement if you have one. The thought of a fire a few years ago where clothing strewn on the floor of a basement was ignited, has promoted this article. At the time of the fire, we were in quite a cold snap. The furnace in that house was working overtime to meet the demands for household heat. Cloths were strewn on the floor adjacent to this furnace, which were left there to be thrown in a washer at a later date. Unfortunately, the clothing was left too close to the furnace and eventually ignited.

Combustibles should not be stored any closer than five feet to your furnace. It's too easy to have loose combustibles casually left adjacent to a furnace, while this is a particular time of year that this practice can lead to a basement fire. Keep basement combustible storage orderly, leaving ample room from potential ignition sources such as a furnace.

Not long ago I responded to another basement fire. When it came time to investigate the origin of the fire it was quite clear that the fire started in a cloths dryer. When it was safe to do so, I invited the homeowner to join me in the basement while I asked him about the dryer itself. He told me that it was relatively new and that the dryer was being used that evening. I then asked him how often he cleaned the lint trap. He responded, "What lint trap?" With that comment the fire investigation was completed.

Lint is a combustible byproduct of the drying process and the dryer manufacturers have included a trap within a dryer so that the lint won't accumulate in the exhaust hose. A clogged lint trap can lead to either ignition of the dryer contents or the lint itself. Therefore, please clean this trap of lint with every use. I'd have to say that nearly every dryer fire that I have witnessed has been caused by failure of the homeowner to clean the lint trap.

Cooking, don't forget, unattended cooking is the principal behavioral factor behind this leading cause of home fires. It is too easy in this day and age to begin cooking and become distracted with other matters. We encourage people to remain in the kitchen once they begin cooking, and if they must leave to another room, have a utensil or potholder in hand as a reminder of their ongoing efforts in the kitchen.

The thought of increased space heater use has also promoted this article. If used, make certain they're placed a minimum of three feet from combustibles, newspapers, furniture, curtains, etc. Make certain they're placed upon the floor in such a manner to avoid tipping. The heater should also never be left unattended or used while sleeping.

Don't forget the importance of having working smoke detectors on every level of habitation. Properly placed, working detectors will give you the notification of smoke within the house affording prompt evacuation to safety.

Kindly consider these tips and those mentioned in many of my previous articles. This article is written as a refresher for these winter months although fire prevention efforts are obviously practical for every month. It is my earnest desire for you to avoid the consequences that I have witnessed at household fire incidents while I believe that taking some simple steps towards preventing fire can minimize its occurrence in your home. Be safe!

Text Of Koch's Resignation

Following is the text of Thomas Koch's letter of resignation delivered by him to Mayor William Phelan Tuesday.

Dear Mayor Phelan: It is with mixed emotion that I inform you of my resignation as Executive Director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

This resignation is effective immediately, however if my service is needed to provide uninterrupted services to our residents I will make myself available to help in any way.

Over the past 12 years, with the help of some dedicated employees we have witnessed a transformation of our park system and it is my hope that our parks, playgrounds, athletic facilities and open spaces will continue to remain a priority. Our public burial places are well maintained and, although we have extended the life of Pine Hill with the reclamation of an underutilized section, we must continue to work to add graves to provide a final resting place for Quincy's families.

I am proud of my record of public service and am grateful to my colleagues in government and, in particular, employees of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments who do outstanding work each and every day, meeting the needs of our residents.

I appreciate the support over the years from the City Council, Park & Recreation Board, and Cemetery Board of Managers. The city is equally fortunate to have so many wonderful organizations and individuals working to make our city a better place to live and I appreciate all their help during my tenure.

I wish you the best as we both strive to serve the people of our great city in our own ways.

Respectfully,
Thomas P. Koch

John Hancock Plunge Rescheduled For Feb. 17

The John Hancock Plunge originally planned for last Saturday at the Mound Street Beach, Quincy Point has been rescheduled for 10 a.m. Feb. 17.

The event was rescheduled so that members of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and the Park Department could attend the memorial Mass for Paul Zambruno at St. Mary's Church. He was a long-time, popular member of the Park Department.

Registration fee for the plunge is $10. Proceeds will go to the Interfaith Social Services.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, chairman of the sponsoring Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission invited all hearty souls to participate.

"Come on down and take a plunge, waist-wade or toe-dunk for a worthy cause," he says.

There will be prizes including ones for the oldest and youngest participants, to the person raising the most money through sponsorship and pledges, and for the most original or comical outfits.

The names of those registering will be entered into drawings for other prizes. Hot coffee and chocolate will be provided.

To register, make out a $10 check payable to Interfaith Social Services and mail to Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, care of Chickie Abdallah, 48 Silver St., Quincy, MA 02169

To reach the Mound Street Beach, take Silver Street off Southern Artery to Mound Street..

Koch Challenges Phelan For Mayor

missioner before him and founder of the Koch Club for boys and girls. He said the service to the city and its young people remains unparalleled and is symbolized annually by Quincy's Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

"It was a dream to hold the same office my father loved for so long, and I want to continue the standard he set for dedication to the people of Quincy in the place where it can do the most good-the mayor's office," Koch said.

Koch graduated from North Quincy High School in 1981 as class president. He spent the next several years running his own landscaping business, a time in which, he said, "his love for his hometown evolved into an enduring commitment to protect and improve Quincy's beautiful open spaces and park land."

Koch ran for the city council in 1985, when he was 22. He lost, but the effort, he said, won him a spot among a new generation of Quincy leaders.

In 1988, Mayor Francis McCauley appointed Koch

city hall's chief liaison to Quincy's growing senior community as director of the Quincy Council on Aging. In this job, Koch said he gained a deep understanding of the many contributions made by long-time Quincy residents, the challenges they face regularly, and the need for government to do everything in its power to protect them.

Koch was the primary architect of what would become the most extensive renovation of the city's park system in history, developing the idea while the top aide to Mayor Sheets in the early years of his administration and seeing it through to reality after he was appointed park commissioner in 1995.

A $10 million plan, developed by Koch in 2001 and financed by fees paid by hotel room guests in Quincy, included an overhaul of Veterans Stadium, Adams Field, and the Mitchell McCoy softball complex plus dozens of improvements to parks and playgrounds across Quincy.

As park commissioner, Koch oversaw a department of more than 40 employees tasked with maintaining hundreds of acres of open space; he spearheaded a citywide beautification effort that continues today; and he coordinated many of the popular public events attended by thousands of residents every year.

Koch is the chairman of the Flag Day committee and still leads several of the Koch Club's charitable efforts. He led volunteer efforts that grew into the "Cleaner, Greener Quincy" neighborhood clean-up effort. He was the first chairman of the city's open space committee nearly 20 years ago. He is a co-founder of Quincy ArtsFest, president of the Quincy City Club and a member of the Quincy Partnership.

Koch is also a lifetime parishioner of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy.

Native of North Quincy, Koch lives just two doors from the Newbury Avenue home where he grew up and where his mother, Simone J. Koch, still lives. He married his high school sweetheart, Christine Keenan. The couple has three children, Cornelius Richard, 10, and twins Thomas, Jr., and Abigail, 8.

Local Agency Provides Online Food Stamp Application Assistance

Project Bread Awards $7,800 To Quincy Community Action

Despite the help food stamps can offer, Massachusetts still has one of the lowest food stamp participation rates in the country.

To help offset this problem, Project Bread is partnering with community-based organizations across the state, like the Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., to increase enrollment and awareness of the Food Stamp Program.

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. recently received a $7,800 grant from Project Bread dedicated to food stamp application assistance and outreach.

The Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. is providing application assistance to clients by using Project Bread's online food stamp application. This program, in partnership with the Department of Transitional Assistance (DTA), gives eligible applicants a convenient, supportive, and secure way to access benefits online.

The electronic process provides greater convenience: applicants can apply right in their own neighborhood; they can work with a counselor who speaks their language and who coaches them through the process; and the program gives applicants a unique tracking number and a confirmed time and date of submission, eliminating the guesswork about when the application has arrived for processing.

Another advance is that the program uses plain language and only asks questions that are relevant to the

About the Federal Food Stamp Program

The Food Stamp Program is a federally funded program that provides benefits to eligible low-income households and individuals. It is aimed at helping individuals and families attain adequate diets, thereby reducing the prevalence of hunger and nutrition-related health problems. Food stamp benefits are distributed in the form of electronic transfer cards, which look like bank cards, and work like cash, to buy food at most grocery stores, supermarkets, and co-ops. Learn more at www.projectbread.org/breadwinners.

applicant - essentially customizing the application process. Additionally, the online application generates step-by-step instructions on how the process works and a personalized list of verifications each applicant will need to mail or fax to complete the submission.

After testing and launching the online application, Project Bread began working with community organizations that offer computer access in low-income neighborhoods to make it available to eligible families without computers. Since then Project Bread has trained over 100 community-based organizations across the state, including fuel assistance programs, community health centers, social service agencies, job training programs, and emergency food providers, to use the online application with their clients.

"This process is a boon to working families looking to stretch their income," said Ellen Parker, executive director of Project Bread. "Applying online at local agencies makes the food stamp application process much easier and more families are able to put food on the table. Food stamps are no longer stamps," continued Ms. Parker. "They come in the form of debit cards, which allows a family to shop for food at their local supermarket. This benefit gives them the option of choice and allows them to shop when it's convenient for them, such as before or after work."

Interested applicants can find the latest information about times and places online at Project Bread's www.gettingfoodstamps.org and click the button on the left sidebar, "How Do I Apply."

Delahunt Votes To Cut Interest Rate On Student Loans

Congressman William Delahunt has voted for legislation to make college more affordable by cutting the interest rate on student loans.

The legislation will cut the interest rate on subsidized student loans for undergraduates in half over the next five years.

The House of Representatives passed the bill last week by a vote of 356 to 71.

"In Massachusetts, there are almost 100,000 four-year college students with subsidized loans—all of whom will benefit from this bill," Delahunt said. "Making the cost of a college education more affordable is critical at a time when the costs continue to skyrocket," Delahunt pointed out.

Studies have shown that, over the past five years, tuition and fees at four-year public colleges and universities have risen 41 percent, putting college out-of-reach for more and more students, he said. Interest rates on student loans have also risen, increasing the cost of college even more. It is estimated that, if Congress does nothing, financial barriers will prevent over four million high school graduates from attending a four-year public college over the next decade, and prevent another two million high school graduates from attending any college at all.

"Cutting interest rates on student loans will certainly make college more affordable. But we must do more," Delahunt said.

Later this year, Congress is expected to take up legislation to increase the maximum Pell Grant scholarship and other measures to reduce the financial barriers to a college education.

The bill passed by the House last Thursday cuts the interest rate in half in five steps: from 6.8% to 6.12% in 2007; 5.4% in 2008; 4.76% in 2009; 4.08% in 2010; and 3.4% in 2011 and will save the typical Massachusetts borrower over $4,470. It is fully paid for by making modest reductions in certain lender and guaranty agency subsidies in order to make the student loan program more efficient and effective for students and for American taxpayers.

This legislation is supported by dozens of organizations, including the American Council on Education, National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, American Association for State Colleges and Universities, American Association of Community Colleges, Alliance for Equity in Higher Education, Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities, College Board, College Parents of America, and the Institute of Higher Education Policy.

understanding that it will be allowed to resubmit an application, if necessary, after this analysis is completed.

"While Eventide has undertaken substantial efforts to inform its neighbors about and to incorporate neighborhood input into its redevelopment proposal, we recognize that our present rezoning petition has caused concern and confusion."

Eventide has held three open houses for residents but neighbors still want to know why the zoning change is needed, said Gutro. The home currently operates under Residence A zoning with variances.

The Eventide Home is planning a completely new three-story building, constructed behind the 70-year-old existing one, which would be torn down and replaced by green lawn.

It would have 52 one-bedroom apartments with dens, four two-bedroom apartments, 16 one-bedroom apartments and a 43-bed skilled nursing facility. It would occupy 112,000 square feet.

The rezoned land would include the present Eventide Home at 205 Adams St. and the adjoining Gardiner Estate, which is owned by the Eventide Home.

Ward 1 Democrats To Caucus Feb. 3

Registered Democrats in Quincy's Ward 1 will hold their annual caucus at the Houghs Neck Community Center Saturday, Feb. 3 at 1 p.m. to elect 10 delegates and two alternates to the 2007 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Delegates will be equally divided between men and women in accordance with Democratic Party rules. Any one at least 18 years old and registered as a Massachusetts Democrat as of Dec. 30 is welcome to attend the caucus and run for a delegate position.

This year's Action Agenda Convention will be held on Saturday, May 19 at UMass Amherst. All Massachusetts Democrats chosen at their caucuses will gather to develop a new Action Agenda outlining grassroots, party building initiatives to prepare us for the Presidential election in 2008.

This year's Action Agenda will incorporate strategies that led to our overwhelming victory in the gubernatorial election, and provide recommendations for attracting more people to the Democratic Party.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must be present at the Caucus consent to nomination in writing. Candidates may make a one-minute statement and may distribute materials on their behalf.

All ballots will be written, secret and recorded by the caucus teller. Those people not elected as delegate or alternate or could not attend the caucus may apply to be

"add-on" delegates in the following categories: youth (35 and under), minority and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the Caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the Delegate-selection process must be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland St., Suite 203, Boston, MA, 02120 within 10 days after the caucus.

For more information, contact the Democratic Ward 1 Chairman Michael Berry @ 617-479-2787 or the Democratic State Committee at 617-776-2676.

Former Hollow Has Another New Name: Firefly's

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The former Hollow Restaurant at 516 Adams St., a popular eatery for many years has changed owners several times in a short time.

It was first sold to the Naked Fish, then it became the Red Sauce. After that it became the Redwood Tavern. Beginning May 1, it will be known as Firefly's.

The restaurant will feature Bar-B-Que and Beyond which will also offer catering.

The License Board at Tuesday's meeting voted unanimously in favor of a new restaurant, and granted a common victualer and all alcoholic license. They also granted a cabaret license for live music.

Richard Barry, counsel for the new owner, Steven Ulliss said Ulliss owns two other restaurants with a similar concept. One in Marlboro and the other one in Framingham. He also owns the Tennessee Barbecue, scattered around the North Shore.

One of the part-owners is Judy Andelman, wife of radio and television celebrity Eddie Andelman.

Barry said that Ulliss's restaurants have won awards for their great food as well as being "very well run".

The new restaurant will undergo extensive renovations, but no structural changes according to Barry.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he still thinks of the site as "back to the Hollow days."

The restaurant will serve lunch three days a week, and dinner seven days a week. The menu will feature all kinds of barbecued sandwiches, salads, desserts and many various platters of barbecued meats.

Police Expert Advises

How To Detect Newest Scam

A new scam, aimed at those trusting souls who are blinded by the prospect of easy money, has reared its ugly head in Quincy.

Fortunately, the first targeted victim who received the tempting letter and check told a neighbor who told Lt. Dan Minton, the Police Department's Crime Prevention Officer.

The scam involves a letter informing the mark that he or she has won $250,000 in a contest. Payment will be made by certified or cashier's check delivered by FedEx.

But first, a check for $4,750 is enclosed which the mark is to cash and send $3,750 by Moneygram or Western Union to cover taxes before the prize can be claimed.

"Once the taxes are paid," says Minton, "the 'winner' will receive the remainder of his winnings. In real lotteries, taxes are not paid this way."

"The bank cashes the check for you, then after a few days, notifies you that the check was bogus. By then you may have sent to money to the scam artists."

"Sadly, too many people fall for this 'get rich quick' scheme. Besides 'too good to be true' common sense, there are many other ways to determine that the offer is bogus."

The mechanics of the current scam may seem crude (see the letter and check on this page) but the ways of spotting it hold true for more sophisticated frauds.

For one thing, says Minton, "the letterhead looks unprofessional. It has no address, telephone or fax numbers."

"The claim number has '08' as the first numbers. This in the year 2007."

"The text of the letters is poorly organized. Business letters tend to have structured paragraphs."

"Specific words are highlighted."

"The closing does not indicate what Linda Wayas is president of."

"The letter is the 'final notice of winning.' Did you get any previous notices?"

"A check of the phone number will tell you that the area code is in Manitoba, Canada, which matches the Canadian stamp on the envelope."

"And the most obvious question: How could you win if you didn't enter the contest?"

The check gives away the scam even more, says

Minton:

"PO Box 6001 is an exceptionally high number for a small town like East Bridgewater."

"Shouldn't Shaws have an apostrophe?"

"The signature on the check does not tell you who the person is."

"The first set of numbers on the bottom of the check is the routing number and should have nine figures."

"And the routing numbers match the number of the check."

"A simple phone call to the Post office and the Police in East Bridgewater show there is no such company as Shaw's Logistics, Inc., there."

"Another phone call will show that Bank of America via Fleet Bank owns the accounts listed to the bogus BankBoston Maine."

"A 'Google' search of the Internet showed no connection between the company names and the persons listed as president and agent."

"The reason these scams keep going on is because it is profitable enough to keep doing them," says Minton.

"Remember, if it is too good to be true be sure to check with someone you trust and, as always, the Quincy Police Department is at your service."

Moving Ideas

Winter Weather Moving Tips

(NAPS)- There are many natural wonders associated with winter, but for people who find themselves moving to an unfamiliar cold-weather climate, it can be daunting and worrisome. United Van Lines, the nation's largest mover, offers the following tips for making the most out of a new winter playground:

- Bundle up. When packing for your move, make sure you keep warm clothes handy. Pack items such as hats, scarves, gloves, boots and coats for the entire family.
- Safe travels. If you are driving to your destination, make sure to stock your car with safety provisions, including a flashlight, first-aid kit, bottled water and tire chains.

• Winterize your home. To prevent unnecessary slips and falls, purchase a snow shovel and bag of ice melt and keep your driveway and front steps clear. Install an easy-to-read outdoor thermometer-you'll be able to keep an eye on falling and rising temperatures and plan accordingly. And before throwing a log on the fire, make sure the chimney and flue are swept and inspected.

• Get acquainted. Become familiar with your new city's local radio and TV stations to stay aware of any road, school and other business closures. Also, get recommendations for a local family physician in case the winter flu strikes.

• Go play. Take the family out for a day in the snow and enjoy the season's offerings-there is a winter activity for everyone!

The Tax Picture

Take Credit For Energy Improvements

(NAPS)- Uncle Sam is ready to give you credit for the steps you take to reduce energy consumption in your home. The Energy Policy Act of 2005 provides valuable tax credits as much as $300 to consumers who purchase qualified high-efficiency heating, cooling and water-heating equipment.

These new tax credits took effect in January 2006. Unlike a tax deduction, which reduces the amount of income subject to tax, a tax credit directly reduces the amount of federal income tax you pay or increases the tax refund you receive.

The new energy legislation defines the type of equipment and amounts of the credit in this way:

- High-efficiency gas, oil and propane furnaces and boilers: $150
- High-efficiency central air-conditioning units, including air-source and ground-source heat pumps: $300
- High-efficiency fans for heating and cooling systems: $50
- High-efficiency water heaters, including heat pump water heaters: $300

Manufacturers and retailers should be able to tell homeowners whether a specific product qualifies for a tax credit. Qualifying efficiencies identified in the bill include:

- Furnaces and boilers: Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency (AFUE) of 95 or higher
- Air-source heat pumps: Heating Seasonal Performance Factor (HSPF) of 9 or greater, Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio (SEER) of 15 or higher and Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER) of 13 or higher
- Central air-conditioning units: SEER of 15 and EER of 12.5.

In addition to providing tax credits, these high-efficiency products also offer homeowners lower home energy bills, increased indoor comfort and reduced air pollution. That's because new equipment employs technologies that make new heating systems much more energy efficient than the furnace or heat pump currently warming your home.

The maximum credit for all taxable years is $500 and applicable to other home energy-efficiency improvements, including the installation of new windows, insulation, doors and roofs. To qualify for tax credits, homeowners will need to verify the efficiency of the equipment and the date when it was placed into service. The equipment must be installed between January 1, 2006 and December 31, 2007.

Preparing Your Roof For Harsh Weather

(NAPS)- When it comes to keeping out winter's cold, rain and snow, your house is only as good as its roof.

That's why it's important to give your roof an inspection twice a year—in the spring, after severe weather, and then again before the worst of winter weather sets in. Keep in eye out for telltale signs of wear, such as loose or missing shingles and deteriorated flashing (the metal that seals bends and joints on skylights, chimneys, etc.). More than 90 percent of all roof damage occurs in these areas. Try these additional tips:

- Inspect the roof edge for damage caused by wind, driving rain and ice dams (where water freezes and backs up under the roofing system).

- Watch for discoloration on the roof, especially dark spots. They could be signs of moisture damage and algae or mold growth.

- Clean your gutters, leaders, window wells and drains of any debris. Leaves sticks and other items can cause water to back up and flow under the roof. It's also important to make sure gutters are securely fastened to your house and to direct all downspouts away from your foundation.

Maintaining Roof Health

If you spot damage, work with a professional roofing contractor who uses quality materials. Doing so can save you time and money and prolong the life of your roof. Plus, it can keep you from having to spring for costly repairs down the road.

A free service that helps homeowners find a qualified roofing contractor is available through GAF Materials Corporation, North America's largest roofing manufacturer. Call (888) LEAK-SOS or visit www.gaf.com.

Window Sheeting Won't Behave

Q. I am trying to put plastic sheets across my windows to keep the cold air from coming in. However, the masking tape I'm using will not stay put. It just keeps peeling off the window frame. How can I get this sheeting to stay up? — George P., Springfield, Mass.

A. Two problems come to mind when trying to get masking tape to stick. First, the surface of the frame may not be too adherent — a glossy paint may resist masking tape, and a dirty or uneven surface also presents difficulties. Second, the surface temperature could prevent sticking. If the room is chilly or the temperature around the window frame is below 50 degrees, masking tape might not stick very well.

Clean the surfaces to which the tape will stick with soap and water, and rinse. Wait for the outside temperatures to rise above freezing, and if possible, for the sun to shine directly on that side of the house, to make the frames as warm as possible. Increase the heat indoors temporarily to create some warmth, too. For a quick heat-up, run a hair dryer along the frame for a few seconds just before applying the tape.

Use the thinnest plastic possible, so that the weight will not drag the tape off.

Another solution is to purchase a different kind of tape, or a window sealing kit. However, to ensure the best adhesion, raise the temperature around the frame even with the sealing-kit tape.

When the weather improves, or during the warmer months, consider replacing leaky windows and frames or, at the very least, improving the weatherstripping materials so that you don't have to use plastic sheeting at all.

NFPA Launches New Game To Teach Children Emergency Preparedness

The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) today launched a new Sparky the Fire Dog® game to help children learn about emergency preparedness.

The game, "Look and Learn," is now available free online. It stresses the importance of being prepared for an emergency by teaching children about items that should be included in an emergency supplies kit.

Each year natural disasters disrupt the lives of hundreds of thousands of children and their families. NFPA developed Risk Watch®: Natural Disasters to help children and their families deal with disasters before, during and after the event. Sparky's® new game is the latest addition to support this effort and is available by visiting NFPA's Risk Watch® Web site at <http://www.riskwatch.org> and entering the "Kids Only" section of the site.

"Everyone runs the risk of experiencing a natural disaster and that includes children," said Amy LeBeau, NFPA's communications manager of public education. "Sparky's new game is a great way for parents and teachers to educate children about emergency preparedness with a fun interactive lesson."

Players of Sparky's "Look

and Learn" visit six different fun and interactive scenes as they are tasked with assisting Sparky by locating hidden items to complete his emergency supplies kit.

During their search for the hidden items, players travel through a Hideaway Island, Campground, Safari, Haunted House, Underwater Adventure and Prehistoric Park to locate things like flashlights, batteries, extra clothing, a whistle, canned food and other items that are often necessities in an emergency. After finding all of the emergency supplies in each section of the game, children will be able to download and print out an emergency supplies checklist that they can use to make their own emergency supplies kit.

Sparky's "Look and Learn" game provides a fun and safe learning experience for kids and there is no advertising on the kids section of the site. The game is most appropriate for children in kindergarten through second grade, but may be of interest to all ages.

NFPA has been a worldwide leader in providing fire, electrical, building, and life safety to the public since 1896. The mission of the international nonprofit organization is to reduce the worldwide burden of fire and other hazards on the quality of life by providing and advocating consensus codes and standards, research, training, and education. Visit NFPA's Web site at <http://www.nfpa.org>.

If you have information on the above crimes, or any crime, please call the Quincy Police Detective Bureau at 617-745-5764. If you wish to report suspicious drug activity, call the Drug Hot-Line at 617-328-4527. You will not be required to identify yourself, but it could help. If you wish to make an appointment to view the Registered Sex Offenders book, call Detective Cindy Walsh at 617-745-5751.

If you wish to contact the Crime Prevention Officer for tips or comments, my direct line is 617-745-5719. My e-mail address is dminton@ci.quincy.ma.us - Lt. Dan Minton.

Each week in The Quincy Sun, the "Quincy Police Hot Spots" page provides readers with numbers to call to report crimes. The telephone number for the "Drug Hot-Line" is 617-328-4527. You will not be required to provide identification or address, although it would be helpful.

Anonymous information via a letter or by leaving a message does not provide an opportunity for the detectives to ask questions to gain further knowledge. Even without identifying yourself, your information can be corroborated (validated) in many ways, such as surveillance, which was used in this particular case.

Some people are reluctant to report suspicious activity for fear of having to testify or of retaliation, but by calling the hot-line with detailed information, the Drug Unit will be working with you to eradicate drug users in your community.

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, Jan. 14, at approximately 1:52 a.m., Officers Mike Powers, James Borden, Joe Nabstedt and Terry Hack were dispatched to Avon Way for a report of a "breaking and entering into a motor vehicle in progress." Enroute to the call, the officers were given descriptions of two suspects who had fled on foot.

As the units searched the area, Officer Powers interviewed the victim and learned that she had walked up the staircase from Burgin Parkway, then uphill to Avon Way, where she had parked her car. As she approached her car, she spotted two young males at the passenger side window. She stated they ran after scanning the area and seeing her.

The victim found that the passenger window was shattered but nothing was taken. She said that she just put in a new radio after her car had been broken into recently.

Shortly after the interview, a security officer at 125 Granite St., who monitors the police scanner, called dispatch to say two males matching the description just ran through the parking lot. After a brief search, Officer Hack radioed that he had two suspects, who were out of breath, stopped on Parker Street.

The officers split up the suspects and questioned them. The first suspect said they were just hanging out smoking, while the second suspect stated they were walking from North Quincy to the first suspect's home on Independence Avenue.

Based on discrepancies in their stories, the suspects matching in clothing and physical descriptions, that they were out of breath, Sgt. Mark Kennedy directed a "Show-Up Identification" procedure. This is done by having an officer bring the victim/witness to the scene to either positively identify the suspects or set them free. The suspect can also be brought to the victim. Officer Borden brought the victim to their location and she immediately stated they were the males who were at her car window.

After placing the suspects under arrest, a search revealed three cell phones on suspect #1. Suspect #2 had numerous sets of keys in his pockets, $501, a cell phone, a folding knife and a "Virtual Reality Sound Labs VR3" for Sirius radio. Suspect #1, an 18-year-old Easton resident, was charged with "breaking and entering in the nighttime of a motor vehicle." Suspect #2, a 17-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with the same offense. He also has an extensive history of breaking and entering. On Oct. 23, 2006, he was arrested in Weymouth for "breaking and entering in the nighttime, larceny from a building and resisting arrest."

Nice work! In this particular case, on the positive side, the victim was aware of her surroundings and was looking ahead to spot potential problems. Suspects often flee when they believe that they can get away without being caught. The victim was able to make note of their description and avoided confrontation by staying a safe distance away. The victim was able to prevent a confrontation and by using her cell phone, was able to contact the police right away.

On the negative side, the victim did not plan well in selecting a location to park. The area itself is safe, but the distance she walked increased her chances of being victimized, especially at a time when most are asleep and no one is around. Walking from the area of the Quincy Center train station to the top of the hill was not a good idea. Next time, leave your car in a well-lit location, preferably with people or traffic nearby.

Tax Tips From the Experts. The IRS Will Pay You to Work

Did you know the IRS and Mass. Department of Revenue might actually pay you for working? It's not for everyone, but if you are working and have sufficiently low income the IRS and Mass. DOR will provide you with a significant refundable credit. You receive this credit in the form of a tax refund even if you don't owe income tax.

The maximum credit for Federal tax returns ranges from $412 for a taxpayer with no children to $4,536 for taxpayers with two or more children. Earned income (wages, self employment income and disability income) for you or your spouse, may not exceed the limits ranging from $12,150 to $38,350 depending on your marital status and the number of qualifying children you have. There are also limits on unearned income such as interest and dividends. The amount of the credit increases as your earned income increases and begins to decrease when your earned income reaches a certain point (when your earned income exceeds the maximum limits) and is phased out. The credit Massachusetts tax returns is 15% of the federal credit.

If you qualify for the credit you do not have to wait until the end of the year when you file your income tax return. Your employer can arrange to pay the credit directly into your paycheck.

However, determining if you're eligible and computing this credit is complex. The IRS provides an interactive program to determine qualifications and amounts for the credit. You can access this information by visiting our web site <http://www.sstaxquincy.com>. Click on Internet Links and then on "Do I Qualify for the Low Income Tax Credit?"

Healthy Behaviors Can Prevent At Least 50 Percent Of Cancer Deaths

Cancer Society To Educate Americans About Reducing Cancer Risk

The American Cancer Society has launched a new campaign to educate Americans about how to reduce cancer risk.

Many Americans think that there is little they can do to avoid getting cancer, but in fact, at least 50 percent of cancer deaths could be prevented through healthy lifestyle factors, including maintaining a healthy body weight, eating a healthy diet, getting sufficient physical activity, limiting consumption of alcohol, not smoking or using other tobacco products, and getting cancer screening tests. Research indicates that cutting cancer death rates by 50 percent nationally would save about 280,000 lives every year in the United States, and 6,700 in Massachusetts.

"An American Cancer Society survey found that 47 percent of adult Americans think they have little or no control over reducing their cancer risk, but that is not the case," said Gayle Bagley, area director for cancer control at the American Cancer Society. "The Great American Health Challenge will help raise awareness about how Americans can prevent cancer in their own lives, and will give them the information and tools to embark on, or maintain, a healthy lifestyle."

The American Cancer Society's Great American Health Challenge asks Americans to make a commitment to take the following actions to reduce their cancer risk:

- Check — Find out which cancer screening tests are appropriate based on age and family history, and discuss these with your doctor.

- Screen — Get cancer or detect it at its earliest, most treatable stage. In January, take the Great American Health Check.

- Move — Be physically active most days of the week, and strive for 30 minutes of exercise on five or more days.

- Nourish — Eat a healthy, well-balanced diet that includes whole grains, five or more servings of fruits and vegetables daily, and limit consumption of red meats, especially high-fat and processed meats. In August, participate in the Great American Eat Right Challenge.

- Quit — Stop smoking, or join the fight against tobacco as an advocate for smoke-free communities. In November, participate in the Great American Smokeout®.

"The Great American Health Check is the first step in the year-long Health Challenge. Through the Health Check, we are encouraging Americans to log onto our Web site at www.cancer.org/greatamericans to learn more about how they can live a healthier life and make informed decisions to help reduce their risk of cancer," said Bagley.

The Great American Health Check (www.cancer.org/greatamericans) assesses an individual's risk for cancer and provides a customized action plan.

Easy-to-use and confidential, this interactive online tool allows users to enter age, gender, height, weight, family history of cancer, dietary habits, physical activity levels, and alcohol and tobacco use for themselves or a loved one. The information results in an individualized action plan that provides guidance on which cancer screening tests are appropriate based on age and family history and should be discussed with a doctor. It also offers day-to-day lifestyle suggestions on how to eat healthy, get the right amount of exercise, limit alcohol use and quit smoking.

Screening can detect cancers of the breast, colon, rectum, cervix, prostate, oral cavity, and skin at early stages, when treatment is more likely to be successful. In addition, tests for cervical and colorectal cancer may detect changes in cells before they become cancerous. The five-year survival rate for cancers that can be prevented or detected earlier by screening is about 86 percent, a percentage which reflects real reductions in cancer deaths as well as earlier diagnosis because of screening.

The Great American Health Check will be followed later this year by other Great American Health Challenge components that address nutrition, physical activity and tobacco use. In August 2007, the Great American Eat Right Challenge will provide practical advice and personalized tips on adopting healthy eating habits and getting regular physical activity to maintain proper body weight.

The 31st anniversary of the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout® will take place in November 2007, and will continue its history of inspiring and helping smokers to quit.

The Society estimates that in 2006 about 170,000 cancer deaths were expected to be caused by tobacco, and scientific evidence suggests that about one-third of the cancer deaths that occur in the U.S. each year are due to nutrition and physical activity factors, including excess weight.

For the majority of Americans who do not use tobacco, dietary choices and physical activity are the most important modifiable factors in cancer risk.

"The Great American Health Challenge provides a comprehensive health improvement and cancer prevention plan," said Bagley. "And when you take steps to live healthier, you will feel better, look better, and enjoy life to the fullest."

For more information on the Great American Health Challenge, call the American Cancer Society, anytime day or night, at 1-800-ACS-2345 or log on to www.cancer.org/greatamericans.

The American Cancer Society is dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by saving lives, diminishing suffering and preventing cancer through research, education, advocacy and service.

Husband-Wife Workout

Q. My husband and I both retired recently, and we decided to begin to exercise together. We have different strengths and personal goals and don't want to hold the other back, but we really want to do this as a team. Is possible for both of us to work out together and still reach our individual fitness goals?

A. It is wonderful that you and your husband have decided to exercise together. Having a workout partner to help keep you accountable, motivated and committed to your workout routine can make reaching your fitness goals easier and possibly more fun.

Although you may have different fitness goals from your husband's, a few modifications can be made to your individual workouts to produce a successful partnership.

When planning your workouts, decide what goals you and your husband have in common. For example, if you both want to complete 40 minutes of cardiovascular exercise each workout, you both can complete the activity on the same piece of exercise equipment, although you might not work at the same intensity.

Also, if you and your husband enjoy exercising outside, but cannot run, ride or walk at the same pace, consider having one of you ride a bike while the other runs or uses inline skates. You both will be completing the cardiovascular exercise at the same time and at an intensity you personally can handle, while not making anyone feel left behind.

Many people believe that if someone is stronger than another then their workout routines will be completely different. This is not necessarily true. Almost every exercise can be modified for anyone from beginners to advanced. You and your husband can use the same resistance machines, but the weight your husband uses does not have to be the weight you use. Also, the progression of the exercise does not have to be the same.

For example, if you both wanted to do push-ups, there are many progressions to completing this exercise. Whether done with your knees on the ground, against a wall or in a standard push-up position, the benefits of the exercise still can be achieved.

Another option could be to complete part of your workout together, then separate to complete other exercises before meeting up again. For example, you can do your cardiovascular workout together, then your strength training separately and later meet up to complete your flexibility and cool-down routine together.

Having a workout partner can be a great tool for fitness success. Be creative.

THE PORCELAIN STANDARD

When it comes to treating discolored or damaged teeth, porcelain veneers are the aesthetic standard against which all other restorative procedures are compared. Porcelain veneers are thin, semi-transparent shells of porcelain that the dentist permanently bonds to the teeth when the front surface of the tooth and the biting edge are in need of restoration. They may be used to correct broken or chipped teeth, permanently stained teeth, spaces between teeth, or misshapen or crooked teeth. While composite resin bonding may be a quicker and less expensive restorative procedure, porcelain veneers are exceedingly strong and natural looking. They have a translucent appearance that lends a look of depth to tooth surfaces that closely resembles natural teeth.

The development of advanced techniques has enabled us to change your smile overnight by using porcelain veneers. Nothing conveys good health and enhances your smile more than clean, white teeth! If you have questions about cosmetic dentistry, please call us today. We provide the best care possible by evaluating your needs individually. We'll explain our findings and recommendations, and together we'll choose the best treatment plan. Whether you need veneers or just a routine cleaning, we invite you to make an appointment with us by calling 617-479-6220. Your positive attitude towards your dental health is the key to successful dental care. We're located at 44 Greenfield Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com. P.S. Porcelain veneers are not an appropriate choice for people who grind their teeth.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Is that Arian self-esteem in need of shoring up? Best advice: Do something that will make someone feel good about him- or herself. It will make you feel proud that you did it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's time to prove to your detractors that you're way ahead of them when it comes to getting things done. So, be sure to avoid surprise distractions and complete that project as soon as possible.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be careful not to waste your precious energy on frivolous matters that don't advance your goals. Stay focused. There'll be time enough for fun and games after you reach your objective.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You've done well on your own. But now could be a good time to consider advice from confidantes, as long as you continue to let your own instincts be your primary guide.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A belated New Year's "gift" could create a problem if you feel unwilling or unable to adjust your plans to accommodate the new development. Check all options before deciding.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) There's a possibility that you could be goaded into making a statement you might regret. It's important to try to stay cool no matter how heated the conversation gets.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A recent sad experience can become a valuable lesson. Examine it well and take what you've learned to help you make that important upcoming decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Linger problems in a personal or professional partnership still need to be resolved so you can move on. Insist on more cooperation from everyone.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) That recent problem that made you feel emotionally trapped and physically exhausted is gone. Don't dwell on it. Instead, make new plans and set new goals.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your creative talents combine with a strong domestic aspect, which means you can start on those home-improvement projects you've been planning for a long time.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It's a good time to anticipate a change in the near future. This could mean taking on a new career, going off to a new city or moving into a new home.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Soon, you should be learning more about the motives of those who continue to pressure you into making a decision you're still not sure about. Use this information wisely.

BORN THIS WEEK: The flow of your generosity seems to have no limit. But you're smart enough to know when it's time to cap it.

21 Points, 17 Rebounds For Junior Forward Lee Leads Red Raiders Over Dennis-Yarmouth

By SEAN BRENNAN

All season long the young North Quincy boys' basketball team has been waiting for that game when the momentum of a long season would shift in their direction. Last Friday night, the Red Raiders may have gotten that shift with a thrilling 52-50 overtime victory against a powerful Dennis-Yarmouth team.

The Red Raiders, who currently boast an overall record of 4-6 and a 3-5 record in the Atlantic Coast League, jumped on the back of junior forward Marcellus Lee and hung-on for a huge road victory.

Lee finished the game with some monster numbers to go along with some outstanding defensive play. His 21 points (19 in the second-half) and 17 rebounds helped the Raiders secure the upset special against the Dolphins.

"A clutch performance by Marcellus Lee," head coach Kevin Barrett said. "The game he played helped us earn this huge road win. He controlled the defensive boards all game long and his nineteen second-half points got us to overtime and ultimately earned us the win."

The win did not come

without its fair share of drama. The Dolphins had a golden opportunity to win the game in regulation, but luckily for the Raiders fell just short. With just under one second left in regulation, a Dennis-Yarmouth player fouled and awarded two free throws, he missed on both attempts, and the game went to overtime.

"With two-tenths of a second left we committed a shooting foul," Barrett said. "The kid missed both and we dodged a bullet. To win a game like this on the road and in overtime hopefully will result in that momentum shift we have been waiting for all season long."

The Red Raiders came into the Dennis-Yarmouth game on a roll after defeating Plymouth South last Monday (1/15) by a score of 58-43.

In the solid effort versus Eagles, the Red Raiders spread out the scoring and were never really challenged all game long.

Junior Tim Kerins finished the game with a team-high ten points. Others contributing to the league win included Lee (9 points) and seniors Matt Edgerly (9 points) and David Ray (8 points).

"This was a game in which we controlled the game both defensively and offensively for two full halves," Barrett stated. "It was a well-balanced scoring attack (as you can see from the scoring sheet). It was a good way to start the week."

At 4-6 overall, the Red Raiders are in prime position to make a late-season run, and maybe a post-season appearance. The shift in momentum is only as good as their game performance in the final weeks of the season, but for now, North Quincy knows it can win on the road against the best team the Atlantic Coast has to offer.

"We are going to take it one game at a time," Barrett said. "It starts on Monday against Barnstable and then against Quincy at the end of the week."

North Quincy, who will have played Barnstable High School (1/22) already this week, hosts Quincy High School on Friday night. The much-anticipated city clash will tip-off at 6:30 p.m. in the NQHS Gymnasium.

CHILDREN FROM THE South Shore YMCA in Quincy attended a recent Boston Celtics home game as part of "McDonald's RMHC Community Section," and were invited to have their photo taken on the parquet floor of the TD Banknorth Garden. As guests in "McDonald's RMHC Community Section," the children also had the opportunity to see both teams in the pre-game shoot-around prior to the Boston Celtics game against the Cleveland Cavaliers Jan. 3.

Also, for the first time, anyone who played baseball for the "Old" Quincy Trade School will also be eligible for induction into the Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame.

To nominate a former player, send your nomination letter with player information to Joe Brill, Committee Chairman, 87 Woodcliff Rd. Quincy, MA 02169.

For more information call Joe Brill at (617) 770-4813.

2-1 Week For Presidents

A 2-1 week would seem to be a pretty decent result for most high school basketball teams, but for the Quincy Presidents and head coach Bob Fisher, the winning record was not indicative of how Quincy basketball should be played.

"We have yet to find our team identity," Fisher stated this week. "At this time of the year, we should be improving, but we are not improving as much as we should be and because of that we have some work to do. We are not playing all that well and we are not coaching all that well. There is a lot of work that we need to do to get to where we need to be. This is not Quincy basketball."

The game in question was last Friday night's Atlantic Coast League tilt versus the Clippers of Falmouth High School. The Presidents, whose record now stands at 8-3 overall and 5-2 in ACL play, got blown out on the road, 69-49.

The team never got its legs underneath them and quickly fell behind to Falmouth early in the first-half, and the Presidents were never able to produce any type of significant comeback.

"We probably should have just stayed on the bus and kept on going to Martha's Vineyard," Fisher lamented.

In the loss, Quincy's Doug Scott led all President scorers with seventeen points. Senior captain Steve Connolly finished the game with eleven points and junior point guard Paris Amado contributed nine points in defeat.

"In the second-half they (Falmouth) just lit us up," Fisher said.

Quincy started their week with a league win over Sandwich High School. The Presidents stormed out early in the first-half and continued their solid play throughout the second-half and wound up winning 66-30.

"In this game, everybody got a chance to play," Fisher said. "We played real well and it was a good win for the team."

Senior guard Sean Boyd led all scorers with a season-high nineteen points and he made five three pointers. Amado finished the game with sixteen points, and Scott (10 points) and Connolly (9 points) also played well for the Presidents.

"Boyd easily played his best game in a Quincy uniform," Fisher said. "He shot the ball extremely well from three point territory."

In a non-league game against King Philip High School last Wednesday, Quincy jumped out to a 36-18 half-time lead and never looked back.

Connolly had a game high fourteen points in the win. Scott (11 points), junior Martin Bowes (10 points) and Amado (9 points) all played significant roles in the blowout win. Senior Matt Boyle chipped in with nine points in his best game of the season for the Presidents.

This Friday night the Quincy Presidents will travel down Hancock Street to play in the first of two games against cross-town rival North Quincy, but at the moment coach Fisher and his team are more focused on their league game against Marshfield. (which was played last night).

"At the moment we need to focus all of our attention on Marshfield," Fisher said. "After that game we will begin thinking about and game planning for the North Quincy game. Each game is important, and we need to start playing Quincy basketball, starting against Marshfield."

Quincy's Torpey Torches Sandwich In Rout, 60-45

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy girls' hoops team will need to put last two weeks behind them as they move forward into the final games of their regular season.

The Presidents played four Atlantic Coast League games the last two weeks against Whitman-Hanson, Dennis-Yarmouth, Sandwich and Falmouth and finished the three-game stretch with a 1-3 record. Quincy's record on the season stands at 5-6 overall and 4-3 in the ACL.

In the game versus Whitman-Hanson, the Presidents could muster only 29 points against the reigning league champions, and ultimately fell in defeat, 51-29.

The Presidents stumbled out of the gate and scored a total of 12 first-half points, but a good defensive effort helped keep Quincy in the game at the half. Down by 12 to start the second half, the Presidents regained some of their offensive intensity and cut the Panthers lead to five in the opening minutes of play.

"Tonight was a frustrating loss for our team on the road versus the reigning league champs," head coach Jeff Bretsch said. "Despite nearly six minutes of scoreless play to open the game, we had a surge to start the second half, due largely to an increased defensive effort and some hot shooting from Meagan Tobin to cut their lead to just five points."

After cutting the double-digit deficit to five, the Presidents ran out of gas. Whitman-Hanson regained control on both ends of the court, and with the help of some costly turnovers and foul trouble by Quincy, the Panthers put the game out of reach.

The Presidents had the chance to earn an important league victory against lowly Dennis-Yarmouth (1-9), but the team could not come up with a scoring run and lost 45-41.

"We were caught off-guard by Dennis-Yarmouth," Bretsch said. "It was our most frustrating game of the season thus far. The girls were never able to get things going."

Quincy was playing the game without all-star point guard Marybeth Torpey (injury), and as a result Bretsch was forced to shift Tobin to the point position. Tobin finished the game with eight points, while senior Brigid Kyle led all Quincy scorers with nine points.

In the team's game against Sandwich, the Presidents responded to the challenge and came away with a huge 60-45 victory.

Torpey returned from her injury to have her best game of the season, scoring 17 points on near-perfect shooting. Kyle (8 points) and freshman Leslie Campbell (8 points) both played well for Quincy, and senior Hope Collins turned in a stellar defensive effort.

"After last Friday's dismal Cape Cod outing (against Dennis-Yarmouth), the girls rode into Sandwich on a mission," Bretsch said. "In a back and forth first-half that ended with us leading 27-24, the team succeeded in establishing our twin goals of a strong defensive presence and a sense of confidence on the offensive end. Meagan Tobin (19 points) led the charge early, scoring 10 first-half points. It was a big win for our team."

Quincy struggled from the floor and the free throw line against Falmouth, and as a result lost the game, 58-36.

"Shooting 19% from the floor and 36% from the free throw line doesn't get the job done," Bretsch said. "We only had eleven turnovers, but we were unable to convert on many of the fifty-six shot attempts we took and managed only fifteen first-half points."

The leading scorers for the Presidents were Brigid Kyle and Meagan Tobin. Both Kyle and Tobin finished the game with eleven points each.

Quincy played last night (1/23) against Marshfield High School and next plays this Friday at North Quincy. The game against the Red Raiders will begin at 5 p.m. in the NQHS Gymnasium. Quincy will have its hands full as the Red Raiders are one of the top teams this season in the Atlantic Coast League.

Host Quincy Friday

North Quincy Notches Two More League Wins

As these long winter days keep getting colder and colder, the North Quincy girls' basketball team keeps getting hotter and hotter.

The Red Raiders went into last week with an impressive 9-2 overall record and a stellar 5-1 record in Atlantic Coast League play. By the end of the week, the Raiders had notched two more league victories, and now with an 11-2 overall record and a 7-1 league mark, the Raiders are holding all the best cards.

Last Monday (1/15) on Martin Luther King, Jr. Day, North Quincy traveled down to Plymouth South and dismantled the Eagles, 66-54. Junior sensation Rebecca Goreham did everything but drive the bus in the win. Goreham, who is having an all-star season, finished the game with nineteen points and ten rebounds.

Sophomores Siobhan Carnell and Catherine O'Connell each finished the game with twelve and eleven points, respectively.

"The trip down to Plymouth South was well worth it," head coach Doug MacFarlane said. "We got up by as many as twenty-two points, and it gave me the chance to get everybody in the game. Rebecca once again led the way for us."

The team's second victory of last week came against the lowly Dolphins of Dennis-Yarmouth High School. North Quincy built a big lead and easily dispatched of D-Y, 50-32.

Goreham notched her second double-double of the week with nineteen points and 14 rebounds, giving her 38 points and 24 rebounds in the two game stretch.

North Quincy, which was without the service of Carnell (limited minutes due to injury) turned to the rest of the bench for offensive support. Senior Megan Therrien finished the game with six points and eight rebounds in one of her best all-around games of the season. O'Connell continued her good play with six points of her own, and sophomore Jess Howlett (playing for Carnell) scored six points for the Red Raiders.

"We are playing real good at the moment," MacFarlane said. "Although these two wins were against some of the weaker teams in the Atlantic Coast League, it was still important to keep winning."

The Red Raiders are hot at the moment, but with an upcoming schedule of games against the upper echelon of the ACL, including cross-town rival Quincy (twice), Marshfield, defending league champions Whitman-Hanson and Plymouth North, plus non-league games against Malden and Brockton, North Quincy needs to turn the heat up even more.

"This two week period we are about to begin will be very tough for the team," MacFarlane said. "You can throw away any records when we play Quincy. Any time we play each other it is a difficult game. The game against Whitman-Hanson could decide which team finishes at the top of the Atlantic Coast League standings. They are the perennial league champs and they won the league title outright last season."

The Raiders are in a good position at the moment because of solid team play and the outstanding play of Rebecca Goreham. Goreham, who has been a nice player for two years, has turned out to be a revelation this season. Her play has helped elevate the overall performance of her team, and the results have not gone unnoticed by MacFarlane.

"Rebecca has gotten better and better this season," MacFarlane boasted. "She has gotten bigger and stronger and has become an all-around player this year. She is on track (for next season) to break the all-time assists and steals record after already breaking the school rebound record earlier this year."

"The next five games will determine where we are at. I would be pleased with winning three out of the next five. It is almost tournament time and my hope is that we have not peaked too soon."

If the cold is getting to you, do yourself a favor and go check out a North Quincy Red Raider game. This team is hot, and will most certainly warm you up on a cold winter evening.

North Quincy played Malden this past Monday and next plays this Friday against Quincy at 5 p.m. on their home court.

Juliana Eagles Rookie Of Week

Juliana Eagles, a Quincy resident and a freshman at Anna Maria College, recently turned in her finest weekly collegiate performance to date.

Eagles helped lead the AMCats' women basketball team to a 2-1 week by averaging 15.3 points per game and never scoring fewer than 10 points in any of the three games. Against Rivier College, Eagles scored a career high 26 points.

For her efforts, Eagles earned the CCC Rookie of the Week honors. It was the second time this year Eagles has captured that honor.

WEIGHT AND FUEL MILEAGE

Any car enthusiast will tell you that weight is the enemy of performance. Even if you don't race cars, you know that less weight translates to better mileage. With this in mind, motorists are advised to take all unnecessary items out of their vehicles. Taken to the extreme, even losing weight can make a difference. A recent study found that, collectively, Americans are burning nearly one billion more gallons of gasoline annually than we did in 1960 because we weigh more. Government figures show that Americans weigh about 25 pounds more per person, on average, than we did in 1960. It is estimated that, for every additional pound of passenger weight, Americans use 39 million gallons of fuel yearly.

Although losing weight to save gas mileage may sound extreme, it really does work. At Leo & Walt's Sunoco, we recommend removing all unnecessary items. It could save you money. Located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we can help you save gas by performing maintenance on your vehicle. By taking proper care of your car, truck, or SUV, you can improve your current gas mileage. Call 781-843-1550 to schedule an appointment today. Remember, we are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: One way that auto manufacturers reduce weight in vehicles is by eliminating the spare tire and replacing it with run-flat tires.

Presidents Edge D-Y, Near Tourney Berth

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents are gliding right along this winter, and with a 7-1-2 overall record, 4-1-2 in the ACL. Quincy is sitting near the top of the Atlantic Coast League hockey standings. The team is just four points away from qualifying for the state tournament.

Two Saturdays ago (1/13), the Presidents hosted Dennis-Yarmouth High School, and came away with a 4-3 victory. Quincy, continuing their balanced scoring trend, got goals from Mike Leone, Nick Masone, Kevin Keith and Mark Gilbody.

"It was an up and down game," head coach Bob Sylvia said. "We still are having some trouble moving the puck out of our own end, and we are still fighting the opposing forecheck, but the balanced scoring from all of our lines is encouraging."

Quincy showed some of the grit that will be needed as the games get more important during a 4-4 tie against an elite Falmouth High School team last Saturday (1/20).

"This was a great comeback for our team," Sylvia said. "Falmouth is among the elite teams in our league."

The Presidents received solid games from a handful of players, and got goals from Gilbody (2 goals/3 points), Kevin Shea and Casey Conley (1-goal/2 points). Sophomore goaltender Jeff Giordani stopped thirty-one shots for the Presidents. Junior Ted Walsh finished the game with three points.

"What I like about the team is the balanced scoring, great goaltending and solid defense that we are playing," Sylvia said. "Conley, Walsh, Gilbody and Keith are all putting the puck in the back of the net. On the redline, Shea and Zach McCaul are playing great and no one can find fault with the goaltending we have received from Giordani and Bo Craig. We are just four points away (from qualifying for the tournament) from one of our preseason goals."

The Presidents will play tonight (1/24) on the road versus Marshfield High School before getting ready to play against North Quincy on Saturday, and if they can hold serve against these two teams, Quincy will be right in the mix for a league title.

"We are hoping to continue to play good hockey," Sylvia said. "Marshfield and North Quincy are elite teams, and if we can play well versus both of them then we deserve to be right in the thick of things moving forward. The whole team is playing together and that is a good sign this late in the year."

Raiders Tie Sandwich, Plymouth South, D-Y

The North Quincy Red Raider boys' ice hockey team played to a draw three times last week.

The Raiders earned one point with ties against Sandwich, Plymouth South and most recently against Dennis-Yarmouth High School. North Quincy's record now stands at 4-3-3 overall and 4-1-2 in the Atlantic Coast League.

Last Saturday (1/20), North Quincy had to settle for a 3-3 tie against the Dolphins of Dennis-Yarmouth. The team, behind two goals from senior captain Jimmy Fitzpatrick and one goal from defenseman Joe Canavan, took a 3-2 lead deep into the third period, but could not prevent host D-Y from evening up the score with just over three minutes to play.

Senior goalie Max Adams stopped 28 shots in the tie.

North Quincy got on the scoreboard first on a Fitzpatrick goal (assisted by Canavan) with 57 seconds left in the first period. After Dennis-Yarmouth got the equalizer early in the second period, the Red Raiders took a 2-1 lead on Fitzpatrick's second goal of the game. Sophomore Matt Rodriguez was credited with the assist on the goal.

Canavan scored the team's third and final goal on a slapshot from the backline, but for the third time in as many games, the Red Raiders had to settle for the tie.

North Quincy next game is a big one. This Saturday at the Quincy Youth Arena, the Red Raiders will face-off against their cross-town rival, the Quincy Presidents. Quincy (7-1-2) and North Quincy are two of the better teams this winter in the ACL. This will be the first of two games the two city teams will play against each other this season. The second game will be held on Feb. 14.

The puck will be dropped at 7:50 p.m.

WINTER CAR CARE

Get Your Car Ready For Cold-Weather Driving

By MARK SALEM

(NAPS) - Frigid temperatures and poor road conditions won't leave you out in the cold or take a toll on your vehicle if you take the right steps to make sure your car is winter-weather ready.

Here are a few simple suggestions that should help steer you in the right direction.

Crank up the heat. Don't wait until snow is on the ground or frost is on your windshield to test out your heater and defroster. Exercise all the heater and defrost settings before winter weather strikes to make sure that they are working properly and address any problems immediately. Your comfort and that of your passengers depends on it.

Check your oil. During winter, you need an oil that can handle low temperatures and quickly flow to critical engine parts on those cold mornings. A fully synthetic oil such as Mobil 1 is ideal for the winter months; it's designed to flow well even in lower temperatures and is an excellent oil overall. (For more information about Mobil 1, go to www.mobiloil.com.)

Test your tires. Your tire pressure will go down as the weather cools, so make sure your tires are inflated properly. Too little pressure will increase wear and increase your fuel consumption; too much pressure can reduce traction, especially in icy conditions. The proper air pressure listings are often found on the side of the driver's side door or in your owner's manual. Make sure you also inspect your treads and replace any tires that look worn.

Stock the trunk. It's always smart to be prepared, so make sure you keep a few useful items in your trunk. I'd recommend including a small shovel to help dig out snow, an ice scraper to clear windows, headlights and taillights of snow and ice and a bag of sand to add weight and improve traction while driving in winter weather. It's also a good idea to keep a set of jumper cables in your car to help get you back on the road if your battery dies. Finally, throw an extra blanket, hat, gloves and some high-energy snacks in the trunk, just in case. A gallon of drinking water isn't a bad idea either.

Allow extra time at start-up. Let your vehicle warm up before hitting the highway. Allowing the engine to idle for a few seconds before driving off will ensure proper oil flow and lubrication. That said, don't allow the engine to idle for a prolonged period after start-up in cold weather. This doesn't do anything to warm drivetrain components and wastes fuel. After starting your car and allowing it to idle for a short time, just drive easily for several miles to ensure proper vehicle warm-up. A simple rule of thumb is if your car is a 1990 model or older, allow it to idle no longer than 3 to 4 minutes. For newer vehicles, a minute or 2 is all you need.

Don't forget to make time for your vehicle this winter. Proper maintenance and preparation will help ensure that you and your passengers don't get caught out in the cold.

For more tips on vehicle maintenance, visit www.mobiloil.com.

Mary E. Fagan, 92 Purity Supreme Employee

A funeral Mass for Mary E. (LaGrecia) Fagan, 92, of Kingston, formerly of Quincy, a longtime employee of Purity Supreme in Dorchester and Quincy, was celebrated Jan. 19 at St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Fagan died Jan. 16 at Norwell Knoll Nursing Home after a brief illness.

She retired in 1983.

She was a communicant for many years of St. John the Baptist Church in Quincy.

Born and raised in Boston, she lived in Quincy for more than 60 years before moving to Kingston two years ago.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Disappointment can be a blasting experience. Especially when high expectations are suddenly turned into denial, grief and discouragement. As the pressures of life increase, it seems that the causes for discouragement multiply. Have not all of us at one time or another faced a situation that has disappointed or discouraged us?

Let's think upon this quotation: "Let's learn to label properly Disappointment and Discouragement for what they are - two completely different states of mind. Disappointment can be a spur to improvement that will contribute to success. . . But discouragement is a mortal enemy that destroys courage and robs one of the will to fight.

It is not circumstance that causes Discouragement, but one's own REACTION to that circumstance. Everyone must meet Disappointment, many times; it is simply a part of life. When it is met, we may resign ourselves to Discouragement and failure. Or we may recognize each Disappointment as an asset by which we can profit, and take new strength from a lesson learned.

The choice is ours, each time, to make." - John M. Wilson

Four Chaplains Sunday Observance Feb. 4

The Quincy Veterans' Services Department of Quincy reminds residents Sunday, Feb. 4 has been mandated by the Congress of the United States as "Four Chaplains Sunday."

The day commemorates a cold February morning in 1943 when the troopship Dorchester slowly made her way through frigid waters on the north Atlantic toward Greenland and suddenly a German torpedo struck amidsthips and released suffocating clouds of steam and ammonia gases. Many men were killed instantly. Others groped and stumbled their way to the upper deck.

The ship was mortally wounded and listing badly; she would sink in only 20 minutes. Out of 902 men only 230 men were saved that awful night.

However, moving reassuringly among the frightened men were four chaplains: George Fox, Methodist; Alexander Goode, Jewish; Clark Poling, Dutch Reformed; and John Washington, Catholic. These chaplains worked to calm the men and handed out available life jackets.

Soon, the supply of extra life jackets ran out, calmly and without hesitation all four chaplains stripped off their own life jackets, giving them to the frightened men near them, never asking whether they were Protestant, Catholic or Jewish. It is said that these men of faith linked arms, bowed their heads, and each in their own manner, led the men in prayer, putting their lives in the hands of God.

Survivors recounted the sight and sound of that terrible night picturing those four chaplains who performed a tremendously heroic act.

Pastor Rev. Rita S. Berkowitz, C.H.C.M.

Elden J. Morton, 89Retired Chemical Engineer

A graveside service for Elden J. Morton, 89, of Quincy, a retired chemical engineer who helped develop Teflon, was held Jan. 19 at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Mr. Morton died Jan. 15 at Allerton House Assisted Living, Hingham.

He worked in the Boston area and later in California. After moving back to Massachusetts, he bought and ran the Santucket Motel in Dennis Port for 25 years. He retired in 1986.

Born in Quincy, he graduated from Quincy High School in 1935 and earned a degree in chemical engineering from Northeastern University in 1940.

He was a member of the Overeaters Anonymous Group

Overeaters Anonymous is a 12-step program for recovering from compulsive overeating.

Weekly meetings are held in Quincy.

There are no dues, no fees

Assembly of God Ministries. Mr. Morton was very proud of his Swedish heritage. He always drove a Volvo with a five-speed, stick shift. He also enjoyed skiing, playing tennis and photography.

He is survived by a niece, Pamela M. Kerschner of Morristown, N.J., and three cousins, Donald Nelson of Duxbury, Philip Nelson of California and Betty Ann Freeman of Cotuit.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Memorial donations may be made to Glad Tidings Church, 158 Washington St., Quincy, MA 02169.

and no weigh-ins.

Those who have had a problem with food including overeaters, anorexics and bulimics are welcome.

For more information call toll-free (877) 317-2111.

Frances G. Brinkert, 70Waitress

A funeral Mass for Frances G. (McClutchy) Brinkert, 70, of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, a waitress at Dee Dee's Restaurant in Quincy for 20 years, was celebrated Jan. 19 at St. Jerome's Church, Weymouth.

Mrs. Brinkert died Jan. 15 at Carney Hospital in Boston.

After retiring in 1991, she began volunteer work for Meals on Wheels, which she continued until her death. She also volunteered on Thanksgiving to serve meals to seniors.

She was a Red Sox and Patriots fan and enjoyed weekly card games with friends.

Wife of the late Edward F. Brinkert, she is survived by three daughters, Kathleen Howard of Weymouth, Carolyn McGue of Weymouth and Karen Ainslie of Weymouth; three sisters, Ann O'Donnell of Weymouth, Dorothy Delorey of West Roxbury and Margaret Potter of California; and two brothers, Thomas McClutchy of Florida and John McClutchy of Middleboro. She was the mother of the late Edward F. Brinkert, Jr.

Burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSAL

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS
PURCHASING DEPARTMENT
1305 HANCOCK ST., QUINCY, MA 02169

Invites sealed bids/proposals for furnishing and delivering to the City of Quincy: ASSESSORS PERSONAL PROPERTY REVALUATION FEBRUARY 6, 2007 @ 10:30 AM
The City of Quincy requests proposals for a Personal Property Revaluation to be completed by June 30, 2007 to include listing, coding and systems assistance on all personal property in the City for implementation in Fiscal Year 2008. The City may request an Annual Report of New Listings and Deletions in February of FY 2009 and/or FY 2010.

Detailed specifications will be available January 22, 2007, in the office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, Massachusetts 02169, between the hours of 8:30AM to 4:30PM.

Technical Bids/Proposals must be in a sealed envelope and price proposals must be in a separate sealed envelope. The outside of the sealed envelopes are to be clearly marked "RFP - TECHNICAL PROPOSAL ENCLOSED" with time/date of RFP and "RFP - PRICE PROPOSAL ENCLOSED" with time/date of RFP.

Bids/Proposals will be received at the office of the Purchasing Agent until the time and date stated above, at which time and date they will be opened and registered. Late Bids/Proposals, delivered by mail or in person, will be rejected.

If applicable, bids shall be in accordance with M.G.L. Chapter 30B, Chapter 149 as amended, and Chapter 30, Sections 39A, 39B and 39F-R.

The right is reserved to reject any or all RFP's or to accept any part of an RFP or the one deemed best for the City, and waive any informalities in the bidding, if it is in the best interest of the City to do so.

William J. Phelan, MAYOR
Laurie M. Allen, C.P.O.

SOME 600 Quincey school teachers filled every available corner of the auditorium at Point Webster Middle School to register their unhappiness with a contract that would cut the 90 percent paid by the city for their health care premiums.

Teachers Protest Pending Cuts In Health Benefits kids will (have to) learn how to eat less."

In his inaugural address earlier this month, Phelan called "the fast-growing cost of employee benefits ... a crisis that threatens our financial stability ... a ticking time bomb that we must defuse as fairly and as quickly as possible."

The city now pays 90 percent of the health care costs of most of its 2,000 employees or $39 million under the current budget.

Philips said he requested the mayor to begin negotiations on his proposal three months ago but Phelan has failed to respond.

He predicted that any reduction in benefits would hurt the Quincey school system since, in addition to the attractive 13 to 1 student-teacher ratio, benefits are what draws top-notch teachers to Quincey and retains them.

The benefits compensate for medium to average salaries, he said.

The School Committee viewed the teachers' demonstration, which lasted about an hour, in silence, then turned to other business without comment.

Ward 3 Democrats To Caucus Feb. 3

Registered Democrats in Quincy's Ward 3 will hold a caucus Feb. 3 at 10:30 a.m. at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St. to elect 10 delegates and two alternates to the 2007 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Delegates will be divided equally between men and women in accordance with Democratic Party rules. Anyone, at least 18 years old and registered as a Massachusetts Democrat as of Dec. 30, 2006 is welcome to attend the caucus and run for a delegate position.

This year's Action Agenda Convention will be held Saturday, May 19 at UMASS Amherst. Democrats chosen at their caucuses will gather to develop a new Action Agenda outlining grassroots, party building initiatives to prepare for the Presidential election in 2008. This year's Action Agenda will incorporate strategies that led to victory in the gubernatorial election, and provide recommendation for attracting more people to the Democratic Party.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must be present at the caucus and consent to nomination in writing. Candidates may make a one-minute statement and may distribute material on their behalf. All ballots will be written and secret and recorded by the caucus teller. Those not elected who meet the qualifications, may apply to be "add-on" in the following categories: youth (35 and under), minority and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the Delegate selection process MUST be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland St., Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129 no later than ten days after the caucus date.

For more information, contact the Democratic State Committee at 617-776-2676, or Ward 3 Chairman Mike Covais at 617-328-8735.

Final Vote Due Monday

Council Committee Approves Ordinance To Ban Condos

A year-long ban on multi-family housing or condos in certain residential districts of Quincy passed the penultimate test Monday night when the City Council's Ordinance Committee added its stamp of approval.

Only a full City Council vote, scheduled for Monday, Feb. 5, stands in the way of the moratorium on the building of multi-family dwelling units or converting existing one-family homes in Residence B zones.

The vote of the Ordinance Committee, which is made up of the Council as a whole, was 7-2 with Councillor-At-Large Joseph Finn and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee in opposition.

Only one of four amendments to the amendment managed to get by the committee.

That amendment, filed by

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, would exclude a parcel of land on Spence Avenue, Quincy Point, where the developer obtained Zoning Board approval Oct. 4 to build eight town house units.

Raymondi told the committee that Spence Avenue, which is just off Quincy Avenue, is a blighted area that is threatened by business zonings for fast food franchises and existing drainage problems.

The moratorium amendment itself was filed last Sept. 5 by Councillor-At-Large John Keenan to stem the invasion of big money developers into old neighborhoods to buy up small homes there and convert them.

"This city needs to get a hold of the reins in terms of development," said Council President Doug Gutro, "and insure we don't lose the character of the neighborhoods that have already started to erode."

"We're seeing condominiums and town houses crop all over the city where single or two-family homes used to be."

Councillors noted the concerns of local residents for overcrowding, parking

'Parent 911' To Expose Cyberspace Predators

Parents concerned with their kids activities on the Internet will be interested in the free seminar "Parents911: Wut R Ur Kids Doin Online?" Tuesday, Feb. 13, from 7 to 8:30 p.m., at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The program will tour the most popular virtual hangouts and online games, give pointers on how to keep children safe from the predators that inhabit cyberspace.

Interested participants will surf the Web, view typical mspace.com profiles, learn how to decrypt chat shorthand and find out what educators, law enforcement, the media and teenagers themselves have to say about life online.

Relocating Not Easy 24 Businesses Impacted By Concourse Landtakings

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Landtaking for the Quincy Center Concourse will involve an estimated 24 businesses and organizations. City Council President Doug Gutro who represents Quincy Center said Tuesday at a Planning Board meeting with tenants, and owners of property affected.

Properties Affected

The following is a list of 24 businesses and others which will be affected by the landtakings for the Quincy Center Concourse.

They are:

- Tanline Tan & Travel, 148 Parkway.

He said "none of you would have imagined when you started your business that you would be forced to leave." You thought you had "financial and family security."

He added that this is a "horrible situation to be in," and hoped that Tuesday's meeting would enlighten tenants on any issues they had.

Relocating is not going to be a "drop in the bucket" said Planning Director Dennis Harrington.

During a question and answer period, a question was asked if the Messina Building which houses several tenants including the Food Court, will be taken partially or totally.

Harrington answered that "no one can tell you what part of the building will be taken, but the demolition "will be substantial." And anyone who says different, "doesn't know what they are talking about."

Harrington said the concourse, which eventually will go from Quincy Center (Cont'd On Page 14)

Contract Awarded For Spring Street Paving

Mayor William Phelan and DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell announced that DNR Paving of Stoughton, Massachusetts submitted the low bid for the City's Spring street-paving project. The City plans to pave 15 streets as part of the bid opened last week.

Streets planned for Spring paving include: Parke Avenue, Mayflower Road, Aberdeen Road, Huckins Avenue, Chickatabot Road, Agawam Road, Hobomack Road, Merrymount Road, Algonquin Road, Island Avenue, Utica Street, Delano Avenue, Stoughton Street, and Newton Street.

The total cost of repaving these streets and repairing all sidewalks along each street is approximately $1.6 million. Also part of this project are sidewalk repairs along Centre Street, West Street, and Merrymount Parkway.

Ongoing water main replacement work will also include paving of additional streets not included in this bid.

"We will continue the progress that we have made through our Pavement Management Plan," said Phelan. "We have finished many of the city's main roads and now are getting into our neighborhood streets. We will be fixing both streets and sidewalks as part of this contract and making significant improvements to the neighborhoods involved in the contract."

Five Recruits Graduate, Join Fire Department

Five new Quincy fire fighters have graduated from the Quincy Fire Department Training Academy and have received their duty assignments.

They are:
Eric Wirtz, Michael Kerr, William Eastwick, William Kelley and Matt Kisiel.

They received their badges and diplomas at a swearing-in ceremony at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center last Friday.

They were then given their assignments and reported to duty at 8 a.m. Saturday.

The new firefighters completed a five-week fire-training academy, led by Quincy Fire Captain James Kennedy with assistance from other Fire Department personnel.

"Our new recruits all have strong backgrounds that will help add to an already professional department," said Mayor William Phelan. "All have displayed courage through their service in our active military; all have shown determination through the hiring process and the fire academy, and I think that our new firefighters bring the qualities necessary to be great firefighters. I wish them all long, safe and fulfilling careers in the Quincy Fire Department."

The guest speaker at the ceremony was retired Quincy Fire Chief Paul O'Connell who spoke about his experience and the core values necessary to be a good firefighter. He encouraged the recruits to take advantage of the opportunities that will be presented throughout their careers.

The ceremony culminated with each new recruit being "pinned" by a loved one.

The new recruits bring the number of new firefighters hired by Phelan to 55 since 2002.

Tax Tips From the Experts. Education Tax Incentives

Meeting college tuition payments is a struggle, but the federal government is offering help with tax incentives for middle class taxpayers. Here is a brief summary of three of those incentives.

- The HOPE Scholarship Credit:
 - Available for first two years of college education
 - Student must be enrolled at least half time in a degree granting program
 - Maximum credit is $1,650 per student
 - Not available if adjusted gross income exceeds
 - $55,000 for single taxpayers
 - $110,000 for married taxpayers
- The Lifetime Learning Credit:
 - Available for any post secondary education
 - Does not have to be a degree granting program
 - Must be enrolled in one or more courses in a qualified education institution.
 - Credit is 20% of tuition and fees. Maximum credit is $2,000 per return
 - Not available if adjusted gross income exceeds
 - $80,000 for single taxpayers
 - $110,000 for married taxpayers
- Education Expense Deduction:
 - Above the line tax deduction (Do not have to itemize deductions)
 - Same education definitions as the Lifetime Learning and HOPE credits
 - Maximum deduction is $4,000
 - Not available if adjusted gross income exceeds
 - $55,000 for single taxpayers
 - $110,000 for married taxpayers

Furthermore, one student cannot take the HOPE, Lifetime Learning and the Education Deduction in the same tax year.

For more information about education tax incentives visit our website www.sstataxquincy.com and click on "INFO CENTER" and then on "LIFE CYCLE EVENTS" you will see a brochure titled education.

City Will Open Relocation Office Feb. 5

The city will open an office in downtown Quincy Monday, Feb. 5 to assist businesses impacted by the land taking for the Quincy Center Concourse.

Mayor William Phelan and the Downtown Development Committee said Tuesday the office will be located at 1598 Hancock St., the former Citi Financial office. The telephone number will be 617-376-1545 and the office hours will be:

- Monday: 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
- Tuesday: 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
- Wednesday: 12 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Thursday: 12 p.m. to 1 p.m.

The office will be staffed by the city's relocation officer, Peter Sleeper with assistance from the Downtown Redevelopment Committee. The office will remain open for a matter of months Phelan said, until the buildings are demolished to make way for the Quincy Center Concourse.

The public is also invited to visit the office and see the plans and information relative to downtown development. Information on the Concourse, Urban Revitalization District, Design Guidelines for Developers, the Adams Green, and District Improvement Financing will be available for public view.

"We are sensitive to the on-going needs of the property owners and tenants that are being displaced by this important public project," said Phelan. "We hope to continue to work with the affected parties in an effort to minimize, as much as can be minimized, the impact that relocation can have on a business. This is another step forward in our efforts toward a vibrant downtown."

NORTH QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL students recently raised money for charity. School store employees sold school t-shirts and donated $1 for each sale. They also placed a memory tree in the store where faculty and students could place an ornament on the tree in memory of a loved one during the holidays for a donation of $1. Their combined efforts raised over $450.00. The students chose the Jimmy Fund as their charity. The donation will be in memory of Patrick White who lost his battle with cancer last year as a ninth grade student at North. Students involved in the fundraising project are Chris Batson, Richard Doyle, Jennifer Galecia, Bi Yi Li, Amanda Maggio, Danielle Paul, Ben Johnson Tatelbaum, Kayla Vascocelos, James Ying, Carolyn Casper, Sean Clifford, Matt Connors, Michael Coronella, Kelly Curran, Sarlyn Donovan, James Fitzpatrick, Mike Griffin, Mike MacPherson, Josh McKeon, Joe Morris and Rebecca Nguyen.

Four Promoted In Fire Dept.

The Quincy Fire Department has two new captains and two new lieutenants.

Mayor William Phelan and Chief Timothy Pettinelli Tuesday announced the promotions of:

Daniel Gorman and Joseph Jackson to captain and Stephen Stanton and Kenneth Kocerha to lieutenant.

"I congratulate these men and their families on their promotions," said Phelan at a City Hall ceremony. "They studied hard and have performed in the line of duty.

They are now part of the leadership of one of the most professional fire departments around. They are to be commended for their perseverance."

Gorman is a 21-year veteran of the department and nephew of former Fire Chief Tom Gorman.

Jackson was originally hired in 1998 and promoted to lieutenant by Phelan in August of 2002.

Stanton joined the department in 1995 and Kocerha in September 2000.

"All of our promoted officers have seen the department change and the role of the fire department evolve since their hiring," added Phelan. "It is my hope that their leadership helps us further evolve and respond to the needs of challenges of our city."

Fire Safety Topic For Montclair/Wollaston Area

Lt. Michael Marshall of the Quincy Fire Department will be the guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. in the community room of the Church of the Good Shepherd.

Topics will include fire safety, an update on the Fire Study, condition of the fire stations and equipment and the challenges firefighters face. Marshall will discuss steps being taken to insure the safety of residents.

The meeting is open to residents of the community.

Pollard Won't Be Forgotten

(Henry Bosworth is taking the day off and hopes you don't mind if he re-runs a column that appeared Feb. 28, 1985. It was his farewell to the Pollard School, a school he wishes was still here.)

It seemed that whenever one of our five kids reached elementary school age I'd somehow find myself driving by the Pollard School.

"That's where I went to school," I told them, one by one through the years.

I said it with pride. And with a secret wish that their school would come to mean as much to them as the Pollard did to me.

The kids are grown up now — the youngest a sophomore in college. I haven't driven by the Pollard as often in recent years.

But I did the other day. I wish I hadn't.

A demolition bucket and a bulldozer had turned the Pollard into a rubble of red brick. It was a painful sight.

A terrible way to die. First ravaged by flames from a fire that was set. And then, assaulted by the thump, thump, thump of a heartless bucket that only cared to cave in her walls.

It was bad enough that the Pollard had to be closed. But the fact the building would be used for something else was a comforting thought. At least those of us who went to school there could still drive by and see that familiar ranch style building that held so many fond memories for us.

That was before the fire.

The building is now gone. But the memories are still there. They can't take that away from us.

Whenever I think of the Pollard I remember the teachers and the kids who were there with me. That's only natural, I guess. But there was something special about them.

Dedicated teachers — the school was full of them. Teachers like Mildred Litchfield, Ruth Abbiatti, Mary DiBartholomeo, Irma Salvucci, Ester Sullivan, Helen O'Connor, Helen Duncan, Beatrice Fitts, Loretta McDonald, Sadie Berman. And, of course, Principal William Morrison and Assistant Principal Frank Mills.

They were interested in us like we were also their children instead of just their pupils. If pupils needed help, they were there to help even if it meant staying after school to do it.

They kept track of us as we grew up.

Miss Litchfield even kept a list of every pupil she had in every one of her classes for 30 years before her retirement. She could tell you the exact year each of them was in the fourth grade.

There were a lot of poor kids in Quincy Point during the depression. Miss Litchfield would never admit it but there were mornings when she provided breakfast for the hungry ones. And there were times she bought them clothing. Other teachers did a lot of other nice

THE POLLARD SCHOOL on Southern Artery in Quincy Point was ravaged by a fire that was set in February, 1985. The ranch-style building had a unique safety feature for pupils: exits from each classroom to the school yard. Former students and teachers are still saddened by its loss. Quincy Sun Photo/Charles Flagg things quietly, too.

It was there at the Pollard and later at Quincy Point Junior High School that we learned to judge people not by their ancestry but by the kind of individual he or she was.

Quincy Point was the great "melting pot" with many children from a wide variety of immigrant families: Italian, Jewish, Scottish, Syrian, Lebanese, Irish, English, etc.

We learned to live together. If you liked someone or didn't like someone, it was because of him or her and not because of what country the parents or grandparents came from.

And if there was a wise guy somewhere in the crowd, it was inevitable that one day someone was going to dump a little humility on him.

For me, the Pollard School was where I decided to make journalism my career. Back in those days there was another daily newspaper in Quincy called The Quincy News.

It featured a weekly page or two of contributions written by school children. I got one published when I was in the fifth grade — my first byline.

From that day on I knew what I wanted to do.

If you were lucky enough to go to the Pollard School, you never forgot it.

TV personality Dave Garroway went there for a short time in the 1920s. His father was in the merchant marine and was here waiting for a ship to be completed at the old Fore River Shipyard. They lived on Ruggles St. during their short stay.

Some 30 or so years later I was covering the arrival of Mayflower II at Plymouth for the old Boston Traveler and Garroway was on assignment for NBC.

We got to talking and I said I understood he once lived in Quincy.

"Oh, yes," he replied with a smile, "I lived on Ruggles St. and went to the Pollard School. I loved it there."

Miss Abbiatti, who later became assistant principal of the Pollard and principal of other schools, looked sad the other day shortly after the Pollard had been sentenced to death.

"Those were the good times," she said. "We will always have the memories — such good memories."

And, we will.

Whatever kind of building is erected on the site, whenever I look at it I will still see the Pollard School.

The Pollard School was more than brick and mortar. It was a wonderful teacher-pupil relationship. It was a warm spirit of community pride.

They can't take that away from us. Not even with a fire, demolition bucket and bulldozer.

Never!

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1929 postcard showing Wollaston Center looking west from the intersection of Beach and Beale Streets with Hancock Street. On the right the Beale Street Pharmacy is now the site of Papa Gino's. Farther up on the right was Woolworth's 5 & 10, Hattie Sanborn's gift shop, Greenleaf Hardware and across Cushing Street the Hilliard's Glass House candy shop that is now home to Barry's Deli. On the left Klien's Drug store is now a bridal shop and its rooftop was the site of the recent controversy over a Chinese Communist flag. Farther down this side was the new Wollaston Theater. Beyond the theater was the Masonic Temple, a large building pretty much out of sight here that was home of the Wollaston Lodge AF & AM. It later became home to the Wollaston Legion Post and has now been replaced by a branch of Sovereign Bank. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Washington School Is Proposed For Veterans Housing

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor Charles A. Ross has advocated the expenditure of $100,000 to convert the vacant Washington Street School into veterans apartments as advocated by the Mayor's Emergency Committee on Housing.

This Week
59 Years Ago

The Mayor said, "I will send a loan order to the city council as soon as I ascertain from state authorities the proper legal methods of financing the proposition. Something has to be done for the veterans along housing lines and it looks like the Washington School is one method of easing the situation a little."

CAPTAIN JAMES DALY NEW DEPUTY CHIEF

Captain James Daly was appointed Deputy Chief of the Quincy Fire Department by Mayor Ross. Daly, a first cousin of former governor and Boston mayor Maurice J. Tobin, topped the list of three captains certified for the position by the Civil Service Commission.

Ross also appointed 59 men to the department as privates to implement the 48 hour workweek which goes into effect Thursday, Feb. 4th at 8 a.m. All but three of the appointees are veterans of World War II.

READERS FORUM

Are We Putting Neighborhoods First?

At first it seemed like a great idea. Mayor Phelan would spearhead a campaign to make our neighborhoods more vibrant, improving the quality of life in Quincy.

But in the past few months, it became clear what the mayor's "Neighborhood First" campaign really is: political fluff. The mayor's handling of issues surrounding the Chinese United Association (CUA) is a prime example of this "all-talk, no-action" campaign.

Residents and veterans were angered this fall when the CUA decided to install large, red, internally-lit signs, along with the flag of Communist China, over the Wollaston business district.

Many were upset, not because of the race or culture of the new organization, but because a neighborhood landmark was dramatically changed overnight without the chance for public input. Mayor Phelan supported the flying of the Communist flag; he can even be seen clapping for it in pictures on the day it was raised. When questioned, he implied that those opposing the CUA were acting in contrary to American ideals. He said this about our veterans.

Now, and again without the chance for public comment, CUA has returned one of its signs. Residents were again left out of this process, leaving many with lingering questions. How many of the signs will CUA return to their Hancock Street rooftop? Will the red glow of these signs return to Wollaston Center? Will residents be alerted to future changes in our neighborhoods? Is there a planned return for the Communist flag? If Mayor Phelan has his way, these questions will go unanswered until the day the flag is returned. Left in the dark: not quite my idea of putting the neighborhood first.

Granted, the round of "Neighborhood First" meetings provided residents with a change to vent their frustrations. But talk is cheap; especially when no one is listening. Phelan seems to be more interested in telling residents that they are wrong on issues than addressing the needs of our city. On the CUA, our teachers, and many other issues, the mayor has turned a deaf ear to our neighborhoods.

If the city is truly serious about putting neighborhoods first, it needs to put the concerns of its citizens first. Difficult issues are not solved by making backroom deals at city hall, but by bringing everyone to the table. We need to open dialogue and cross boundaries. We need to listen.

All Things Are Not Equal

It is truly distressing that people actually believe it's a bad thing for Massachusetts voters to have a voice in the marriage debate. It is absolutely unbelievable the amount of effort that has been showered upon us to disassociate procreation from marriage.

All things are not equal. There is only one union which can insure the future of the humanity. Does it not enlighten one to observe how same-sex marriage activists seek to redefine a key institution of society, work diligently to silence the people, and then accuse others of "forcing" their views.

As an observer from the House Gallery, I wish to express gratitude to Senator Travaglini, the Senate President for his professional conduct of the Constitutional Convention. It was clear that he has now realized the Massachusetts Constitution requires the legislature to vote on Initiative Petitions properly submitted by the people. My gratitude is also extended to Senator Morrissey, Rep. Ayers and Rep. Tobin who voted to send the amendment to the people. On the other hand, Rep. Mariano's vote to silence the people was very troubling.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Super Bowl Appetizers, Dessert

Here are two appetizers and a great dessert that can be made ahead and enjoyed at the super bowl. Two are made with artichoke hearts. One is a low calorie one from our daughter Ann Marie and the other from her friend Martha.

The great dessert is shaped like a football and so apropos for the big game. That was from our daughter Nancy.

MARTHA'S ARTICHOKE SQUARES

- 2 six ounce jars artichoke hearts in oil
- 1 small onion (chopped)
- 1 garlic clove (minced)
- 4 eggs, beaten
- 1/4 cup fine bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon oregano, pepper and tabasco
- 2 cups shredded cheese

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Drain oil from the artichoke hearts and chop. Heat oil and saute the onion and garlic for about five minutes. Add the rest of the ingredients and blend well. Place in a 9 inch square baking dish. Bake for 30 minutes. Cut into one inch squares.

ANN MARIE'S HOT ARTICHOKE DIP

- 1-14 ounce can artichoke hearts (not in oil)
- 2 tablespoons grated parmesan cheese

- 2 tablespoons low-fat sour cream
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 4 drops hot sauce
- 1/4 cup plain low-fat yogurt

Take the first six ingredients and process until artichokes are finely chopped. Combine the artichoke mixture and yogurt (at room temperature) and stir well. Spoon into a one quart baking dish and sprinkle with paprika. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes. Serve with breadsticks.

Calorie count is 10 calories for one tablespoon, 1 gram carbs and 0.3 grams fat.

Here is a great dessert from our daughter Nancy. It can be made ahead of time.

NANCY'S KRISPY FOOTBALLS

- 3 tablespoons margarine or butter
- 10 ounce package of marshmallows (40)
- or 4 cups mini marshmallows
- 6 cups cocoa krispies
- white frosting

In a pan, melt the butter and add the marshmallows and cook until blended. Remove from heat. Add the cocoa krispies and then shape into a football about 3 inches or so and place on a slightly greased cookie sheet. Refrigerate for about an hour. Then with the frosting, draw lines on the football similar to how real footballs look. They will be so cute and delicious as well. Enjoy the game!

Books – What Else? – Topic Of Talks At Library, Branches

Books — what else? — will be the order of the day at the Thomas Crane Public Library and its branches next month.

The "Booked for Lunch" bunch will meet Friday, Feb. 2, from 12 noon to 1 p.m. at the Main Library, 40 Washington St., for a friendly discussion of authors and titles.

Drop in on the informal gathering any time and bring a brown bag lunch or pick up a bite to eat at the library cafe.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Readers are invited to share their favorite travel books and resources during the "Let's Talk Travel" hour Tuesday, Feb. 6, at 7 p.m. in the North Quincy Branch Library, 381 Hancock St.

For more information, call 617-376-1320.

Valentine's Day will be noted with a celebration of chocolate Monday, Feb. 12, at 6:30 p.m. at the Adams Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea St.

New cookbooks will be reviewed and favorite recipes involving chocolate will be shared.

For more information, call 617-376-1325.

An informal chat about books, any books, will be held Wednesday, Feb. 21, from 2 to 3 p.m. at the Wollaston Branch Library, 41 Beale St.

For more information, call 617-376-1330.

Ruth Harcovitz To Sing At Ward 4 Senior Party

Soprano Ruth Harcovitz, sometimes called "Boston's Julie Andrews," will help the Ward 4 Senior Citizens Social Group celebrate Valentines Day Wednesday, Feb. 7, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

Harcovitz is a graduate of the New England Conservatory who studied at the Vienna Academy of Music and has sung with the Santa Fe Opera, the Opera Company of Boston, Opera New England and many others.

The program is sponsored by the Quincy Arts Council.

Baking Bread Finnish Way At Library Sunday

Anneli Johnson, who learned the craft in the family restaurant in her native Finland, will instruct in the all-but-forgotten art of home bread-baking next month.

The free session, "Let's Bake Bread!" will be held Sunday, Feb. 4 from 3 to 4:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

Johnson will demonstrate how to make a traditional yeast dough from the mixing and kneading to the shaping of the many loaves and rolls.

She will also introduce her students to "pulla," the cardamom-flavored sweet bread found in every Finnish bakery. Samples will be passed around for the tasting.

Registration is required for this program and may be made by calling 617-376-1316 or e-mailing quref@ocn.org or visiting the Main Library's reference desk on the top floor.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

80th Birthday, 55th Ordination Anniversary Double Celebration For Fr. William McCarthy Feb. 10

Fr. William McCarthy, Quincy's legendary Father Bill will celebrate his 80th birthday and the 55th anniversary of his ordination Saturday, Feb. 10.

He will celebrate a Mass of Thanksgiving at 4 p.m. at St. John's Church, Quincy Center. A reception and dinner will follow at 5:30 p.m. at The Lantana, Scanlon Drive, Randolph.

Fr. McCarthy, former pastor of St. John's Church, inspired the founding of Father Bill's Place, the Quincy Interfaith Shelter for the homeless which was named in his honor.

Fr. McCarthy, a native of Haverhill, was ordained in 1952 by Cardinal Richard Cushing.

He served at St. Rose in

Fr. WILLIAM MCCARTHY

Chelsea and St. Gregory's in Dorchester before being named pastor of St. John's Feb. 1, 1977.

He retired as pastor after 18 years, but remains active with the operation of Father Bill's Place.

Tickets for the dinner are $55 per person and tables of 10 are available at $500.

Deadline for tickets is Friday. They may be obtained by calling 617-770-3314.

Former Mayor Arthur Tobin, Clerk Magistrate of Quincy District Court, and a member of the committee, will be master of ceremonies.

Other members of the committee are:

Henry Bosworth, The Quincy Sun; Arthur Connelly, South Shore Savings Bank; Rose DiPietro, South Shore Hospital; Donna Foster, Century 21 Tullish & Clancy; Joyce Hogan and William Lawless, Father Bill's Place Board of Directors; Christine O'Brien and Tracey Phelan, Women's Shelter Committee.

Quincy Court Fourth Busiest With 33,644 Cases

The Quincy District Court was the fourth busiest in the state in Fiscal 2006, trailing only Worcester, Lowell and Springfield in the number of cases filed.

The courthouse on Dennis Ryan Parkway in Quincy handled more than 33,644 cases, earning plaudits from Chief Justice Lynda M. Connolly.

"The ability of the Quincy District Court to adjudicate the wide range of criminal, civil, housing, domestic abuse, mental health and other types of cases speaks volumes about each of the individuals working in the Quincy District Court," she said.

"These dedicated employees undertake every day to improve our delivery of justice that is fair, impartial, timely and affordable.

"There is no doubt that the leadership exhibited by First Justice Mark S. Coven, Clerk Magistrate Arthur H. Tobin and Chief Probation Officer Michael A. Walsh has been instrumental in the success of the District Court and its ability to better serve the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Holbrook, Milton, Quincy, Randolph and Weymouth."

Worcester District Court handled the most cases with 38,400, followed by Lowell with 35,000 and Springfield with 34,500.

In all, more than 788,000 criminal and civil cases were filed in the state's 62 district courts in Fiscal 2006, an increase of 2.7 per cent over the previous year.

Quincy Post Office To Hold Special Passport Session Feb. 11

The Quincy Post Office will host a special passport application acceptance session Sunday, Feb. 11, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 47 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Since Jan. 23, citizens of the United States, Canada, Mexico and Bermuda have been required to present a passport to enter the United States by air from anywhere in the Western Hemisphere.

The cost is $97 for adults 16 years of age and older with separate payments of $30 to the US Postal Service as a processing fee and $67 to the State Department for the passport application.

For persons under 16, the cost is $82 with $30 going to the Postal Service and $52 to the State Department.

For expedited passport service, add $60 for each application, payable to the State Department. Two-way overnight delivery is encouraged with delivery costs payable to USPS.

The Postal Service recommends the following steps to make the application process go smoothly:

- Bring proper proof of American citizenship, like a certified birth certificate, a previous US passport, a certificate of citizenship, or a naturalization certificate. A hospital-issued birth certificate alone is not acceptable.

• Bring proof of identity, like a certified birth certificate, a certificate of citizenship, a valid driver's license, a government ID or a military photo ID.

• The passport application requires two recent identical photographs of you. Passport photos can be taken at the Quincy Post Office for a fee.

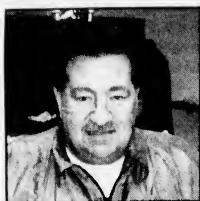

• To save time, a passport application can be downloaded at www.usps.com/passport to complete your application beforehand.

Neighbors See Problem In Eventide Home Expansion

The City Council canceled Monday night's public hearing into the William B. Rice Eventide Home's bid for a zoning change but a dozen members of the Adams National Historic Neighborhood Association showed up just to make sure.

"Currently the site is zoned as Residential A and all the surrounding neighborhoods are also Residence A," said Jack Milgram of Pilgrim Drive, a spokesman for the Association.

"Our goal is to continue to have the neighborhood remain the same with residential zoning that has been there since zoning was first put in by the city."

The Eventide Home was seeking to have the land on Adams Street changed from Residence A with non-conforming rights to Planned Unit Development (PUD) to clear the way for a newer and larger assisted living facility and nursing home.

The public hearing was canceled when the Eventide Home withdrew the plan without prejudice in order to examine other options.

"It's a beautiful historic neighborhood and we don't want to see any rezoning within that area so we are pleased that the Eventide Home has withdrawn their application," said Mike Linnane of Anderson Rd., another Association spokesman.

"Of course, it was withdrawn without prejudice which means they can come back, which means there is a long road still ahead. We hope there can be a resolution that will make the whole city happy."

Plans for the new building call for 52 one-bedroom apartments with dens, four two-bedroom apartments, 16 one-bedroom apartments and a 43-bed skilled nursing facility with 64 parking spaces in a garage and 26 outside spaces.

The new three-story building would be built behind the 70-year-old current one, which would be torn down and replaced by lawn. The present home is a 65-bed nursing home.

"Basically," said Milgram, "the building would be twice as large as the current building which is non-conforming to the neighborhood."

"When we moved into the neighborhood we knew the building was there but now to have a development of that magnitude come in... would set a bad precedence that could spread across the entire city."

Some 130 protesters, many of them members of the newly formed association, showed up at a meeting called by City Councillor

Doug Gutro at the Bernazzani School last week to hear and denounce the plan.

Gutro opened Monday night's hearing, read the Eventide Home's withdrawal letter and closed the hearing without listening to any testimony.

"Eventide has withdrawn their request without prejudice and have taken a step back to see if they can pursue their development plans under a different kind of zoning that would be more compatible with the neighbors," he said.

"They are putting fresh eyes on some of the zoning options and over the course of the next 30 days they may well come forward with an option that is more palatable to the neighbors."

He pledged to call another neighborhood meeting if and when a new plan is advanced.

Lydon Funeral Home Renews Lofty Oaks Affiliation

Lydon Funeral Home of Quincy has renewed its affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest life of Massachusetts.

The memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall. This program is part of a large endeavor to restore the landscape and our environment with the eternal beauty of living trees.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged for by Michelle and John J. Lydon, Jr. of the Lydon Funeral Home. When a certified nurseryman has planted the tree, the designated people receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

OBITUARY

R. Joyce Welch, 76 Boston College School Of Nursing Graduate

A funeral Mass of Christian Burial for R. Joyce (Burke) Welch, 76, of Needham, will be celebrated Monday at 10 a.m. in St. Joseph Church, Needham.

Mrs. Welch died Jan. 29 at Hospice Atlanta in Atlanta, GA.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., she was the daughter of the late Ruth (Joyce) and John Burke.

She was a Needham resident for more than 55 years.

Mrs. Welch was a 1948 graduate of Quincy High School, where she was a drum majorette.

She graduated from Boston College School of Nursing in 1953. She was one of the first women to graduate from Boston College.

An avid supporter of Boston College and Boston College football, Mrs. Welch was a longtime B.C. football season ticket holder.

Beloved wife of the late John G. Welch, she is survived by two sons, Brian T. Welch of Lexington and Dennis J. Welch, M.D., of Atlanta, GA; two brothers, George G. Burke of Quincy, former Norfolk County district attorney and former president of the Quincy City Council; and John Burke, Jr. of Cleveland, OH; a sister, Kathleen Burke of Yanketown, FL; three grandchildren, Matthew, Connor Michael and Thomas Welch; and many nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours are Sunday from 3 to 6 p.m. at the Eaton Funeral Home, 1351 Highland Ave., Needham.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to The Flynn Fund, c/o BC Office of Athletic Development, Conte Forum Room 320, 140 Commonwealth Ave., Chestnut Hill, MA 02467.

Ward 6 Democrats To Caucus Saturday

Registered Democrats in Quincy, Ward 6 will hold a caucus at the Adams Inn Best Western, 29 Hancock Street, Quincy Saturday at 10 a.m. to elect 10 delegates and two alternates to the 2007 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Delegates will be divided equally between men and women in accordance with Democratic Party rules. Anyone, at least 18-years old and registered as a Massachusetts Democrat as of Dec. 30, 2006, is welcome to attend the caucus and run for a delegate position. Those attending are asked to arrive at the caucus 15 minutes of its scheduled time. No one will be admitted after 15 past the scheduled time.

This year's Action Agenda Convention will be held Saturday, May 19 at UMASS Amherst. All Massachusetts Democrats chosen at their caucuses will gather to develop a new Action Agenda outlining grassroots, party-building initiatives to prepare us for the Presidential election in 2008. This year's Action Agenda will incorporate strategies that led to the Democratic victory in the gubernatorial election, and provide recommendations for attracting more people to the Democratic Party.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must be present at the caucus and consent to nomination in writing. Candidates may make a one-minute statement and may distribute materials on their behalf. All ballots will be written, secret and recorded by the caucus teller. Those not elected delegate or alternate may apply to be "addon" delegates in the following categories: youth (35 and under), minority and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challengers to the Delegate-selection process must be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland Street, Suite 203, Boston, MA 02120 within 10 days after the caucus.

For information, contact the Democratic State Committee at 617-776-2676.

Walking Tour To Highlight Quincy Center Architecture

The architectural jewels of downtown Quincy will be explored Saturday, Feb. 10, during a free walking tour of Quincy Center conducted by a trio of resident authorities.

The tour will begin at 10 a.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., and will include several buildings that are on the National Register of Historic Places.

The tour guides will be librarian Mark Clark, architect and Historic Commission Vice Chair Anthony Ricci and Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, executive director of the Quincy Historical Society.

The tour will show the Romanesque beauty of the library's Richardson Building, the Greek Revival design of United First Parish Church and the High Victorian Gothic style of the Adams Academy.

Rain date is Saturday, Feb. 24, at 10 a.m.

The tour is sponsored by the Park Department's Environmental Treasures Program and the Thomas Crane Public Library. For more information, call 617-472-0799.

STRESS FRACTURES

The repetitive stress of certain pounding activities, such as jumping or running, can cause stress fractures. An X-ray can diagnose stress fractures, which are tiny cracks that often occur in the bones of the lower leg or foot. In some cases a patient may need a splint or cast, but first-line treatment includes ice and rest. A dull ache after activity, swelling, and pain that occurs early in a workout are all symptoms. Patients may also notice pain increasing over time or a spot that is tender to the touch. Athletes in high-impact sports are not the only ones at risk. People who go from a sedentary lifestyle to one of extreme activity and those with osteoporosis are at risk.

Even walking on a surface like cement means your feet must endure a tremendous pounding—every step you take can give each foot a 180-pound jolt. This wear and tear can take its toll, sometimes causing stress fractures or even a broken bone. Combine this with poorly fitting shoes and you can end up with a lot of pain and an inability to move with ease. Don't let this happen to you. Teaching our patients preventative care is an integral part of our practice at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Office hours are also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building. Please call us at 781-986-3668.

HINT: More than half of all cases of stress fractures occur in track and field athletes.

Koch Names Campaign Chairman, Treasurer

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch has named community leaders to top posts on his campaign team.

Lifelong Houghs Neck resident Jack Nigro will be the campaign's chairman and Jim Fatseas of Adams Street will be the treasurer.

"Jim and Jack are great symbols of what this campaign is all about," said Koch. "They have a lifelong and energetic commitment to Quincy. They know how to bring people together, and they believe strongly like I that we can do better for this city. I'm excited and honored to have them both on board as we start to bring a positive new vision for our future to neighborhoods across Quincy."

Fatseas, originally from North Quincy, has no political background, but has history of community involvement that includes more than 10 years on the board of directors at Quincy Youth Hockey Arena.

He is currently an assistant coach for the North Quincy High School hockey team, and recently took a leadership role on several issues in his Hospital Hill neighborhood.

A senior executive with Merrill Lynch & Co. for nearly 20 years, Fatseas, 50, decided to give up the travel and grind of the financial world in 2002 to spend more time with his wife, Patty, and their two children, Matthew and Robyn. He recently started his own communications company.

"The Koch family are lifelong friends, and Tom's character and his clear view of public service inspired me to join this campaign," Fatseas said. "I love this city, and I know we can make it an even better place to live and raise a family."

Koch last week resigned the position he held for 12 years as Director of Parks, Forestry and Cemetery and announced his bid for the mayor's office, saying he understood the personal risk involved but insisting that the opportunity to help shape a better future for Quincy was a chance worth taking.

Nigro, 64, is a long-time civic leader in his native Houghs Neck and around the city. A member of the Park and Recreation Board for the last six years, Nigro said

"watching first-hand Koch's leadership style of honesty, openness and respect for people" drove him to get involved with the campaign.

"Tom is just really an up-standing guy - his leadership skills and just how he handles himself with other people are a credit to this city," Nigro said. "During his time at the park department, he probably saved taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars because of his ability to lead and get things done."

A project manager for Harrington Brothers and a longtime member of the Sheetworkers Union Local 17, Nigro met Koch when the pair worked together on the city's Christmas Parade Committee more than 20 years ago. Nigro is still a member of that committee, and he is also a past president of the Houghs Neck Community Council and a member of the city's Beaches Commission.

His wife, Peg, is a former School Committee member and the couple live in the same Winthrop Street home where they raised two children.

Roof Leaks Can Be Tricky

Q. I have an attached garage with a flat roof. The area between the roof and the wall and chimney area of my house has been leaking. I put roofing cement along the joint between the roof and the wall, with no results. The flashing around the chimney appears deteriorated. What is a possible solution? — Muri S., via e-mail

A. Have the flashing repaired and sealed, and ask the professional about improving the seal (perhaps adding flashing) to the joint between the garage roof and the house wall.

A leak around the chimney could be the cause of the water leaking around the wall/roof joint — water could be running along a joist or down the wall frame, only appearing at a lower point, where it has a chance to pool and soak through the drywall.

While the contractor is there, a complete check of your roof, flashing and gutter system should be performed. A torn shingle or a puncture in the sheathing underneath the shingles could be causing an unseen leak or even contributing to the leak you have found. Make sure the contractor gives you a detailed report and a price estimate before agreeing to have any work done, and that he gets your approval before doing any additional work that might be warranted.

You may also want to inspect the roof yourself, before and after the repair. Remember to use a sturdy ladder and have a partner on hand. Wear a safety rope and harness, secured to a sturdy point on the roof or held by your partner, in case you slip. While up there, inspect the shingles, all of the joints, the condition of the chimney (including the mortar and brick), and the gutters around the edges. Note any potential problem areas and pass them on to the contractor.

(NAPS) - Private mortgage insurance has always been an easy and predictable way for informed buyers to finance the purchase of their home. Now, it's also tax deductible, making it an even better choice in many cases.

Mortgage insurance allows borrowers with a less than 20 percent down payment to purchase a home by providing lender coverage against borrower default.

Savings for Families

For many first-time homebuyers, the biggest hurdle is saving up for the down payment. In today's high-priced real estate markets, 20 percent can amount of a significant chunk of change. But don't give up with private mortgage insurance, even if you've got a down payment of just 3 percent or less, you can still buy a home.

This new tax break passed by Congress gives you one more reason to consider purchasing or refinancing your home with private mortgage insurance. Steve Smith, chief executive officer of The PMI Group, Inc. and president of the Mortgage Insurance Companies of America, explains: "Making the cost of mortgage insurance tax deductible helps those who need it most - low-to-moderate income Americans, primarily first-time homebuyers, who are simply unable to save enough for a 20 percent down payment. This deduction will save homebuyers with insured loans hundreds of dollars."

If you or your family earns $100,000 or less and purchases a home during 2007 with private mortgage insurance, Mortgage Insurance Companies of America, an industry trade group, estimates that this new law may save you $200 to $400 annually. Consult with your own tax advisor concerning the applicability of this new deduction in your particular circumstances under the Internal Revenue Code and the laws of any other taxing jurisdiction.

Families earning up to $109,000 can take advantage of a partial deduction. Your home will probably be the largest investment of your lifetime and every extra bit of money helps.

Good Reasons to Choose Private Mortgage Insurance

By making private mortgage insurance tax deductible, the new federal law allows more people to become homeowners. "There are lots of loan choices," explained John Taylor, president and chief executive officer of the National Community Reinvestment Coalition. "Mortgage insurance is straightforward. It is a reliable and prudent way for you to get the loan best suited to your needs. And you can cancel it as soon as your equity builds to 20 percent."

What's Right for You?

Over the years, many homebuyers have chosen private mortgage insurance because it's simple, safe and smart. Now it's also tax deductible. As you're considering your home-financing alternatives, consider private mortgage insurance. It may be a product that's right for you.

Neighborhood Housing Services First-Time Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with Dedham Institution for Savings, will host a First-Time Homebuyer Workshop Monday, Feb. 12 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, Feb. 17 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The workshop will be held at Dedham Institution for Savings, 55 Elm St., Dedham.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

The workshop is open to everyone throughout the state, regardless of income.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend the educational workshop. Participants will have an opportunity to speak with a lender at the workshop.

Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the home buying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from real estate related professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $15 fee per person.

For more information, call 617-770-2227 ext. 31 or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Time To Invest May Be Now

(NAPS) - Home prices aren't appreciating as fast as they were a few years ago. Time to get out of the real estate investment game, right? Maybe not.

When it comes to playing the stock market, the mantra on Wall Street has always been "buy low, sell high." The same advice applies to real estate investment. If you have the income to cover an additional mortgage payment, you may be able to lock in a great investment property at a low price and low interest rate.

Before you sit down with the Sunday paper and a highlighter, take a few minutes to understand how to succeed in property investment. Quicken Loans, the nation's largest online lender, offers "The ABCs of Successful Real Estate Investments."

The ABCs of Successful Real Estate Investments

Assess Your Market. Location really is everything. It determines how many tenants and buyers are available and it makes a difference in your profitability potential — so learn everything you can before settling on a market.

Be Prepared. Talk to a reputable mortgage banker who can get you prequalified today, so when you find your investment property, you'll be ready to make an offer.

Cash Reserves. Having funds for repairs and other expenses is a necessity. All profitable businesses need cash to operate effectively. Again, work with a reputable mortgage banker and discuss the possibility of financing your investment property using a mortgage program that minimizes your risk and monthly out-of-pocket burden, such as an interest-only loan.

Hints For Homeowners

Home Improvements That Pay You Back

(NAPS) – Purchasing a home is perhaps the most significant investment that many Americans will ever make. One way that millions of Americans are increasing the return and value of their homes is through remodeling.

Remodeling is not only a great way to enhance your investment, but it can also provide you with greater satisfaction with your living environment. But before you call the contractor, there are a few other things to consider.

"Remodeling projects can offer significant rewards whether you are looking to put your house on the market in the immediate future or even if you are not interested in selling for years to come," said Jim Ferriter, executive vice president, retail lending for GMAC Mortgage. "But before you get started, you need to identify which remodeling projects will increase both the resale value of your home as well as your day-to-day comfort."

Here are some ideas from GMAC Mortgage for home improvement projects that pay off:

Kitchens. Kitchen remodels are among the best for recouping the cost of renovations. Modernize with new appliances, countertops and cabinets.

Bathrooms. Adding a bathroom increases the value of your home. Upgrades such as light fixtures, vanities with plenty of storage, ceramic tile or marble and a new coat of paint are just some of the ways to improve a bathroom.

Decks. Building a deck enhances your enjoyment of your yard and lets you recover approximately 85 percent of the project costs in added value.

New rooms. Converting an attic into a bedroom or adding a family room are great ways to add value and make your home fit your needs as your family grows.

Painting. One of the most affordable and effective improvements you can make to your home is painting both the interior and exterior. Painting the exterior not only helps maintain the beauty of the home, it also helps prevent damage to the siding.

Enhancing energy efficiency. Replacing your old furnace, putting in new windows and doors and replacing your roof can help you improve your monthly energy costs as well as enhance the resale value of your home. Some states even offer credits for remodeling projects designed to enhance energy efficiency in the home.

So how can you pay for your remodeling projects? According to a recent nationwide study sponsored by GMAC Mortgage, over half of consumers would pay for their remodeling projects with cash from either their checking or savings. However, approximately 29 percent would use a home equity line of credit or home equity loan.

Why are more and more people turning to the home equity option? One reason is that borrowing against the equity in your home is often cheaper than maxing out credit cards that usually carry higher interest rates. In addition, payments on a home equity loan or home equity line of credit may be tax deductible. How do you decide whether to get a home equity line of credit? GMAC Mortgage has these tips to offer:

• A home equity loan provides a flat amount of funds that you pay back in fixed monthly payments over a set period of time. If you like the idea of a fixed, nonadjusting rate of interest and a constant monthly payment and you are also certain of your total costs while allowing for some overbudgeting, a home equity loan might make sense for you.

• The home equity line of credit is like a credit card by nature, with homeowners accessing cash when they have the need. The interest rate is usually variable, often tied to the fluctuation of the prime rate of interest. You can make minimum payments and allow for month-to-month decisions on cash flow. The home equity line of credit is a revolving line of credit that stays open as long as you haven't used up your credit limit.

With interest rates at historical lows, now is still a good time to tap into your home equity to get started on your remodeling projects. For more information about using your home's equity to finance a home remodeling project, visit <http://www.gmacmortgage.com> or call (800) 888-GMAC.

Quincy Community Action First-Time Homebuyer Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs will hold a free first-time homebuyer workshop Thursday, Feb. 1.

Tuesday, Feb. 6 and Thursday, Feb. 8 from 5:30 to 8 p.m. in QCAP's office, 1509 Hancock St., fourth floor.

Speakers are real estate professionals. Participants will receive a workbook with valuable reference material and a certificate, which is a prerequisite for favorable soft second mortgages. Mass Housing mortgages and downpayment closing cost assistance.

For more information and to register, contact Ann Marie Casey, 617-479-8181 ext. 119 or visit QCAP's website, www.qcap.org.

Reverse Mortgage Topic At Council On Aging Office

Ed Barrett discusses reverse mortgages on the first and third Wednesdays of the month at 1 p.m. at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy.

Reverse mortgage allows seniors to convert a portion of their home equity into tax free cash. For an appointment, call Ann Bruce at 617-376-1506.

Medical Equipment Collection At QMC

The Rehabilitation Services Department at Quincy Medical Center will host a used durable medical equipment drop-off Saturday, Feb. 10 from 10 a.m. to noon at the Outpatient Physical Therapy Department's entrance in the medical center's rear parking area, 114 Whitwell St.

Residents are invited to "drop off" gently used medical equipment, including rolling walkers, standard walkers, folding walkers, straight canes, quad canes, wheelchairs, commodes, hoist lifts and raised toilet seats.

Equipment will be collected and inspected, cleaned and refurbished and donated to area physical therapy equipment "loan closets." Crutches are not needed at this time.

to Southern Artery, will have four lanes and sidewalks on both sides.)

He said the estimated cost of the concourse from A.J. Wright to Revere Road is $6 million.

Also speaking at the meeting was Peter Sleeper, an eminent domain and relocation specialist said he will help tenants who are displaced re-locate. He showed a long list of sites from Key Realty ranging from Copeland St. in West Quincy to Adams St. Chestnut St. Hancock St. Coddington St. and several others.

Sleeper said the City of Quincy will pay for all the equipment the tenants have, plus stationery, phones and shelves. He said that if tenants find a location themselves, the city will pay them $2,500.

Sleeper said that tenants will receive a letter tomorrow (Wednesday) and will be legally be given 120 days to move after receiving the letter.

Sleeper said they are not allowed to evict the tenant, but "probably allow a month or two extra to move."

Sleeper said he plans to open an office next Monday at 1598-1600 Hancock St. between Frantic Framers and the Holy Ground Restaurant, where tenants can begin to make plans to re-locate.

problems, health and safety issues caused by the sudden influx of new people into neighborhoods that are ill-equipped to handle them.

The moratorium, said the Council order, would allow time "to plan for the future development of the city (and) protect certain sections of the city from ill-advised, excessively dense and overly burdensome development."

A second amendment to the amendment, filed by Councillor Finn, that would have exempted a parcel of land at 771 Sea St. from the moratorium was rejected by the committee by a 6-3 vote.

Only Finn, Raymond and Councillor-At-Large Michael McFarland voted for the exemption after Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly produced the signatures of seven abutters against the amendment.

The multi-family development planned for the Sea Street location would have had three units and a parking garage and was approved by the Conservation Commission Aug. 16 and the Zoning Board Nov. 28.

An all-purpose amendment that would have excluded all applications for building permits or special permits made prior to last Sept. 5 and since approved was also shot down by a 5-4 vote.

Voting for it were Councillors Finn, Raymond, McFarland and McNamee.

A public hearing before the Council on that particular amendment, however, is still on for Monday, Feb. 5, at 6:30 p.m. in the Council Chamber.

The fourth and last of the amendments to the amendment, one that would create a new zoning district Residence B-1 to cover one to three family units, was not discussed and is still pending.

Hearts Come In All Shapes And Sizes

By DONNA ERICKSON

Have a "heart to heart" talk with your kids this week to brainstorm all the cool ideas you can come up with for Valentine's Day fun!

Here are some easy, heart felt ideas coming to you in all shapes and sizes:

SEALED WITH A HEART

Once your children have signed and inserted their valentine cards into envelopes, they can seal them with a kiss- and even their thumbs! It's fun and easy. Show your child how to press her thumb onto an inkpad and then onto the closed flap of the envelope of a valentine card with the first print angled to the right. Make a second thumbprint to the left to create a one-of-a-kind heart shape.

Tip: If you don't have an inkpad handy, make your own. Pour a small amount of liquid nontoxic red or pink poster paint on a small, clean household or makeup sponge. Set it in a dish and use as an inkpad for this activity.

STAINED-GLASS COOKIE HEART

When you bake a batch of sugar cookies, use a large heart cookie cutter for each cookie. Then use a tiny heart-shaped cookie cutter to cut out the center of each one. Arrange the large cookies on cookie sheets. Meanwhile, one of your kids will love putting red hard candies in a strong plastic bag and pounding them into small bits with a hammer. Sprinkle the bits in the tiny heart centers of each cookie. As the cookies bake, the candy will melt and fill the space to create a heart window.

Tip: To hang them by a string near a window, poke a straw through each cookie before baking to form a hole for stringing once the cookies cool.

PLACE HEARTS

Before guests arrive for a Valentine's Day dinner, make a paper heart for each person. Tear or cut each heart in half in zigzags. Write a riddle or rhyme on one of each of the halves. Write a corresponding verse or answer on the matching half. Place one of the halves at each plate. Give guests the other half and let them find the match at their plate.

If it's only your family around the table, let your school-age child make the place cards for the rest of the family to enjoy!

Valentine's Dinner, Dance Feb. 10 At Quincy Community United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold a family friendly Valentine's Dinner and Dance Saturday, Feb. 10.

The evening will begin with a pasta dinner at 6 p.m. followed by a dj'd dance until 11 p.m. Tickets are $12 and may be served by calling the church office at 617-773-3319.

"Quincy Community is trying to put the emphasis on everybody," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church. "So much of Valentine's celebrates are focused on couples, that singles or families feel left out."

"Quincy Community's dinner dance offers everybody, of all ages, the opportunity to have a great time."

The church is located diagonally across from the Wollaston Red Line T stop. The building is handicapped accessible by the front door near the flag pole.

"Nice Work" goes out to City Clerk Joseph Shea pertaining to an incident recently at Starbucks in Quincy Square. Joe was in line at Starbucks when a customer yelled to employees that a man just walked out of the store with a pile of music CDs. Joe knew there was a side door at Starbucks so he went out the door when he came out ahead of the suspect.

Joe said he confronted the suspect against the wall of the building and asked him, "Do you always rip off your coffee shop?" The suspect immediately tried to flee but Joe grabbed onto him. The suspect squirmed, fell downward and stepping out of Joe's grasp as he fled -- without his coat and the CDs.

The suspect then came back toward Joe, wanting his coat back, then thought twice and ran into the train station. Joe brought the CDs and the coat back to Starbucks.

As he awaited the police, Joe searched the pockets and found identification of the suspect. The case was turned over to detectives and there is an outstanding warrant for the suspect!

Each week in The Quincy Sun, the "Quincy Police Hot Spots" page provides readers with numbers to call to report crimes. The telephone number for the "Drug Hot-Line" is 617-328-4527. You will not be required to provide identification or address, although it would be helpful.

Anonymous information via a letter or by leaving a message does not provide an opportunity for the detectives to ask questions to gain further knowledge. Even without identifying yourself, your information can be corroborated (validated) in many ways, such as surveillance, which was used in this particular case.

Some people are reluctant to report suspicious activity for fear of having to testify or of retaliation, but by calling the hot-line with detailed information, the Drug Unit will be working with you to eradicate drug users in your community.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, Jan. 12, at approximately 10:50 p.m., Officers Tom Loughlin and Don Allison were dispatched to Gilbert Street on a call of "breaking and entering in progress." The caller stated the suspect was in the basement.

The officers met with the owner/victim of the house. She said she heard someone in the basement and directed the officers to the bulkhead, which is in the rear of the house. Once Officer Loughlin was in place at the rear of the house, Officer Allison went to the basement stairs, located in the kitchen.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Allison opened the door and observed a male suspect at the base of the steps. The male complied with an order to come up the stairs. Once in the kitchen, Officer Allison asked the victim if she recognized the suspect and she replied that she did not. Officer Allison recognized the suspect from past incidents and knew that he had an extensive criminal record.

Detective Robert Clark arrived on scene. Officer Allison asked the suspect why he was in the basement and he said he thought the house belonged to a good friend of his. When asked the name of his good friend, the suspect said, "Alan." When asked for a last name of the friend, the suspect said, "I don't know." When asked why he didn't come in the front door of his good friend Alan's house, the suspect stared at this officer for a few seconds and stated, "I don't know, you got me."

At this time, Officer Allison placed the suspect under arrest. The officer noticed the suspect had fresh cuts on his knuckles. Detective Clark and Officer Allison escorted the suspect to a police cruiser and placed in the rear seat.

Detective Clark and Detective Menz then found a car parked, with the engine running a few houses away with people sitting in it. Officer Allison joined the detectives and found a female driver and a male front seat passenger. When asked for his name and who owned the car, the front seat passenger stated his name and said that a friend owned the car, but did not know his name. The officers asked this male what he was doing there and he said he and his friend, who he now named, went to a house on the street, pointing to the same house where the break-in was.

The officers then questioned the female driver and asked for her license and registration. She said she did not have her license with her. She appeared intoxicated and slurredly stated that she was from Rhode Island and had been drinking "a lot of whiskey tonight." She was placed in a cruiser as officers waited more information about her license status and outstanding warrants.

Officer Allison returned to the scene of the crime and interviewed the couple residing there. They said they called the police immediately and locked the basement door and secured the bulkhead door from the outside. After examining the basement, it was determined that entry was gained through an unlocked bulkhead door.

There was also a cellar window that had been broken from the inside, consistent with the suspect trying to get out of the cellar, which had heavy wire mesh on the outside. The broken glass and the bloody knuckles appeared to be linked.

Based on the statements made by the three suspects and evidence available, Officer Allison placed all of them under arrest. After booking the suspects, Sgt. Joe Lencki informed Officer Allison that the female's fingerprints were on file with the FBI and she had lied as to her identity.

The suspect found in the basement, a 35-year-old Cambridge resident, was charged with "breaking and entering in the nighttime, intent to commit a felony and malicious damage to property."

The male in the car, a 23-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with the joint venture of "breaking and entering in the nighttime with intent to commit a felony."

The female driver, a 39-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with the joint venture of "breaking and entering in the nighttime, intent to commit a felony and false name to a police officer following arrest."

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The changes you've waited to see in your work situation might not be happening quite as quickly as you hoped. Although the pace is slow, it's ongoing. Expect to hear news soon.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You should be feeling very proud of the fine effort you've made to get that important project done. Now take some time out to celebrate with family and friends. You've earned it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're close to reaching your objectives. That's the good news. But be careful: Your aspects show lots of potential distractions looming. Stay focused and keep your eyes fixed on your goals.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be careful not to let that suspicious Cancerian mind create a problem where none exists. What you might believe is an act of betrayal could be nothing more than a misunderstanding.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Lion's heart overflows with self-confidence. All you need to do is tap into it, and you'll be able to handle any change that must be made regarding that recent surprise development.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The need to watch what you say becomes increasingly crucial this week. Be as temperate as you can with your comments and avoid arguments for the sake of controversy.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A longtime family problem presents new demands. But this time, you won't have to go it alone: Someone else is asking to help share your responsibilities. Let it happen.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A period of feeling vulnerable is about to give way to a stronger, more self-confident aspect. Use this new strength to reaffirm promises you've made to others and yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A creative dilemma stalls your progress. Instead of letting it raise your ire, use the time to re-examine your aims and, perhaps, come up with a new target.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your nimble will finds a way for you to work out those newly emerged problems plaguing your new project. Stay with it. The results will be well worth your efforts.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might feel overwhelmed at having to decide which new opportunity you should follow. Best advice: Check them all out and see which offers what you really want.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Continue to tread water before you even consider plunging into something that never seemed quite right. Some facts will soon emerge that can help you make a decision.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a natural-born peacemaker. You value truth and have little patience with those who lie to you for their own purposes.

Presidents Prevail Over North, Near Share Of League Title

By SEAN BRENNAN

Rivalry games tend to bring out the best in both teams, and that was the case last Friday night in the first of two inter-city basketball games between the Quincy Presidents and the North Quincy Red Raiders.

Quincy, behind a 20-point/12 rebound game from junior center DeShawn Matthews, landed the first blow, defeating North Quincy by a score of 57-52. With the win, the Presidents are within one victory of securing at least a share of the Atlantic Coast League title with Whitman-Hanson High School. The team's record at the moment stands at 10-3 overall and 7-2 in the ACL.

North Quincy (4-8 overall, 2-6 in league play) gave Quincy all it could handle in the first half, and led going into the break at home, 31-29, but the Presidents made their adjustments in the locker room and stormed out to a 9-0 run to start the second half. The Red Raiders spent five minutes without scoring a point after halftime, and turned the ball over on five consecutive possessions.

"We really turned it up a notch to begin the second half," Quincy head coach Bob Fisher said. "We came out of the break very aggressive on defense and with some outstanding pressure in the first five minutes we were able to force some turnovers and go on our 9-0 scoring run."

"The referees were letting the two teams play in the first half and I thought we were playing too soft. We made some adjustments and were able to capitalize in the second half. It is always a good win to beat your rival on the road. Their (North Quincy) record does not indicate just how good of a team they are. And to win in your city rivalry game on the road is big."

The Red Raiders jumped out to their first half lead behind some solid inside play from junior Marcellus Lee. Lee finished the opening half with team high eight points, and the Raiders continually exposed some defensive mismatches in the paint. With a raucous home crowd supporting the team on each and every possession, North Quincy looked primed to gain the upset win, but their sloppy play to start the second half and Quincy's defensive adjustments put an end to that.

"We needed to make a defensive adjustment on Lee," Fisher said. "The way we accomplished that was to get better defensive pressure from our guards on the perimeter. This aggressive perimeter defense allowed our forwards to clog their passing lanes and it allowed Steve Connolly to keep Lee in check in the second half."

By shutting off the Red Raiders' interior offense (Lee scored just 4 second half points), the Presidents stifling defense and transitional offense took over the game. Sophomore guard Doug Scott (20 points) scored seven of his team's nine points in the opening minutes of play in the second half. Scott's ability to penetrate the paint and kick the ball out to an open teammate allowed Quincy to control the clock while constantly getting open looks at the basket.

Quincy bumped their lead up to seven points (42-35) on a Scott jumper with just over eleven minutes to go in the game, but the Red Raiders still had a little life left in them. A David Ray jumper at the 11-minute mark cut the deficit down to five, and after junior Dennis Martin scored to make it a three-point game, the Raiders suddenly found themselves in a dogfight.

But the night belonged to the Presidents. Consecutive hoops by Scott and senior Matt Boyle increased the lead back to seven, and North Quincy would get no closer than four points the rest of the way.

With Matthews and Scott both reaching 20 points, Quincy had both an inside and outside presence that North Quincy could not defend. Add in the solid defensive second half by Connolly (the also scored 9 points), and Quincy had the perfect recipe for a big league win.

Besides Lee's 12 points, the Red Raiders got 8 points from senior Terrell Johnson and 7 points from Martin.

"We are 10-3 and 7-2 in the league," Fisher said. "At the moment we are one game behind Whitman-Hanson (Quincy lost the two teams first matchup), and we play them for a second time next Tuesday. They are over and above the best team in the league. They have a lot of weapons, they can shoot, and they are a deep and talented veteran team. We are cognizant of the importance

Colin Evans District Champ In Elks Free Throw Contest

The Quincy Lodge of Elks is the home of a district champion in the Elks National Hoop Shoot Free Throw Contest.

Colin Evans, a student at Beachwood Knoll, won the boys' 10-11 age division in the recent Circle District Finals at Marshfield High School. Colin will compete next in the State Championship on Saturday, Feb. 10th at Maynard High School.

Evans made 19 out of 25 free throws to win the district championship.

Ryan Evans, Colin's older brother, came in second place in the boys' 12-13 age group and Taylor McKay finished in second place in the 12-13 year old girls' division.

COLIN EVANS, a Beachwood Knoll student, took first place in the Circle District Finals of the National Hoop Shoot Free Throw Contest at Marshfield High School. Evans will next compete in the state championship on Feb. 10th at Maynard High School.

SHUDDER TO THINK

If it feels like your engine is jumping around underneath the hood, the shuddering may be due to worn engine mounts. Marks on the radiator are one indication that this might be the problem. In vehicles in which the engine faces forward with the cooling fan being driven by a belt, these marks are a likely indication that worn mounts are allowing the engine to lurch forward in the engine compartment. Unlike the old days, when engine mounts were composed of simple slabs of rubber, today's mounts are precisely engineered into specific shapes. Some may be filled with silicone fluid while others may be electronically controlled. The new mounts may be more expensive to replace, but replaced they must be.

Engine mounts also work hard to prevent as intended. In fact, your vehicle wouldn't work at all without them. At Leo & Walt's Sunoco, our technicians have the expertise to repair and replace your engine mounts. At the first sign of failing engine mounts, bring your car to 258 Quincy Ave., East Braintree, so you can avoid problems caused by faulty mounts. Make an appointment by calling 781-843-1550 today. HINT: By the time most vehicles reach the 70,000-mile mark or so, their engine mounts may be twisted out of shape or cracked due to vibration and high engine-compartment temperatures.

Fulfills Personal Goal While Raising $3,400 For The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society

Quincy's Alison Haddad Runs Disney Marathon

By SEAN BRENNAN

Alison Haddad, a lifelong Quincy resident and a 1999 graduate of North Quincy High School, recently completed her goal to run in and finish a marathon. Haddad traveled down to Orlando, Florida and took part in the annual Walt Disney World Marathon on Jan. 7.

Haddad's goal was a personal one, but was far from a selfish endeavor. She ran the marathon as a member of The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society's Team In Training based out of Cambridge.

The Society is the world's largest voluntary health organization dedicated to funding blood cancer research and providing education and patient services. It is committed to a cure for leukemia and lymphoma. The Society's mission is to fund research, provide education and patient services, and to support the lives of patients and their families. The Society's programs include: research, education, patient services, and support for patients and their families.

Team In Training, founded by Bruce Celand in 1988, consists of more than 30,000 runners, walkers, cyclists and triathletes who participate each year in the world's major marathons, triathlons and century rides on behalf of The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society. Haddad, like every other member of TNT, was required to raise a set donation in support of the cause. The $3,400 that Haddad was required to raise will go directly to help find a cure for these deadly diseases.

"I have always had a personal goal to run in and finish a marathon," Haddad

ALISON HADDAD, a Quincy resident, recently ran in the Walt Disney World Marathon. Haddad ran the marathon as part of Team In Training based out of Cambridge. She raised $3,400 for The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society.

said recently over coffee. "A friend of mine told me about Team In Training and I went to an informal meeting and listened to cancer survivors talk about how by running I could make a difference. It was inspirational."

Haddad jumped right into the process of getting ready. She has been preparing to complete the marathon by running every Saturday on the Charles River with other members of Team In Training (not to mention on her own in Quincy).

"The team helped me realize that by helping yourself you can help others in need," Haddad said. "Running with the team every Saturday along the Charles gave me the structure and the motivation I needed to be ready."

Haddad's actual running preparation aside, she still needed to reach her set donation goal of $3,400. Haddad sent out letters to friends and family asking for monetary donations, set up a website, had a yard sale and even raffled off a pair of New England Patriots game tickets.

"I knew that the fundraising aspect of my journey was going to be a challenge," Haddad added. "But I sent out the letter to friends and family. I raised $800 by raffling off Patriots tickets and raised an additional $350 by having a card sale. My employer, Anchor Capital (Boston), donated another $700 to the cause."

Marathons, in and of themselves are difficult enough to finish, but the Walt Disney Marathon presented Haddad with more than its share of obstacles. The seasonably warm weather in Florida in the winter is not necessarily ideal conditions for running a 26.2 mile race, but Haddad had not only the support of her fellow Team In Training team members, but also the support of her parents, relatives and her friend Adam Goodrich.

HADDAD and 15 other runners from Team In Training who ran in the Disney Marathon raised over $100,000 for The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society. Team In Training was founded in 1988, and today boasts a membership of more than 30,000 runners, walkers, cyclists and triathletes who participate in the world's major marathons, triathlons and century rides on behalf of the Society.

"My parents flew down to Orlando with me to offer their support," Haddad said. "And we have family in the area, and they came to Disney to offer their support as well. Adam (a former Quincy resident) who recently moved to Florida and lives in the area ran the race with me. Seeing my family at miles 9, 13 and 25 and knowing that I was running for a great cause really helped to keep me motivated to complete the marathon. I finished in a time of four hours and fifty-two minutes."

The marathon started on the outskirts of Walt Disney World, continued through the Magic Kingdom, Epcot and Disney's Animal Kingdom before finishing in the center of the park. Haddad was one of fifteen Team In Training members from the Cambridge unit who ran in and finished the run. When all was said and done, Haddad and the other runners from TNT, raised over $100,000 for The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society.

"Running and seeing how much we as a team raised has given me the motivation to run another marathon this June in Alaska," Haddad said. "This time around my fundraising goal will be $3,800. I am also going to be a running mentor for the runners who will be training with Team In Training for the first time and plan on taking part in the Alaska marathon."

Haddad will fly out to Anchorage, Alaska in June to take part in the Mayor's Midnight Marathon. She will soon begin setting up her fundraising efforts for a second time.

"I would like to thank every Quincy resident and business who contributed to my fundraising goal for the Disney Marathon and The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society," Haddad said. "You all helped me help others."

Haddad has already begun training for the June marathon, but she needs your help to raise the required $3,800. Anyone who would like to donate money to Haddad, can send a check to Alison Haddad, 36 Hollis Ave., #2 Quincy, MA 02171. Make all checks payable to The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society.

Players Praised At Quincy Golf Banquet

The Quincy High School varsity golf team recently held its end-of-season dinner at Pat Flanagan's. Twelve golfers and their families were in attendance along with Mr. Chris Barrett and Mr. Jack Cosseboom, who gave out awards to the top golfers in memory of family members.

Four-year varsity golfer and senior captain Steve Connolly was awarded the Steven Barrett Award for his outstanding play and dedication to the sport.

Connolly, a three-sport letterman (golf, basketball and baseball), is a standout golfer who was twice named to the Atlantic Coast League All-Star team.

The Edward V. Cosseboom Award was given to senior Jeff Ohlson for his much-improved play and enthusiasm for the game of golf. Ohlson played in every varsity match last fall for the Presidents after picking up the sport just a few years ago.

Fellow senior Steve Palmater was recognized for his contributions to the varsity team in his final year before heading off to college.

Head coach Lou Venturelli's team won just two times this past season, but the third-year coach is excited about the prospects of his junior class, which is loaded with talent.

"Junior captain Kevin Shea lives, eats and sleeps golf," Venturelli said. "He works extremely hard at the game and this year the fruits of his labor came to fore."

Shea qualified for the State Tournament this past fall, and he was named to the Atlantic Coast League All-Star team and he has participated in many local junior golf events.

Along with Shea, the Presidents will have back juniors Ricky Salvucci, who recorded his first career hole-in-one this past season against North Quincy, Mike LeBel and Sean McDonald. Sophomores coming back include Evan Luongo, Bryan Ash, Will Head and Stephen Lamb. Freshman Tim Young, who saw action on the varsity level this season, will also be back for Quincy.

North Takes Round One

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy girls' basketball team left little doubt last Friday night about which city program should be considered the best in Quincy. With the win, North Quincy's record stands at 13-2 overall and 8-1 in Atlantic Coast League play. The Presidents fell to 6-7 overall and 5-4 in the ACL.

Th Red Raiders, playing on their home court and in front of a packed house, opened the game with a starting lineup that featured veterans senior, Megan Therrien, Lauren Stille, Danielle Kelly, Shannon Malone and Caroline Cunningham brought the crowd to their feet with a dominating first-half performance, and although the Quincy Presidents tried to remain in the game, the Red Raiders' depth proved to be too much for Quincy. North Quincy entered the locker room with a comfortable 30-14 halftime lead.

The Presidents came out of the gate to start the second half on a mission to trim the Red Raider lead, but after scoring the first bucket of the half, the team's shooting went south. North Quincy, which took every opportunity in the game to increase the lead, began utilizing an uptempo, transitional game and went on a backbreaking 17-4 run to put the game out of reach.

Junior Rebecca Goreham continued her all-star play with a game-high ten points, to go along with a half dozen assists and rebounds, but on a night when everything was going North Quincy's way, Goreham wasn't asked to carry her team to victory. The spoils were spread out amongst a handful of her teammates including Therrien (7 points, 8 rebounds) and sophomores Siobhan Carnell and Catherine O'Connell.

O'Connell came off the bench early in the first half and quickly made her presence felt. She scored six points in the half, and helped the Raiders limit any second-chance opportunities for the Presidents with her stellar play on the offensive and defensive boards. O'Connell finished the game with 8 points and 7 rebounds.

"She (O'Connell) and Carnell are two of the reasons we're 13-2," head coach Doug MacFarlane said. "With them scoring 19 points a night, it really takes the pressure off of Goreham."

The Presidents came into the game against their city rivals on a high note. Quincy had defeated a tough Marshfield High School team on Tuesday by a score of 41-40, and they were looking to ruin the party for the Raiders. Unfortunately for Quincy, they came out against North flat. Their 16-point halftime deficit was more a result of some sloppy ballhandling and poor shooting than anything North Quincy did. As a result, the Presidents were playing catch-up for the whole second half and never could make a game out of it.

Senior Brigid Kyle led all Quincy scorers with nine points. Junior guard Meagan Tobin played well all game and finished with seven points of her own.

With just over two weeks remaining in the regular season, the North Quincy Red Raiders and the Quincy Presidents are two teams heading in different directions. The Raiders are in a great position to capture a league title and earn themselves a home game in the opening round of the post-season tournament, while the Presidents need to catch a fire to have any hope of playing in late February.

Quincy has the opportunity to make up some ground in the Atlantic Coast League as they still have games scheduled against Plymouth North and South. Whitman-Hanson, Marshfield and North Quincy again (Feb. 16 at home). They also have three non-league games against Fonthonne Academy and Norwell and Hanover High Schools.

Quincy plays tonight against Norwell at home before travelling down to Plymouth North on Friday.

On the other hand, North Quincy is in complete control of their destiny. The Raiders (which played Whitman-Hanson on Tuesday night) are already secured a spot in the post-season tournament, and they have three more league games to play. This Friday, the Raiders play host to Marshfield High School before hosting non-league opponent Brockton High School next Monday. The team finishes up their season with games at Plymouth North and at Quincy in the city rematch on Feb. 16 called bragging rights, if not right now, maybe they'll get together somewhere 10 or 15 years from now and they'll remember their personal confrontations.

"It is intense. You could see that on both sides. You try to get them to understand that, yes, it's a big night, there is a crowd there... You saw more people at that game than you'll see at any other game. There are no other games that draw those kinds of people."

The Presidents and the Red Raiders came out of the gate with plenty of offensive pressure and multiple scoring opportunities for both sides, but it was the Red Raiders who got on the board first with a goal off the blade of senior defenseman Ken Patey. Patey's goal would end up being the lone score for the Raiders the rest of the evening. North Quincy finished the game with 15 shots on net, but could not solve the goaltending of Quincy sophomore Jeff Giordani. Giordani made 14 saves in the win and for the season he is second among the division's goalies with 3.28 goals-against average.

The Presidents turned up the heat to begin the second period. Quincy's put constant pressure on North Quincy goaltender Matt Connors in the period, and outshot the Raiders 15-6. Connors, who did all he could do to keep the score close early, could not prevent the Presidents from taking a 3-1 lead at the end of the first.

Junior forward Nick Masone scored twice in the period and junior captain Ted Walsh tallied one goal in the second. Junior Casey Conley finished the scoring for the Presidents with his 12 goal of the season.

On the year, Conley is second in Marshfield. Craig Neill is the most points in the North Division. He has 12 goals, 18 assists and 30 total points up the year. Teammate Ted Walsh is third in the division scoring with a 7-18-25 point scoring line.

The win could not have come at a better time for Quincy. The Presidents were coming off their worst loss of the year, a 7-3 shellacking at the hands of Marshfield, earlier in the week.

"We can take a lot from this game, not because we beat North, but because of the way we played after being manhandled by Marshfield on Wednesday night," Sylvia said. "I'm so happy with the way the kids responded to that. It was a major step for us, and we can move forward."

For North Quincy and head coach Bob Doyle, the disappointment of the loss was coupled with what he saw as a lack of sportsmanship from his players. Doyle apologized to Sylvia after the game for the actions of his team.

"They outlasted us the entire game," Doyle said. "I've been around a lot of these North Quincy/Quincy tilts and I'm just disappointed with our effort."

"Quincy was just all over us. They were very physical, skated a great game and were more opportunistic than us. In the third period we did put up a little bit of a fight, but it was too little too late."

North Quincy will look to get back into the league title chase tonight (1/31) when they play host to Whitman-Hanson High School. On Saturday afternoon, the Red Raiders will play in a critical league game in the road against the division leading Marshfield Rams.

Quincy will also play tonight in a non-league game against Blue Hills Regional. The Presidents get back to ACL play on Saturday night with a home game against Plymouth North. Quincy will end its regular season with back-to-back games versus Marshfield and North Quincy.

The next scheduled rematch, the Presidents and Raiders is scheduled for Feb. 14 at the Quincy Youth Arena.

WINTER CAR CARE

Carry An Emergency Equipment Kit

Because even the best maintained vehicles can fall victim to frigid winter weather, AAA recommends every vehicle carry the following items to ensure safe winter travel:

Flashlight - A working flashlight should be stored where the driver can access it without leaving the vehicle. That will enable the motorist to see obstacles and be seen by other drivers when exiting the vehicle in an emergency. Also carry spare batteries.

Jumper Cables - Jumper cables can be an essential tool for starting vehicles with weak or dead batteries, but they should only be used by individuals familiar with the proper safety precautions. Vehicle owner's manuals should be consulted for instructions.

Abrasive Material - Sand or non-clumping cat litter can be spread under the wheels to improve traction when a vehicle becomes stuck in snow or ice. Special traction mats and even floor mats also can be used for this purpose.

Shovel - A small shovel can be used to carefully dig snow away from the wheels.

Warning Devices - Flares or reflective triangles alert other motorists that you are broken down or stuck and helps give them enough time to slow down in order to pass safely.

Snow Brush/Ice Scraper -

It's important that windows and lights are clear of ice and snow in order to maintain adequate visibility. The entire vehicle should be brushed clear so blowing snow does not become a hazard for other motorists.

Cellular Phone - A cellular telephone comes in handy when a motorist needs assistance in the event of a traffic breakdown.

Make sure your car also has insurance information and a valid registration. You may also wish to have a roadside camera to take a record of any vehicle damage involved in a crash.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

DON MCCARTHY
Managing Director

Children today are faced with pressures and demands we adults sometimes either have forgotten and/or may never know. They are victims of peer pressures, broken homes, insecurities, identity crisis, society demands and much more. Parents and significant others must take time to listen to that God-given alarm bell when something is not quite right. Take time to listen to them, talk to them, and show interest in their activities and interests. Try to find times when you are not hurried or tense and can focus just on them. . .

"A child is a person who is going to carry on what you have started. He is going to sit where you are sitting, and when you are gone, attend to those things which you think are important. You may adopt all the policies you please, but how they are carried out depends on him. He will assume control of your cities, states, and nations. He is going to move in and take over your churches, schools, universities and corporations. All your books are going to be judged, praised or condemned by him. The fate of humanity is in his hands." - Abraham Lincoln

A new youth group has formed at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

The group, called "Beale Street Buddies," consists of youth from grammar school to early high school.

Under the guidance of co-leaders Brian and Nancy

White, the group meets once a month after worship for crafts and games.

Future events planned include mystery rides, picnics, and trips to Pawtucket Red Sox games.

The group's first major project will be Feb. 10. The Buddies, under the supervision of church adults and members of the New Women group, will prepare and serve a pasta dinner. This will be followed by a dj'd dance.

The group welcomes all to join in the fun.

For more information, call Quincy Community United Methodist Church at 617-773-3319.

Four Chaplains Sunday Observance Feb. 4

only 230 men were saved that awful night.

However, moving reassuringly among the frightened men were four chaplains: George Fox, Methodist; Alexander Goode, Jewish; Clark Poling, Dutch Reformed; and John Washington, Catholic. These chaplains worked to calm the men and handed out available life jackets.

Soon, the supply of extra life jackets ran out, calmly and without hesitation all four chaplains stripped off their own life jackets, giving them to the frightened men near them, never asking whether they were Protestant, Catholic or Jewish. It is said that these men of faith linked arms, bowed their heads, and each in their own manner, led the men in prayer, putting their lives in the hands of God.

Survivors recounted the sight and sound of that terrible night picturing those four chaplains who performed a tremendously heroic act.

Mayor Re-Appoints 49 To City Hall Team

Mayor William Phelan re-appointed 49 members of his administrative staff for the upcoming year in a City Hall ceremony conducted on Monday.

The appointees include department heads, management, and administrative staff in various departments throughout the City.

"I am proud of what we have been able to accomplish by working together, but I have high expectations for the upcoming year," Phelan said. "I will challenge our City employees and staff to continue to find creative and innovative ways to improve city services and always keep an eye on the bottom line. We must never forget that we are in the public service business and we owe it to our residents to continue to seek better ways to run our local government."

The following is a list of appointees and their positions for 2007:

- Marion Fantucchio, City Assessor.
- Jolanta Briffett, City Assessor.
- Stephen Roche, City Assessor.
- Thomas Clasby, Director, Council on Aging.
- Stephen O'Donnell, Commissioner, Public Works.
- Michael Ryan, Director, Building-Construction-Maintenance.
- Fred Happel, Program Manager, Public Works.
- Bill Griffin, Operations Manager, Public Works.
- Brian Carlisle, Superintendent, Sewer, Water and Drain.

Tom Gorman, Director, Emergency Management.

Drew Scheele, Health Commissioner.

Roberta Kety, Director, Human Resources.

Marie Brinkmann, Benefits Coordinator, Human Resources.

Lori Connolly, Assistant, Human Resources.

Patty McGowan, Assistant, Human Resources.

Tony Sansevero, Asst. Benefits Coordinator, Human Resources.

Ron Donovan, Director, Information Technology.

A One-Year Moratorium City Council Imposes Ban On Multi-Family Units

The City Council took the first steps Monday night toward preserving, at least temporarily, some of Quincy's suburban charm.

Councillors passed by a 7-2 vote a year-long moratorium on the construction of multi-family dwelling units or the conversion of existing one-family homes in Residence B zones.

Councillor-at-Large John Keenan, who filed the moratorium as an amendment to the zoning bylaws, indicated it was aimed at developers who buy up single-family homes and convert them into condos.

The only opposition came from Councilor-at-Large Joseph Finn, who thought it might violate property rights, and Ward 6 Councilor Brian McNamee, who saw small developers hurt by the ban.

The vote mirrored that of the Council's Ordinance Committee a week ago when Council President Doug Gutro reminded his colleagues:

"The city needs to get a hold of the reins in terms of development and insure we don't lose the character of the neighborhoods that have already started to erode."

"We're seeing condominiums and town houses crop up all over the city where single or two-family homes used to be."

Exempted from the moratorium was a parcel of land on Spence Avenue, Quincy Point, where Ryder Development Corp. has Zoning Board approval to build eight town house units.

Ward 2 Councilor Daniel

Raymond, who filed for the exemption, called the land a blighted area threatened by fast food franchises and experiencing drainage problems.

A second exemption, sought by Councilor Finn for 771 Sea St. and already rejected by the Ordinance Committee, was shot down again, 6-3 with Finn, Raymond and Councilor-at-Large Michael McFarland voting for it.

The year-long moratorium was instituted to give the city an unhurried chance to study its patchwork of zoning ordinances, reduce the size of its permitted structures and change open space and parking requirements.

It will take effect as soon as it is signed by Mayor William Phelan.

Phelan's $4.5 Million Transfer For Tax Stabilization Approved

Mayor William Phelan's request for a $4.5 million transfer to create a stronger financial outlook and stabilize taxes got a unanimous green-light from the City Council Monday night.

The money was transferred from the City's Free Cash Reserve which was certified by the State Department of Revenue last month, to the Stabilization Fund.

The transfer will increase the City's Stabilization Fund to $12.5 million.

"In five years, we have grown our City's Stabilization account by more than $12 million through aggressive collection of revenue that was due to our taxpayers and by tightening the belt on municipal spending," said Phelan.

"This money will be used effectively to ensure that Quincy taxpayers will not experience spikes in their taxes similar to when market factors caused large increases in the past. We are doing our best to keep taxes down in the present and increase our ability to handle any threats of significant increases in the future."

Phelan said when he took office, the city had a fund balance deficit of $5.4 million. With this transfer, the turnaround will be approximately $18 million. The turnaround had also led to repeated upgrades in the City's Bond rating, saving taxpayers hundreds of thou-

International Drug Bust Nets Five From Quincy

Approximately 100 pounds of marijuana and 85,000 Ecstasy pills were seized and 23 persons, five of them from Quincy, were indicted as authorities broke up a drug ring that crossed international boundaries.

The four federal indictments were the result of a 15-month investigation known as "Operation Polar Bear," led by the Drug Enforcement Administration in concert with other federal, state and local law enforcement agencies, as well as the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Quincy residents indicted include:

Binh Kiem Duong, 24, and Kimchau Thi Phan, 23, a/k/a Thao, both of 343 Newport Ave. and Binh Mong Duong, 34, a/k/a Bo, of 170

Farrington St.

Each was charged with one count of conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute Ecstasy and conspiring to commit money laundering. Each charge carries a maximum sentence of 20 years.

Hung Van Le, 56, of 58 Greenleaf St., charged with one count of conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute marijuana, which carries a maximum sentence of five years.

Diep Van Nguyen, 32, of 34 Harris St., charged with one count of possession with intent to distribute Ecstasy and methamphetamine, which carries a maximum sentence of 40 years with a mandatory minimum sentence of five years.

"Complete cooperation among federal, state and local law enforcement partners made it possible to dismantle this drug dealing organization," said U. S. Attorney Michael Sullivan.

The investigation indicated that the main source of supply was a group of individuals in Canada and the several hundred pounds of hydroponic marijuana came in each week from both Canadian and American sources.

Investigative efforts included surveillance, wiretaps, undercover drug purchases, trash pulls and the seizure of drugs, firearms and other drug paraphernalia following traffic stops and searches of residences.

"(These) indictments demonstrate our resolve to make our neighborhoods safer by reducing the availability of drugs in our communities and prosecuting those who peddle their poison," said Sullivan.

Alfred Grazioso, Jr. Appointed Mass. Lottery Chief Of Staff

ALFRED GRAZIOSO

State Treasurer Tim Cahill announces he has named Alfred J. Grazioso Jr. of Quincy chief of staff at the Massachusetts State Lottery.

Grazioso joined Treasurer Cahill's administration in 2003 and served as assistant treasurer for Administration and Finance.

"I am excited and proud to name Al as the chief of staff for the State Lottery," Cahill said. "Al has been an asset to my office over the last four years, overseeing the budget as head of Administration and Finance. I look forward to his continued support at the Lottery."

Prior to joining the Treasury, Grazioso served as chief procurement officer for the City of Quincy. He also was the owner of Grazioso's Deli, worked for Savings Management Computer Corporation and was vice president of Kendall Furniture Company of Boston.

"I am truly honored that Treasurer Cahill has asked me to be chief of staff at the lottery. I look forward to working with the Treasurer and my new colleagues," Grazioso said.

Grazioso lives in Quincy with his wife Cathie and their three children: Nicole, Matthew and Kristin. He is active in his community, including as a coach and past president of Quincy Youth million with investment firms that will create economic opportunity, jobs and housing.

- Returning $3.7 billion in Lottery local aid to cities and towns in Massachusetts over the past four years.

- Creating a Job Growth Initiative, which leverages Treasury resources and works with banking partners to create jobs and affordable housing in Massachusetts. To date, $1.25 billion has been committed, including $590 million of leveraged capital from the Treasury. The Job Growth Initiative has created 2,588 new jobs and has the potential to create an additional 8,100 new jobs over the next four years.

Cahill was recently sworn in for a second term as Treasurer and Receiver General of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Prior to his election in 2002, Cahill served as Norfolk County Treasurer from 1997-2002, as a Quincy City Councilor from 1987-2003, and was a successful small business owner and the author of a book about local businesses.

He is a graduate of Boston University and a recipient of the 2007 Eisenhower Fellowship.

Cahill lives in Quincy with his wife, Tina, and their four daughters.

Free Tax Help For Low-Income Taxpayers

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) is offering free tax counseling and tax return preparation for low-income taxpayers of all ages at the Learning Links Technology Center, 1511 Hancock St., Quincy.

Tax assistance is available in English and Cantonese.

IRS-certified volunteers will be on site to help taxpayers prepare both federal and state tax returns, and E-file for faster refunds.

A special emphasis will be placed on helping taxpayers claim credits for which they may be eligible, including the Earned Income and Child Tax Credits, and the Massachusetts Circuit Breaker Credit for seniors.

Additionally, volunteers will assist taxpayers in claiming the new Telephone Excise Tax Refund. The telephone tax refund is a one-time payment available on 2006 federal income tax return, designed to refund previously collected federal excise taxes on long-distance or bundled services. It is available to anyone who paid such taxes on landline, wireless, or Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP) services.

Blood Pressure Clinics Free For Seniors

Weekly blood pressure screenings for elders will be held every Monday from 10 to 11 a.m. at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy.

Gail Crawford, a registered nurse, will donate her time and talents to assisting senior citizens in having their blood pressure taken weekly.

Appointments can be made but walk-ins also are accepted. For more information, call 617-376-1506.

Coughlin Resolutions Aimed At Global Warming Concerns

Quincy would join the leaders in the fight against global warming if a package of three environmental resolutions filed by Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin Monday night is enacted by his fellow councillors.

The first resolution calls for Quincy to join 393 other cities and endorse the US Mayors Climate Protection Agreement that is aimed at reducing global warming pollution levels to 7 per cent below 1990 by 2012.

The second resolution would have the city join more than 650 local governments as part of the International Council for Local Environmental Initiatives (ICLEI) Cities' Climate Protection Campaign, including observance of the Kyoto Protocol targets.

The Kyoto Protocol is an agreement among 178 nations, formulated in 2005, calling for the reduction of greenhouse gases in developed nations.

The third resolution would commit the city of Quincy to purchasing 20 per cent of its energy needs from clean and renewable energy sources by 2015, beginning such purchases as soon as possible.

"It is my intention to spur an open and public debate and discussion upon one of the most serious concerns to face our city, state, nation and world community and think about what more affirmative steps we can take locally," said Coughlin.

All three resolutions were referred to Mayor William Phelan, the Council's Environmental Committee and the Special Committee on Energy, chaired by Councillor-at-Large John Keenan.

In his bid for support for the Mayors Climate Protection Agreement, Coughlin notes that a recent UN Panel on Climate Change found that "climate disruption is a reality and that human activities are largely responsible for increasing concentrations of global warming pollution."

His resolution notes that the Kyoto Protocol, an agreement that the United States has refused to sign, commits 38 countries that have signed to reduce greenhouse gas emissions an average of 5.2 per cent below 1990 levels by 2012.

"The United States of America," says the resolution, "with less than 5 per cent of the world's population, is responsible for producing approximately 25 per cent of the world's global warming pollutants. The Kyoto Protocol emissions reduction target for the U.S. would have been 7 per cent below 1990 levels by 2012."

"Local governments," adds the resolution, "greatly influence their community's energy usage and emission of greenhouse gases by exercising key powers over land use, transportation, building construction, waste management and, in many cases, energy supply and management."

The city of Quincy, said Coughlin, has already begun to crack down on emissions and his resolution controlling municipal energy needs and purchases would take it a step farther.

"As a city government, we have over the last few years started down the path of taking positive steps by replacing our traffic lights with LEDs to draw less energy and begun auditing our energy consumption.

"(We have been) implementing energy saving measures, switching to low-sulfur diesel fuel, applying green technology to the anticipated construction of a new high school and placing solar panels on the roof of North Quincy High.

"But we can always do more and cities across the country from Boston to Seattle are taking bold steps to reduce greenhouse gasses."

Coughlin's energy resolution would commit the city to lead by example and encourage all businesses, institutions and households in Quincy to engage in energy and fuel efficiency measures,

Friendly Visitors Sought At COA

The COA is also seeking seniors who live alone and would like a friendly visit themselves.

Call the COA at 617-376-1508 and ask to speak with Lena Trough, the friendly visitor coordinator.

The Council is mandated by law to do background checks on all volunteers.

Peter Gagne Has Lunch With Mayor Phelan

Peter Gagne, age 7, of Quincy, recently enjoyed an afternoon and lunch with Mayor William Phelan.

The lunch with the mayor was a prize bid on during a silent auction at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School's fall festival.

Mayor Phelan ordered Peter's favorite lunch of pepperoni pizza, and gave him a personal tour of City Hall. The mayor joined Peter for pizza and answered the list of questions he had prepared for him.

After his visit, Peter said he would like to be mayor one day.

PETER GAGNE, age 7, of Quincy, recently sat down for lunch with Mayor William Phelan. The mayor joined Peter for pizza and afterwards answered a list of questions Gagne had prepared for him.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On Feb. 11, 1776, Georgia's royal governor, Sir James Wright, escapes from his residence in Savannah to the safety of a waiting British warship and returns to London. Governor Wright had been taken into custody and placed under house arrest nearly a month earlier by Patriots of the Provincial Congress.
- On Feb. 7, 1904, in Baltimore, a small fire in the business district is wind-whipped into an uncontrollable conflagration that engulfs an 80-block area of the downtown. More than 1,500 buildings were completely leveled and some 1,000 severely damaged.
- On Feb. 5, 1917, with more than a two-thirds majority, Congress overrides President Woodrow Wilson's veto of the previous week and passes the Immigration Act. The law required a literacy test for immigrants. Subsequent immigration to the United States sharply declined.
- On Feb. 8, 1924, the first coast-to-coast radio broadcast takes place. Bell Telephone's vice president and chief of research spoke at a meeting of the Bond Men's Club in a Chicago hotel. The speech was broadcast in Providence, R.I.; New York; Washington; Oakland, Calif.; and San Francisco and was heard by some 50 million people.

• On Feb. 6, 1937, John Steinbeck's novella "Of Mice and Men," the story of the bond between two migrant workers, is published. The story brought national attention to Steinbeck's work, which had started to catch on in 1935 with the publication of his first successful novel, "Tortilla Flat."

• On Feb. 10, 1962, American spy-plane pilot Francis Gary Powers is released by the Soviets in exchange for Soviet Colonel Rudolf Abel, a senior KGB spy who was caught in the United States five years earlier.

• On Feb. 9, 1981, rock-music pioneer Bill Haley dies of a heart attack at age 56. Haley brought the existing genre of rock and roll into the spotlight with his chart-topping single "Rock Around the Clock" in 1955.

PHELAN

Sunbeams

By Henry Bosworth

The Telephone's Ringing

The telephone is ringing around town. Pick it up and it might be Bill Phelan. Or, Tom Koch.

Some report hearing from both of them on the same day seeking their support. Which could make things a little awkward. You can't be with both.

But both are making an early pitch for support in this year's mayoral race and wasting no time.

Koch's resignation as executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments and announcement he will run for mayor landed like a grenade at City Hall.

How did Phelan take it?

"It energized him," said one source very close to him. "He's on the move."

Phelan obviously is taking Koch's challenge seriously.

"He should," says Frank McCauley, four-term mayor and veteran of many political battles. "And I'm sure he will."

McCauley sees Koch as "a responsible candidate" with experience in government (including five years as Mayor James Sheets' executive secretary) and with a well-known and respected name.

"If he gets the money, he'll make a race of it," says McCauley.

Phelan already has a campaign war chest. Koch needs to raise something like $150,000 to wage an effective challenge.

Koch will take his first step toward that goal with his first fundraiser Wednesday, Feb. 28, 6 to 8 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club, Glendale Road. Tickets: $125, $250, $500.

"Phelan has done a lot of positive things for the city since taking office," McCauley says. "He has to remind the voters of that."

McCauley and the late Paul Harold endorsed Phelan in 2001 when the latter upset Sheets, a six-term incumbent by a scant 17 votes in the closest mayoral race in the city's history.

He notes that Phelan did it with only two years experience as a school committee member, a virtual political unknown.

"And he didn't get into the race until June of that year," McCauley recalls.

Koch, better known than Phelan was in his first bid for the mayor's office, has more time to get his campaign organized and rolling.

He's off to a fast start. He has a website up and running, is scheduling coffee hours and already has bumper stickers in circulation.

McCauley was one of those who received phone calls from both Phelan and Koch.

"I'll sit down and talk with both of them," he says.

Could a surprise third candidate step into the picture?

Maybe. But probably not a major name. Councillor Joe Finn has taken himself out of the ballgame "because of personal reasons and concerns."

It's doubtful Dan Raymondi will run although he would like to be mayor and has a campaign treasury to wage an all-out battle.

Meanwhile, he's keeping some observers guessing.

He was at the recent Wollaston neighborhood meeting regarding the Rice Eventide Home's plans to raze the present building and construct a larger one.

"What's the Ward 2 councillor doing in Ward 5?" some wondered. "Is he going to run for mayor?"

Ask Raymondi and he muses: "Well, I like Wollaston. But my heart is in Ward 2."

And besides, he adds, he and other councillors were invited to the meeting by Doug Gutro, the Ward 5 councillor who called the meeting.

Gutro, incidentally, is among those interested in the mayor's office. But not this year.

He's running for a fourth term as Ward 5 councillor and has a fundraiser-A Presidents Day Reception-set for Monday, Feb. 19, 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. at 1 Adams St. Suggested donations: $200, $100, or other.

There could be a third candidate yet. Not necessarily one intent on winning.

But one you might call a "barometer" candidate. One put in to create a preliminary election.

Usually major candidates aren't too keen about preliminary elections. Don't like to spend the extra money or the extra time campaigning.

But a preliminary election gives candidates an early reading on where they stand with the voters and the time to correct problems before the final election.

And then, of course, there's always the chance of someone jumping in for his (her) 15 minutes of fame. An interesting election year.

QMC Awarded $10,000 Grant To Support Advanced Nurse Training

Quincy Medical Center was recently awarded a $10,000 Specialty Nurse Training Program grant from the Brockton Area Workforce Investment Board and Bay State Works.

The grant, part of a state funded workforce development initiative, will be applied to training, education and orientation programs in critical care and advanced nursing practice for registered nurses at the medical center.

The grant will also provide opportunities for additional diversity and nurse mentorship training for registered nurses working in Quincy Medical Center's emergency, intensive care, and critical care units.

"Across the country, there is shortage of qualified critical care and progressive care nurses," said Elizabeth Cadigan, RN, MSN, vice president of Patient Care and Chief Nurse at Quincy Medical Center. "This grant will underwrite a full range of training, education, and orientation programs designed to further advance the nursing practice of our Quincy Medical Center's outstanding registered nurses."

Quincy Medical Center is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center, formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

Quincy Medical Center has earned outstanding quality scores from national, specialty and state accrediting agencies, including a top rating from the American College of Surgeons' Commission on Cancer.

Scenes From Yesterday

Dam at Johnson's Lumber Wharf, Quincy, Mass.

THIS is a 1920 postcard showing the tidal dam that was located at the mouth of the Town Brook. It was used as the source of power for what is known today as the Souther Tide Mill. After the Civil War, the Souther family used the old grist mill as the center of their brokerage business that sold among other things 'XXX, stock and porter ale by the bbls. Halves and Quarters.' The old mill was located at the corner of Mill Street and Souther Place, which is now part of the Southern Artery. Later the mill was used for sawing wood by the Johnson Lumber Company and then by the Quincy Lumber Company who was the last occupant of the mill. The remnants of this dam are long gone, but the original historic tide mill building still stands and is now owned by the city. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Koch's Candidacy Will Energize The City

I was happy to read in the Quincy Sun (Jan. 25) that Tom Koch has decided to run for mayor of Quincy. His candidacy will energize the city and provide voters with a viable alternative to the current administration.

Tom Koch and his family have made substantial contributions to the quality of life in the City over the past few decades. I will never forget the experience of participating in the Koch Club as a child and later as a volunteer coach. Koch Club Baseball provided children of Quincy an opportunity to get some fresh air, exercise, and make some new friends in a nurturing, non-threatening environment. A few of them even learned a little about baseball.

There was no losing, everyone was a winner. I can still see the kids laughing, running, and smiling. How proud they were when they made it to first base or caught a fly ball. Then to top it off, they got to march in the Flag Day Parade down Hancock Street. These memories will last a lifetime for me and many others in Quincy.

I believe the Koch Club experience typifies the Tom Koch approach. Get in-involved, help out, focus on the kids and the families, treat people the way you want to be treated, and create safe and comfortable spaces for people to enjoy themselves. Of course, making this happen takes hard work and leadership. That is Tom's strength and that's what I think he will bring to Quincy as our next mayor.

With Deepest Thanks

With everything that has been going on, I have not had the time to properly thank all my angels for everything that you have done. Therefore, I would like to send a special thank you to all my family, extended family, aunts and uncles, and cousins, friends and neighbors, the Houghs Neck Shower Groups, and the Steven V. Barrett Memorial Fund.

I am so thankful to be back home at this time in my life. My old neighborhood, the Houghs Neck family, is like no other community in the world. You are the best!!

Secret Santa's, this Christmas Season, you quietly came each day, dropping a little gift at my door, warming my heart and putting a smile on my face. Thank you, thank you, thank you.

Words cannot express how deeply the continued caring, love and support has touched my life. If prayers can be answered, I know I will have a happy and healthy 2007.

Love and thanks to all of you.

Deegan To Recommend Changes In City Employees' Salaries

By FRANK McCAULEY

City Manager William J. Deegan, Jr., announced that he expects to make recommendations to the city council about the readjustment of municipal employees' salaries before the Finance Committee concludes its annual chore of cutting the budgets.

Deegan is now assembling data and analyzing the salary increases requested by various city employee groups. Following the completion of this work he will confer with the delegates from each group concerning their respective requests.

Meanwhile Councillor David J. Crowley, chairman of the Finance Committee, announced hearings on the 1952 city budget would start Feb. 12.

COUNCIL ASKED TO SET TAX RATES, CUT BUDGET TO FIT

Chairman David J. Crowley submitted to the Finance Committee a novel plan of municipal finance in which the council would set the tax rate in advance and then direct the city manager to cut the budget at his own discretion to meet this rate. Crowley suggested that the 1952 tax rate be pegged at $47 or $48. The 1951 tax rate is $46.80.

Under Crowley's plan the council would approve salary increases not in the budget and then turn the budget back to the city manager with orders to make whatever cuts are necessary to hold the tax rate at the pegged figure. (Present Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan please take note).

Easy Does It Salmon Cakes

When we were growing up, one of our favorite dinners was salmon loaf with creamed peas. Although I still cook that entree, I recently came across a great easy recipe for salmon cakes. There's not many ingredients, because the flavor of salmon is so wonderful, it doesn't need a bunch of ingredients.

I still made creamed peas and topped the cakes with it, but eating them just as they are are equally as delicious. Lemon juice is also flavorful for a topping.

If you don't want to use salmon, you may substitute cod fish instead, but I prefer the salmon for its unique flavor.

SALMON CAKES

- 1 large can salmon
- 2 egg whites (beaten slightly)
- 1 tablespoon fresh parsley (chopped)
- a smidgen of garlic powder
- 1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs
- vegetable oil for sauteing

Place the salmon in a bowl. Add the egg whites, parsley, garlic and seasoned bread crumbs. Mix until well blended.

Form into round cakes and saute until golden brown. Drain on paper towel and if not served immediately, place on a cookie sheet in a warming oven.

MR. and MRS. SEAN GLENNON
Erin Driscoll Wed To Sean Glennon

Erin Driscoll and Sean Glennon, both of Quincy, were recently married at St. Gregory's Parish in Dorchester.

Officials of the Nuptial Liturgy were Rev. Thomas Corcoran, Rev. James DiPerri, Rev. John O'Connell, Msgr. Paul Ryan, and Deacon James Little.

The Maid of Honor and soloist was Meghan Driscoll, sister of the bride.

The Best Man was Brian Glennon, Sr., father of the groom.

Music ministry was provided by many close friends of the couple. The organist and trumpeter were James Busby and Patrick Stout, respectively.

The bride and groom were expected to have the Quantum Community Youth Choir sing at the wedding. The choir, which the couple established in November 2004, was formed after their former parish of Mary, Star of the Sea in Quincy was suppressed by Archbishop Sean O'Malley. The bride was the former wedding coordinator of the suppressed parish, while the groom was the former music director and liturgical director of the parish.

Mrs. Glennon graduated from North Quincy High School in 1999 and received her bachelor of arts degree in visual arts from Curry College in Milton. She is employed as the graphic designer/publications coordinator at Newbury College in Brookline.

Mr. Glennon graduated from North Quincy High School in 1997 and received his bachelor of arts degree in government and masters degree in political science from Suffolk University in Boston. He is employed by the City of Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development.

The couple honeymooned in southeastern Maine.

Literacy Volunteers Adult Spelling Bee Fundraiser At Marshall School March 21

Literacy Volunteers of Massachusetts-Quincy at the Thomas Crane Public Library will hold its annual fundraiser Wednesday, March 21 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Clifford Marshall School, Moody St., Quincy.

This year's fundraiser will be an adult spelling bee, where teams of three spellers per table.

The event will not require people to spell out loud. Instead, each team will spell on a white board and hold up the answer for the judges to see.

Donation for the event is $300 per team. There are also a limited number of corporate sponsorships available.

The evening will also feature a raffle, refreshments, prizes and surprises.

D.J. Hank Morse of WROR-FM 105.6 will be the master of ceremonies.

Andrea J. Cabral, sheriff of Suffolk County, will be the word pronouncer.

Three judges will time the 30 seconds allowed for the answer and will also resolve any disputes about pronunciation or time.

All proceeds will benefit the literacy program and will be used to purchase reading and writing software to reinforce their learning and also teach a most necessary skill: using the computer to communicate and search for information.

Crane Library Literacy program serves the South Shore community. Volunteers are trained and matched through LVM-Quincy and have provided free tutoring to adults in basic reading and writing since 1985.

For a registration form and more information about the spelling bee, call Elaine Kline at 617-376-1314.

Space is limited.

Sacred Heart School Student Reporters Interview Cardinal Sean O'Malley

STUDENT REPORTERS interview Cardinal Sean O'Malley for the school newspaper. They made a list of questions to ask, including "What are the responsibilities of a Cardinal?" "What do you do in your spare time?" and "Do you take a Bible with you when you travel?" After the interview, everyone had the opportunity to speak informally and enjoy a few refreshments together. The Cardinal graciously posed for several photographs and autographed a few reporters' notebooks. The Newspaper Club members were wonderful representatives of the school's student body. To read a copy of the Sacred Heart News and link to the Cardinal Sean's Blog regarding the visit go to <http://www.shsquinCY.org/activities/newspaperclub.html>.

County Engineer Asked To Check Montessori Traffic, Parking Impact

In the absence of a city traffic engineer, the City Council Monday night asked Norfolk County for the loan of its engineer to assess the traffic and parking impacts of a Montessori School planned for 310 Adams St.

The Montessori School, which plans an addition to the former Columbian Fathers Home to serve 120 students, already has a traffic study by Rizzo Associates but the Council wants a new evaluation and more data.

The resolution was filed by Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Councillor-at-Large John Keenan.

While it didn't question the accuracy of the data collected by Rizzo Associates, the resolution noted that it was based on a single day during the off-season of the nearby Adams National Historical site.

The councillors pointed out that Mayor William Phelan has not filled the traffic engineer's position for 16 months.

"A good traffic engineer is somewhat of a rare commodity," said Coughlin.

The Montessori School was denied a building permit by the building inspector due to concerns with the setback of the proposed addition. Its appeal will be heard by the Zoning Board of Appeals Tuesday, Feb. 13.

THE BOSTON BOMB Squad was called to Sprague Oil on Southern Artery Monday when a suspicious red cooler with caution tape was spotted in a fenced off area. The cooler turned out to be one left by a company testing water in the area.

City Council To Look Into Tobin Towers Concerns

The City Council is going to take a look at resident's concerns with plumbing and environmental health at Tobin Towers, the senior citizens complex at 80 Clay St., Wollaston.

The Council resolved

Monday night to hold hearings on complaints relative to water temperature, plumbing backups and associated health and sanitation concerns.

The resolution, filed by

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, was referred to the Council's Housing and Oversight Committees with copies to Mayor William Phelan and Housing Authority chief Jay MacRitchie.

City's Winter Carnival In Quincy Center Feb. 19

Mayor William Phelan announces the city's annual Winter Carnival will take place on President's Day, Monday, Feb. 19 from 12 noon to 4 p.m. in Quincy Center.

The admission-free event kicking off school vacation week will feature magic shows, a performance by the Big Nazo band, face painting, caricature artists and other activities for children as well as live patriotic music and entertainment.

There will be presidential and historical re-enactments, featuring George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Abigail Adams.

All performances and entertainment will be spread across venues in Quincy Center including City Hall, Presidents Place and the Church of the Presidents. In addition, the National Parks Service will host activities at the Visitors' Center focusing on life in Colonial America.

The majority of the events will take place indoors, but there will also be street performers, ice sculptures, hayrides and an outdoor miniature golf course (weather permitting).

For more information, contact the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251 or visit the city's web site, www.ci.quincy.ma.us

Bank Of Canton Donates Hats, Mittens To Quincy Salvation Army

The Bank of Canton's Quincy branch recently donated dozens of hats and mittens to the Salvation Army in Quincy.

This year, Bank of Canton asked local patrons to decorate the Bank's Christmas Tree with hats and mittens in lieu of ornaments.

During the holidays, the Salvation Army provides food, gifts, toys and clothing to needy families. Its Quincy Corps offers services in adult healthcare, emergency assistance, holiday assistance and senior vacations, as well as youth programs such as Camp Wonderland and SunShine Pre-School.

"Keeping bundled up is essential to staying warm and healthy during the winter season," said Ken Anderson, assistant vice president and branch manager of the Quincy branch located on Quincy Ave. "We are glad to donate to such a worthy cause."

Quincy residents are encouraged to donate hats and mittens to The Salvation Army in Quincy, located at 6 Baxter St.

For more information on how to make a donation, call 617-472-2345.

Multicultural Business Program Planned By Quincy Collaborative

Quincy 2000 Collaborative has unveiled a Multicultural Business Development Program designed to expand its outreach to the city's growing Asian and Brazilian business communities.

The program, underwritten by a grant from the State Department of Business and Technology and the city of Quincy, was announced Tuesday by Mayor William Phelan at a news conference in the Neighborhood Club.

The program will create more than 25 workshops and seminars designed to help startup businesses and existing companies grow and prosper in the community.

Translation and bi-lingual support in Cantonese, Mandarin, Portuguese and Vietnamese will be provided in all programs offered as well as publications in Chinese and Portuguese.

Bi-lingual one-on-one business counseling will also be available to help individuals create a business plan, prepare a business loan application and obtain the necessary permits and licenses.

Jacuzzi Woes

Q. A replacement panel on our Jacuzzi tub arrived with a big orange sticker on the front. The paper and the sticky glue cannot be removed. I know I could remove it with fingernail polish remover but I don't want to ruin the finish. I tried rubbing alcohol, but it didn't work. Do you have a suggestion about what I could use to remove it? — Wanda C.

A. Un-Du Adhesive Remover, a product found at craft stores, was suggested by one of my readers. Similar products like Goo Gone are available at home-improvement stores. And I've actually seen a suggestion to smear peanut butter over the sticker (my guess is the oil in the peanut butter soaks into the label). If you try this method, don't use the crunchy version.

Q. After purchasing an 8-year-old house, I noticed some scratches inside the Jacuzzi tub in the master bath. They don't seem too deep. How do I get rid of them? — Jesse in Plano, Texas

A. Depending on the extent and depth of the scratches, it may be possible to polish them out. However, this job takes a light touch and a lot of patience, because the fiberglass surface can be permanently damaged.

Purchase a polishing compound for automobiles. (This compound typically comes in two types: polishing and rubbing compound. Choose the polishing type only.) Apply in small circles using a soft, lint-free cloth. Don't scrub the surface or otherwise try to hurry the process.

Another option, especially with a large area of scratches, is to use a power drill with a polisher attachment and a soft polishing pad. Pay close attention to the surface as you work, stopping frequently to make sure the polisher is actually minimizing the scratches and not just adding more to the surface. Don't press down on the drill.

Complete the repair by rinsing and drying the surface, then applying a coat of wax (plain, not polishing, auto paste wax) over the scratched area to protect it and further hide remaining scratches.

If this doesn't work or if the scratches are extensive and deep, contact a professional refinisher.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homeguruz2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is A Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Wall Repair 101: Mending A Crack

(NAPS) — With a little preparation and the right equipment, most cracks in plaster and drywall can be easily repaired. Plus, the project should take most do-it-yourself enthusiasts only a few hours and the materials are relatively inexpensive.

Try these tips for patching small to medium-sized cracks in plaster and drywall. They come from experts at United States Gypsum Company, a leading manufacturer of gypsum board and plaster products.

• Prep the Area — For plaster walls, begin by pushing against the crack to determine how soft the surrounding wall area is. Remove any loose material with a screwdriver and then clean the area with a slightly dampened paintbrush or sponge.

• Gather Your Materials — You'll need a utility knife; two drywall knives—one that's four to six inches wide and one that's eight to 10 inches wide; paper joint tape for wider cracks; a ready-mixed or powered joint compound product such as SHEETROCK Brand Lightweight Setting-Type Joint Compound (EASYSAND); safety goggles and a dust mask; and either a fine, 150-grade sandpaper or a sponge.

• First Coat — Fine to small drywall and plaster cracks require only one application of joint compound, while deeper cracks require two or more coats of compound. Using the four to six inch wide putty knife, apply a generous amount of joint compound over the crack. Angle the knife to force compound into the crack and then smooth it out. Let the compound dry completely before sanding or applying additional coats (for deeper cracks).

• Reinforce — Deeper or wider cracks need to be reinforced with paper joint tape. Apply a thin coat of compound over the crack. Then embed a strip of paper joint tape into the compound to bridge the crack to tightly embed the tape. Let the coat dry completely.

• More Compound — Apply a coat of joint compound over the tape to level the repair. Then apply a generous amount of compound with a drywall knife and smooth and feather the compound out along the edges of the repaired area. Let the repair harden and apply another coat of compound, if necessary.

• Finish — Smooth the surface once the wall is completely dry. Lightly smooth the edges of the repaired area with fine sandpaper or a damp sponge. Prime the patched area with a high-quality primer or a flat wall paint. Wait until the primer dries completely before applying a new coat of paint.

To obtain a free step-by-step guide detailing how to install, finish and repair drywall, contact United States Gypsum Company, 125 S. Franklin St., Chicago, IL 60606-4678, call (800) USG-4YOU or visit www.usg.com and request installation guide J371.

Metal Roofs Attractive To Many Homebuyers

(NAPS) — A growing number of homeowners who want to protect a home against severe weather are finding a metal roof to be an attractive investment.

Experts say many metal roofing systems have a 120-mph wind rating and provide resistance to uplift many high winds that exceeds many new building code requirements.

Another benefit offered by metal roofing is energy efficiency.

Many insurance companies will give discounts of up to 35 percent for homes with a metal roof, while the federal government provides tax credits for homeowners who install a metal roof that meets Federal Energy Star standards.

Neighborhood Housing Services First-Time Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with Dedham Institution for Savings, will host a First-Time Homebuyer Workshop Monday, Feb. 12 from 6 to 8 p.m.

and Saturday, Feb. 17 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

s. 55 Elm St., Dedham. Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

The workshop is open to everyone throughout the state, regardless of income.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend the educational workshop. Participants will have an opportunity to speak with a lender at the workshop.

Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the home buying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from real estate related professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $15 fee per person.

Gauging The Difference

In Home Wiring, Lower Gauge Means Greater Power

Someday you may need new electrical wiring in your home and the electrician may ask if you want 12 AWG or 14 AWG (American Wire Gauge.)

You may not know what this means, but opt for the lower number. When it comes to electrical wiring, a lower gauge number means larger wires with lower electrical resistance, and that translates into greater load-carrying capacity.

It also means better power quality. Fatter wires produce less waste heat and less "voltage drop," which simply means they can transmit full, unimpeded power for critical applications such as home entertainment and the home office. With 12-gauge wiring, lights will flicker less. Moreover, fatter wires provide room for growth — that is, they allow homeowners to increase electricity use without the need to rewire.

Consider this: One thousand feet of 14 AWG solid wiring has a resistance of 2.53 ohms. The same length of 12 AWG has a resistance of 1.59 ohms. That 0.94-ohm difference equals a 37.5 percent drop in resistance, and less resistance means less chance that your home's circuits will overload because too many appliances are drawing too much power. And make sure your circuit breaker matches the wire size: 20 Amps for 12 AWG or 15 Amps for 14 AWG. Otherwise, you negate the protection the circuit breaker provides.

The Truth About Gauges

The American Wire Gauge (also spelled "Gage") numbering system may be counterintuitive, but it is worth knowing to ensure that your home's wiring infrastructure is equipped for the future as well as the present. In this system, resistance doubles every time the gauge number increases by 3. Oddly enough, only even gauge numbers are commonly available. It is easy to see this doubling effect in a table that shows resistance quadrupling when the gauge numbers goes up by 6.

For the math perplexed, it is enough to know that fatter wires can carry more electricity with less heating and

Electrical Resistances of Wire Gauges Typically Found in a Home*
Wire Gauge	Cross-sectional Area of Wire (mm ²)	Electrical Resistance (Ohms per 1,000 ft)
10	5.2	1
11	4.2	1.25
12	3.3	1.6
13	2.6	2
14	2.1	2.5
15	1.6	3.2
16	1.3	4

* Resistance values here are rounded. Also, resistance depends on the kind of wire (stranded or solid), the wire temperature and the frequency of the electrical current. Odd-numbered wire gauges are not commonly available. Most wiring found in homes is either 12 or 14 AWG with 10 AWG sometimes used for heavy appliances.

less voltage drop. With today's increasingly sophisticated — and expensive — home entertainment and home computing systems, power quality becomes a very important consideration.

Safety and Capacity
Residential building codes often allow 14-gauge wiring in branch circuits (for lighting, as an example), but it's not the best choice. Codes are concerned only with fire safety and personal safety. They represent the minimum acceptable size. As a result, many homebuilders furnish new homes with 14 AWG wiring for most branch circuits.

prove your family's safety is to upgrade the wiring," says Dave Brender, national electrical program manager for the Copper Development Association. "There is a vast difference between lower-resistance 12 gauge and higher-resistance 14-gauge. Do what many electricians do for themselves and insist on 12-gauge wiring for all of your circuits."

Just for fun, ask any electrician what gauge wiring he currently uses in his own home, or what he would install in his home when rewiring. Most likely, he would choose 12 AWG as the minimum size for most branch circuits.

"If you have an older home, one of the most effective things you can do to improve your family's safety is to upgrade the wiring," says Dave Brender, national electrical program manager for the Copper Development Association. "There is a vast difference between lower-resistance 12 gauge and higher-resistance 14-gauge. Do what many electricians do for themselves and insist on 12-gauge wiring for all of your circuits."

Citizens Bank Offers Winterization Loan To Reduce High Energy Costs

Citizens Bank is offering an unsecured loan to help low-to-moderate income homeowners in New England finance winterization projects that will help make their homes more energy efficient.

The loan offers select homeowners the ability to borrow $1,000 to $3,000 at a rate of 1% APR for as long as 84 months. A 3% APR is available for loans of $3,001 up to $10,000 for up to 84 months.

The loan program is offered through March 31.

The Citizens Bank Winterization Loan is offered during the winter months to assist homeowners who might not otherwise qualify for loans. Often projects to improve a home's energy efficiency are either postponed until the necessary funds can be saved or finance with a higher rate credit card. This new product will save consumers money, help homeowners conserve energy, and may increase a home's value.

The loan is generally designed for applicants with incomes less than 80 percent of the area median income or who live in a low- or moderate-income census tract.

To apply for the Citizens Bank Winterization Loan, or for more information about the program, visit a Citizens Bank branch or call 1-888-304-5400.

A Love Affair With Roses 100 Million Of Them

(NAPS) A Valentine's Day classic, roses have symbolized love, friendship and beauty across cultures throughout time. More than 100 million roses in more than 1,000 different varieties are sold each year on this special holiday.

Whether one's taste leans towards the subtle, the flamboyant or the delicate, there is a rose to please. Red roses, however, are symbols of romantic love and dedication, and continue to be the most popular choice for Valentine's Day.

The floral experts who can be found at 1-800-

FLOWERS offer the following tips to help extend the life of your roses this Valentine's Day:

- If your roses are delivered in a box, open it immediately and place them in water. If this cannot be done, place the entire box in a cool, dark place.
- To arrange the roses, fill a deep vase with lukewarm water and mix in the floral preservative provided by the florist.
- Remove any leaves that may fall below the waterline when the roses are placed in the vase.
- Use a sharp knife or shears to cut an inch from the bottom of each stem while holding it under water.

- Place roses loosely, yet evenly spaced in the vase.
- Place the vase in a cool spot, away from direct sunlight, heating and cooling vents and appliances that give off heat.
- Add warm water to the vase every day, always keeping it full. Change the water and re-cut the flower stems every three or four days.
- Give roses a face-lift by gently removing discolored or drooping petals to give them a fresh appearance even after several days.

Don't Let A Greeting Card Do The Talking For You

(NAPS) — With approximately 1 billion valentine cards sent each year, Valentine's Day is the traditional date when couples are prompted to express their affection for each other, usually through a romantic greeting card. Unfortunately, a recent national survey conducted by Harris Interactive found that, for most couples, the conversation stops there.

The Pill Lo Talk survey found that couples reported difficulty in discussing relationship expectations (52 percent) and feelings (51 percent), the very topics both men and women want to talk about more often with their partners. Instead, couples are finding a safe haven in work (86 percent) and finances (81 percent), the topics they reported discussing most frequently. Even more surprising is the fact that birth control and family planning fall last on a couple's conversation agenda.

To help reignite mutually beneficial and rewarding relationships, Ortho Women's Health & Urology has partnered with nationally recognized life coach Lauren Howard to launch Pill Lo Talk, an educational program that helps couples to bridge the gap between the topics they want to discuss more often and those they actually are discussing on a regular basis.

"No matter whom you're talking with — your husband, your best friend or your doctor — conversations about important topics can be difficult," Howard said. "Unlike concrete subjects such as who's picking up the dry cleaning, people tend to invest their hearts into more emotional topics like relationship expectations, feelings and family planning."

The Pill Lo Talk program aims to provide women with the tips and tools to help them venture outside of their conversation safe zones so that they can achieve deeper talks with their partners, family and friends. The program features a series of free, online guides that are customized to women in different life stages.

"The guides are fun, user-friendly resources that give women simple but effective steps to initiating and setting the stage for the conversations they really want to be having," Howard said.

The Pill Lo Talk Guides are available at the website www.ThePill.com.

Why is deeper communication so important? The Pill Lo Talk survey found that women who share frequent, meaningful conversations with their partners have significantly greater satisfaction in their relationships than those who don't talk as frequently.

Valentine's Dinner, Dance Saturday At Quincy Community United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold a family friendly Valentine's Dinner and Dance Saturday, Feb. 10.

The evening will begin with a pasta dinner at 6 p.m. followed by a dj'd dance until 11 p.m. Tickets are $12 and may be served by calling the church office at 617-773-3319.

"Quincy Community is trying to put the emphasis on everybody," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church. "So much of Valentine's celebrates are focused on couples, that singles or families feel left out."

"Quincy Community's dinner dance offers everybody, of all ages, the opportunity to have a great time."

The church is located diagonally across from the Wollaston Red Line T stop. The building is handicapped accessible by the front door near the flag pole.

Spice Up Your Valentine's Day With Creative Gifts

(NU)—To surprise a loved one on Valentine's Day, try one of these creative gifts:

- Order in a heart-shaped pizza for a low-key, romantic evening at home and rent love movies you'll both like. (See if a local pizza shop will spell out "I love you" in pepperoni.)

- Show up at your honey's door with a gift that marries two of life's greatest pleasures — rich wine and deep, dark chocolate. Viansa Winery and Italian Marketplace in Sonoma, Calif., can coat any of their award-winning wine bottles with fine Guittard milk or dark chocolate.

- For a more cerebral sweetie, create a custom crossword puzzle or word scramble. Come up with clues and answers that only the two of you would understand, such as memories, each other's attributes and events from your relationship.

- To put a twist on the usual dozen red roses, buy 11 red roses and one white rose. On the card, write "There's always one who stands out in every bunch... and it's you."

- If you're in a long-distance relationship and can't meet up for Valentine's Day, send your partner a wishbone, gift-wrapped in a jewelry box. Include a handwritten note that says, "Wish you were here."

- Buy several hundred Hershey's Kisses and remove the little paper strips. Put the chocolates in a box for your partner, and give him the paper strips, to be used as coupons for real kisses when the chocolate is gone.

Rosy Tips For Valentine's Day

(NAPS) — A stunning floral bouquet can express a range of feelings, from romantic to friendly to something in between. Not only will your wife or sweetheart love to receive a gift of flowers, so will our mother, daughter, sister and friends. From roses to tulips to orchids to lilies, there are flowers to please all the important people in your life.

The most popular Valentine's Day flowers are roses. For many people, roses are a well-known statement of love, the perfect way to say, "I love you." To make this loving gift a long-lived one, recipients should follow some simple steps:

- Roses delivered in a box need to be opened at once and placed in water. If water isn't immediately available, place the open box in a cool, dark place.

- To arrange the roses, fill a vase with luke-warm water and mix in the floral preservative.

- Fill a sink or bowl with water. Using a knife or shears, cut an inch from the bottom of the stem while holding it under water. Remove the foliage that may fall below the waterline to help keep the water clear.

- Immediately place roses, loosely yet evenly spaced, in the vase.

- Place the vase in a cool spot, away from heat.

- To keep roses looking fresh, add warm water to the vase every day. Completely change the water every three days and re-cut the stems.

If you have information on the above crimes, or any crime, please call the Quincy Police Detective Bureau at 617-745-5764. If you wish to report suspicious drug activity, call the Drug Hot-Line at 617-328-4527. You will not be required to identify yourself, but it could help. If you wish to make an appointment to view the Registered Sex Offenders book, call Detective Cindy Walsh at 617-745-5751.

If you wish to contact the Crime Prevention Officer for tips or comments, my direct line is 617-745-5719. My e-mail address is dminton@ci.quincy.ma.us--Lt. Dan Minton.

Each week in The Quincy Sun, the "Quincy Police Hot Spots" page provides readers with numbers to call to report crimes. The telephone number for the "Drug Hot-Line" is 617-328-4527. You will not be required to provide identification or address, although it would be helpful.

Anonymous information via a letter or by leaving a message does not provide an opportunity for the detectives to ask questions to gain further knowledge. Even without identifying yourself, your information can be corroborated (validated) in many ways, such as surveillance, which was used in this particular case. Some people are reluctant to report suspicious activity for fear of having to testify or of retaliation, but by calling the hot-line with detailed information, the Drug Unit will be working with you to eradicate drug users in your community.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Jan. 29, Officers John O'Donnell, Kristen Bowes and Kevin DiMatteo were dispatched to Woodbine Street for a "Breaking and Entering" in progress. While enroute, units were advised that the caller/victim was following the suspect on Hancock Street towards Ferndale Road.

The suspect was described as "a white male dressed all in black, approx. 5'8" and bald with tattoos on his neck." Dispatch then updated the officers that the suspect was running down Ferndale Road towards Oxenbridge Road. Officer O'Donnell arrived on scene and observed a male running up Ferndale Road, pointing towards Oxenbridge Road. Since this person did not match the description of the suspect, the officer turned left onto Oxenbridge Road.

LT. DAN MINTON

As Officer O'Donnell scanned the area for the suspect, he spotted a male in black clothing in his rear view mirror running across the street with someone chasing him. The officer reversed direction and saw the suspect run into the rear of 138 Oxenbridge Rd. Dispatched was advised of where the officer was going out on foot. The officer found the suspect attempting to climb a fence between yards and ordered him to the ground.

The suspect dropped to the ground and Officer O'Donnell handcuffed him. When the officer got a good look at the suspect's face, he recognized him from an earlier medical call at the Wollaston CVS, where the suspect had fallen. The suspect refused medical assistance at that time, stating he was under the influence of Xanax, a prescription medication. At that time, the suspect was able to get up and walk away on his own.

Officer O'Donnell then interviewed the caller/victim, who said he arrived home and noticed and the front door was unlocked. He walked into the house and observed the suspect lying on a recliner with a child's doll on his lap. He confronted the suspect, who fled the home, leaving a black coat and with identification on the porch.

There were no signs of a forced entry. The rest of the house was checked to see if anything of value was missing, but everything looked in place. The suspect, a 41-year-old Quincy resident, was transported to the station by Officer Bowes and charged with "breaking and entering in the daytime with the intent to commit a felony."

Nice Work!

In this case, officers could not find any sign of forced entry into the home, which means most likely that the door was left unlocked. The situation could have been much worse if someone was home when the suspect entered the residence. The fact that the suspect was holding a doll in a recliner would be an indication that he was mentally unstable and therefore, unpredictable.

The victim/caller acted wisely by following the suspect while updating the police, keeping a safe distance so that the officers could apprehend the suspect.

NEED INFORMATION: Citizens are reporting they are receiving calls from organizations stating they are law enforcement agencies, seeking donations. Partial names of these groups are "Fraternal Organization of Police" and "New England Law Enforcement Association." I have been told their number does not show up on caller I.D.

If you happen to get a call from a telemarketer from a law enforcement agency, try to get as much information from them as possible, like their telephone number, their address and what percentage of the donation actually goes to law enforcement.

For those who have asked these questions, the other end of the line goes dead. If you happen to get any of this information, please give me a call so I can follow up on this group. I can be reached at 617-745-5719.

As always, ask for literature before giving and don't be fooled by a "smooth talking" sales pitch.

Koch Launches Grassroots Campaign With Coffee Hours

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch has launched a series of informal coffee hours in homes across the city to listen to the concerns of residents and share his hopes for Quincy's future.

"People should feel connected to the government they elect and know that they have a voice and vital role in the direction of our city," Koch said. "There's no better way to make that connection than with face-to-face, personal conversation. I want people to get to know me; I want to listen; and I want to start proving that by working together we can do better for Quincy."

The informal coffee hours are designed to bring between 20 and 30 people together in a social setting. The first one was held last week in Wollaston.

"It was a great night," Koch said. "No one wants to come out on a Friday night to listen to a political speech. So these events really give you a chance to learn about people, their interests and concerns, and at least lay the foundation for the positive new vision that this campaign is all about."

Several more coffee hours are scheduled throughout the month of February, but there are still dates available. Any resident who is interested in hosting a coffee hour, is asked to call Koch campaign headquarters at 617-472-1306, visit www.kochforquincy.com, or email tkoch2007@comcast.net.

Koch described the coffee hour as a starting point for a broader grassroots campaign he hopes to spread across the city in coming months.

In addition to naming his campaign leadership team last week, Koch held his first organizational meeting in Ward 6, which he said, attracted nearly 100 people from North Quincy and Squantum. Organizational meetings continued this week in Ward 1, Koch said.

"We couldn't be happier with the response so far," Koch said. "I think our optimistic message of treating people with honesty and respect and working together to solve our problems is gaining a strong foothold around the city."

Screenings Are Scheduled For Integrated Pre-Kindergarten

Screenings for the Quincy Public Schools "Integrated" Pre-Kindergarten Programs will be held Tuesday, March 27, and again Tuesday, April 10, if necessary.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Boot Camp Workouts Are Intense

Have you ever wanted to train with the intensity of the military but without the commitment or risk? Many exercisers are finding a way to become involved in this type of intense training through boot camp-inspired classes. The basic principles found in the traditional boot camp have been modified for the average civilian.

Classes often incorporate many of the same exercises that are required during actual boot camp. Push-ups, pull-ups, abdominal exercises, running and obstacle courses are just a few of the exercises used. Classes are structured to include muscular strength, cardiovascular strength and endurance, balance, coordination, body weight training and flexibility.

Many participants not only find these workouts fun, strenuous and challenging, but also effective. The group aspect of boot camp classes also can be intriguing. Added as part of a balanced fitness and nutrition program, boot camp workouts can surely help you reach your fitness goals.

One of the major factors in boot camp classes is the instructor. You will find highly motivated and demanding instructors who will challenge you to push yourself to complete each workout. Please remember to check the credentials of your instructor to ensure that he or she is qualified to conduct a group and has the knowledge to safely design exercise programs, is CPR and first-aid certified, and is educated and trained in teaching. It is extremely important for your safety to participate in a program that has been designed as an effective workout with minimum risk for injury.

You may find group boot camp classes offered at many fitness facilities, through privately owned group training studios or on home video and DVD. The settings for boot camp classes range from indoor group exercise studios to the beach, parks and converted playgrounds.

If you feel like you have what it takes join the ranks of a boot camp-type training class, why not enroll in a class in your area?

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Andrea Renee Wyatt, M.S.S., C.S.C.S., is a certified personal trainer with an extensive background in strength and conditioning as well as therapeutic recreation. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@heartsinc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Health Awareness

Stress Affects Body And Mind

(NAPS) -- Stress matters. At least that's what health research tells us. Recent studies have shown that stress can affect your body and mind and not in a good way.

Our bodies evolved to be finely attuned to a predator's attack. When we sense danger, our bodies quickly release hormones into our bloodstream that increase our heart rate, focus our attention and cause other changes to quickly prepare us for coming danger. Stress was and still is crucial to our survival.

The type of stress we're adapted to deal with, however, is the short, intense kind-like fearing a bear will make a lunch of us. The stresses of modern life-like money trouble, difficulties at work or bad traffic-may not be as extreme, but we often have little time between periods of stress to recuperate. The chronic stress can eventually take both a mental and physical toll.

It's long been known that blood pressure and cholesterol levels go up in people who are stressed. Studies have now linked chronic stress with cardiovascular problems like hypertension, coronary heart disease and stroke.

The immune system is also affected by stress. When your immune cells are bathed in high levels of stress hormones, they get tuned down. People under a lot of stress, like caregivers of people with Alzheimer's disease, are more likely to get the flu or a cold.

Chronic stress affects the brain, too. Brain cells bombarded by stress signals eventually start to shrink and cut connections to other brain cells. The network that coordinates our thoughts, emotions and reactions starts to rearrange. That may explain why studies have linked high levels of stress hormones with lower memory, focus and problem-solving skills.

You can take several steps to help you cope better with stress. First, get enough sleep.

Sleep deprivation throws your stress hormones off balance.

Develop a network of people you can talk to when life gets difficult. People who have larger social networks live longer.

Keep yourself healthy and fit so your body's better able to deal with stress. Exercise regularly, eat a healthy diet, don't smoke and don't drink to excess.

If your stress seems too much to manage, talk to your health care professional. Many therapies can help you deal with stress and its consequences. The effects of being chronically stressed are too serious to simply accept as a fact of modern life.

Exercise Made Easy

Many Find Customized Workouts Help Them Achieve Fitness Goals

(NAPS) - If losing weight and getting fit has become an important subject to you, these fitness facts may be just the help you need to get started.

The first thing to remember is that moving is good for your body, and you don't need a gym or a personal trainer to get you started. You can simply make it a daily challenge to find ways to move your body.

Climb stairs if given a choice between that and escalators or elevators. Take your dog for a brisk walk; the next time you have to go to the post office, try leaving the car at home and ride a bike instead.

Anything that moves your limbs is not only a fitness tool, it's a stress buster. Think "move" in small increments of time. Working out doesn't have to be an exhausting two hours at the gym with the added stress of actually getting there and back. In order to make your workout plan stick, your exercise routine has to be flexible and easy to maintain.

Interestingly, more than 80 percent of those who make the resolution to lose weight and get in shape never follow through. The most-cited hurdles relate to time and money. For some, getting to the gym is a chore, or the exercise class may be at an inconvenient time. For those people, a new exercise television network has been created.

The network, called ExerciseTV, gives viewers who have not followed through on their resolutions to get fit an easy solution to keep them. Anyone with a digital cable subscription can access the network easily using their On-Demand feature and anyone with the Internet can access the Web site at www.exercisetv.tv - all for free. The programs are customized to a viewer's specific goals and the only piece of equipment you need is a remote control.

The network brings viewers original programming and content dedicated to fitness, sports instruction and motivational programming, where top trainers and coaches share their tips, strategies and techniques 24/7. Viewers can choose from hundreds of workout titles for free and get the latest exercise tips and trends. Men and women alike can find workouts and training sessions to suit their individual needs.

ExerciseTV is launching a new, year-round "prescription-based" program called "Your Resolution Solution" that will let viewers choose from five customized workouts to help them keep their resolution. "Your Resolution Solution" workouts provide a combination of workouts to address the most common fitness goals, from Getting Started to the Stress Reliever Plan and all the way to Beach-Ready Body. Each quarter, the network will introduce a new prescription addressing other common workout goals.

ExerciseTV offers users access to some of the world's leading instructors and coaches. To learn more, including tips for planning workout schedules and full-length workouts, visit Exercisetv.tv.

Remember, before starting any exercise program, it's a good idea to check with a health professional first, especially if you're over 40. And before any exercise, always warm up for a few minutes by performing some arm movements. Then be sure to do some stretches.

Stop exercising if you feel any pain in your joints. Be especially cautious if you've had previous knee pain or injury. After you exercise, always cool down for a few minutes. Then stretch.

Line Dancing For Seniors

The Quincy Council on Aging will hold a line dancing class for seniors every Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ROOT CAUSE

When the pulp (the soft tissue inside the root canal) becomes inflamed or infected, endodontic (Latin for "inside") the "tooth") treatment is necessary to remove the pulp, replace it with inert material, and seal the tooth. Root canal treatment may be made necessary by trauma, decay, or a cracked tooth. The goal of the procedure is to save the crown (white outer portion of the tooth). Because the pulp contains nerves and blood vessels, inflammation or infection of the pulp can be particularly painful. Removing the pulp from the non-vital tooth, however, helps to eliminate the root cause of the pain. Root canal treatment should not be confused with the painful condition that makes it necessary.

Your restored tooth could last a lifetime, if you continue to care for your teeth and gums. However, regular checkups are necessary. We recommend regular checkups, periodic cleaning, and x-rays when needed. Our purpose is to help people reach and commit to the highest level of dental health personally appropriate to them. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we believe regular dental care is one of the best investments you will ever make. 'League-Title' Rematch For Presidents

By SEAN BRENNAN

By the time you read this, the Quincy boys basketball team will either be tied for the league lead in the Atlantic Coast League North Division with Whitman-Hanson High School, or the Presidents will be in a second place position with two league games remaining and will have to move forward.

Quincy, which currently boasts an 11-3 overall record and an 8-2 league mark, set themselves up for the "league-title" rematch against the Panthers with a convincing 79-47 victory over Plymouth North last Friday. Quincy lost to Whitman-Hanson earlier in the season.

Leading the way for the Presidents was sophomore guard Doug Scott. Scott finished the league game with a team high 20 points. Quincy led early and often and held a 43-18 halftime lead.

DeShawn Matthews (10 points, 13 rebounds) and senior captain Steve Connolly (10 points, 10 rebounds) each recorded double-doubles in the win.

"It was just a nice win to get us ready for the big game," head coach Bob Fisher said.

The big game (which was played Tuesday night) will go a long way in deciding which team; Whitman-Hanson or Quincy will have the advantage in the Atlantic Coast League North Division.

With a win, the Presidents will be on track for their second first-place tie in as many years. Quincy finished last season tied at the top of the league standings with North Quincy. A Whitman-Hanson win would give them a least a share of the division crown with two games to play.

Quincy plays this Friday night against Marshfield High School at home (6:30 tip-off), and will host non-league opponent King Philip High School next Tuesday before closing out their regular season with a rivalry game against North Quincy a week from Friday.

Quincy Youth Basketball Highlights

The following are highlights from the Quincy Youth Basketball league for games that were played on Sunday, Jan. 21.

In the grade 6-8 boys division, Greg Nelson and Torrey Gustin each scored 18 points to help lead Colonial Federal (6-0) to a 45-35 win over Atty. George G. Burke (3-3). Ian Dunphy (5 points) and Alex Dolan (4 points) also scored for Colonial Federal.

For Atty. George G. Burke, Alex Bottari-Mortel scored 16 points, Dillon Beazley scored 11 points and Bobby Kozlowski added 2 points.

In other action, Century 21 Annex Reality (2-4), prevailed over Quincy Fire Fighters, 29-21. Josue Ordonez led all scorers with 24 points. Zachary McLaren contributed 3 points and Jesse Kennedy scored 2 points. Quincy Fire Fighters (1-5) got solid games from Jack Kozlowski (8 points), Brian Gibson (4 points), Brendan Haines (3 points) and Mike Haley, John Jones and Marco Yeung (2 points each).

In the grade 6-8 girls division, Tobin's Tigers topped Rep. Bruce Ayers, 28-14. For Tobin's Tigers (3-3), Kayla Graham scored a game high 16 points. Samantha Minor added 6 points, Alana DeBello, Patricia Brennan, Nathalie Pham and Ciana Bonfiglio contributed 2 points each and Alana DeBello added 1 point.

For Rep. Bruce Ayers (0-6), Samantha Albanese scored 5 points. Also scoring were Enxhi Taho (3 points), and Michelle Murphy, Lindsey Nazzaro and Alisica Bray (2 points each).

JET Realty prevailed over Quincy Credit Union, 21-17. Leading all scorers was Melissa Linskey with 8 points for JET Realty (6-0). Mariah Anastasi added 7 points, Presley McLaughlin had 4 points and Kathleen Jarrell added 2 points.

Scoring for Quincy Credit Union (3-3) were Melissa McKinnon with 4 points, Rachel Chu with 3 points and Mallory Devoe, Mallory McKinnon, Shannon Leary, Abrar Ahmed and Marisa Foley contributed 2 points each.

In the Cosgrove Division (boys, grades 3-5), Feenan Financial edged Councillor Kevin Coughlin, 24-22. Scoring 8 points each for Feenan Financial (4-2) were Dave Cooper and Alex Linskey. Michael Gendreau added 6 points and Aaron Clancy contributed 2 points.

For Councillor Kevin Coughlin (2-4), Darius Norris scored a game-high 12 points, Anthony Gustin scored 6 points and Rich Ryan added 4 points.

Led by Kyle Richardson scoring 12 points, Morrissey Scantors topped Cosgrove, Eisenberg & Kiley, 28-18. John Grasselli posted 10 points and Tom Furtado 6 for Morrissey Senators (5-1). For CE & K (1-4), Andrew Bell scored 10 points, George Lima scored 6 points and Joe Yacano added 2 points.

Yellow Cab fell to Dunkin' Donuts, 36-20, despite Matt Kozlowski sinking both free throws and scoring 16 points for Yellow Cab (2-4). Also scoring for Yellow Cab were Paul Ford and Tim Durgin with 2 points each.

Michael Bina scored 16 points for Dunkin' Donuts (6-0), Steven Quinn and Shamus Hill-Torres each scored 6 points, Jonathan Bain scored 4 points and Kevin Wu and Gianni Hill-Torres with 2 points each.

Lady Presidents Defeat Hanover

The eighth grade Lady Presidents Travel Team played their best defense all season against Hanover, and won their game, 26-22.

Playing in a close game, all the girls showed their pride at both ends of the court and played together as a team.

The Lady Presidents had eight of ten players with two or more baskets. Christina Cahill, Courtney Peters and Julia White all finished the game with season high in scoring.

Quincy Wrestlers Down North For First Time In 3 Years

The Quincy Presidents' varsity wrestling team defeated their cross-town rivals the North Red Raiders for the first time in three years last week, 40-32. With the win, the Presidents' record stands at 6-13-1 overall and 2-4-1 in Atlantic Coast League action.

Sophomore Liam Keogh's pin-win in the 189-pound weight class gave the Presidents the duel team victory.

"It was a tremendous win," head coach Pat Lane said. "Definitely a back-and-forth match. This was a big step toward improving the team. We are on the right track now, we just need to keep working hard."

Other winners for Quincy included freshman Josh Gerry (pin-win at 112-pounds), senior captains Joe McDonald (by decision/130-pounds) and Danny Sok (by decision/135-pounds) and Lewis Chin (by decision/152-pounds).

"The kids are proud and obviously ecstatic and I couldn't be happier for them, they earned it," Lane said.

Quincy-North Track Teams Post Second Victories

The combined Quincy/North Quincy boys and girls track teams both earned their second victories of the winter season with duel meet wins over Norwell High School last week.

The Quincy/North Quincy girls' team defeated Norwell, 55-45, to finish their duel meet schedule with a 2-3 overall record.

Sophomore Rachael Kananoff won the one-mile event in a personal best time of 5:55.1. Sophomore Jessica Davis took home a first-place finish in the two-mile race with a time of 13:51.3. Other winners for Quincy/North Quincy included senior Kelly Pineo in the shot put (31-3 feet) and junior Rebecca Stanton in the high jump event (4-5 feet).

The Quincy/North Quincy boys' team dispatched of Norwell, 52-44, to finish their duel meet season at 2-3 overall.

Junior Danny Jackson won the 55-meter dash with a time of 7:16. Jackson will compete in this event at the States.

THE DIESEL RENAISSANCE

The first step in the transformation of diesel into a cleaner fuel came in late-spring 2006 when the Environmental Protection Agency required that U.S. refineries begin producing ultra-low-sulfur diesel (ULSD), which has 97% less sulfur than ordinary diesel. As a result, ULSD cuts soot emissions. In addition, the EPA rule mandates that 80% of the diesel produced for highway use be ULSD-compliant. Beyond this first step, by Oct. 15, 2006, all gas stations now selling diesel are required to sell ULSD instead of, or in addition to, diesel. Upon switching to the new fuel, diesel vehicles can expect to emit about 10% less pollution. But, the biggest decrease in pollution will come when "clean diesel" engines debut later next year.

Diesel fuels have become more popular as the benefits of diesel become well known. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, our technicians can perform professional maintenance on your diesel engine. North Quincy Improves To 14-3 Record

The North Quincy girls' basketball team upped its regular season record to 14-3 overall and 9-2 in the Atlantic Coast League with a one win/one loss record last week. The Raiders currently sit in second place in the Atlantic Coast League's North Division, one game behind the league leading Whitman-Hanson Panthers.

North Quincy had the opportunity to wedge its way into a first-place tie with Whitman-Hanson with two league games remaining, but the Red Raiders lost to the Panthers early last week by a score of 67-60. North Quincy had defeated Whitman-Hanson in the two teams first meeting, 47-42, on Dec. 19.

The first ten minutes of the game was filled with missed scoring opportunities for both teams, and neither team could hold on to the basketball. The Panthers finally gained their footing and pulled out to an eight-point halftime lead.

North Quincy's Rebecca Goreham (14 points, 15 rebounds) was continually challenged in the paint by the Panthers' offense and as a result she quickly got herself into foul trouble, and the Red Raiders' deficit went from eight to 16 points early in the second-half.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

"I told the girls going in they need to take away Whitman-Hanson's postplay and offensive rebounding," head coach Doug MacFarlane said. "They (Whitman-Hanson) got big offensive boards when they needed it."

North Quincy is not one of the best team's on the South Shore for nothing, and a late comeback attempt that cut the Panthers' lead down to seven points with 2:30 to play showed the resiliency of this Red Raider team. Leading the second-half surge for North Quincy were sophomore Siobhan Carnell (14 points, seven rebounds) and senior point guard Lauren Stille (10 points), but when Goreham fouled out with 1:13 left, the game was decided.

North Quincy rebounded from the Whitman-Hanson loss with a huge Atlantic Coast League win over Marshfield High School later in the week. The Raiders won 54-35 to keep their faint league title aspirations alive.

Goreham once again dominated all aspects of the game. The all-star finished the game with a 12 point, seven rebound, seven steal and five assist scoring line.

The Red Raiders played non-league opponent Brockton High School on Monday (Senior Night) and traveled down to Plymouth North on Tuesday night for an ACL contest against the Eagles. The team will take a ten-day layoff before finishing up their regular season with the second of two games against Quincy High School on Feb. 16.

Raiders Bow To Marshfield

By SEAN BRENNAN

As the North Quincy Red Raider hockey team discovered this past Saturday, it is always tough to beat a good team twice in one season.

The Red Raiders lost to Marshfield High School, 4-3, in a well-played high school hockey game at the Quincy Youth Arena. The Raiders had previously handed the Rams their only league loss of the year in the second week of the season.

With this league loss, the Raiders can all but kiss any hopes of a league title goodbye. At 5-5-3 overall and 5-3-3 in Atlantic Coast League play, North Quincy needs to return to form over their last four games (two initial shot was blocked, he gathered the deflection and buried it into the back of the net for a 3-2 lead. But the Rams, who outshot North Quincy 18-7 in the period, tied the game at 3-3 on another Nichols goal at 8:46 of the second period.

Nichols' third and final goal in the third period shut the door on the Raiders, and after one last scoring chance in the final minute, the Raiders fell, 4-3.

Senior captain Nash Winters responded to the Rams' opening goal with one of his own just two minutes later. Senior defenseman Ken Patey assisted on the goal. North Quincy took the early 2-1 advantage in the closing minute of the first period on a goal by senior captain Jimmy Fitzpatrick (assists went to Patey and sophomore Brandon Gilmore).

The Rams responded to the late Raider goal in the first period with a quick strike of their own in the second. Marshfield's Craig Nichols (hat trick) scored off a rebound and just like the score was tied at 2-2.

The feisty Red Raiders once again took a lead almost immediately after Nichols' goal. At the 2:28 mark, Gilmore streaked up the middle of the ice and after his initial shot was blocked, he gathered the deflection and buried it into the back of the net for a 3-2 lead. But the Rams, who outshot North Quincy 18-7 in the period, tied the game at 3-3 on another Nichols goal at 8:46 of the second period.

Nichols' third and final goal in the third period shut the door on the Raiders, and after one last scoring chance in the final minute, the Raiders fell, 4-3.

"We did play a nice first period, when you saw two evenly-matched teams going at it," head coach Bob Doyle said. "But we were flat-footed in the whole second period, and Marshfield was taking it to us. But the big thing to me is that we stemmed that tide, regrouped, and had a chance to win it in the third period. That third period was great up-and-down hockey."

North Quincy, which had been on a six game losing streak, broke through with a win early last week in a league game versus Whitman-Hanson High School. The Red Raiders defeated the Panthers by a 1-0 score.

Jimmy Fitzpatrick tallied the only goal of the game just 30 seconds after the opening face-off. Assists on the goal went to Patey and sophomore defenseman Joey Vialpando.

Senior Max Adams made 21 saves for the shutout.

The team's final push for a post-season spot depends on the results of their final four games against Plymouth North (tonight), Hanover (Sat.), Quincy (next Wed. at 7:10) and Silver Lake (2/17). The Red Raiders need to finish with a .500 record or better to qualify.

Quincy Girls' Basketball Dribbles Past Norwell, Plymouth N.

The Quincy girls' hoops team may have ended the month of January on a down note (losses to North Quincy and Fontbonne Academy), but their hot start to the month of February may have salvaged their post-season dreams.

Quincy defeated Norwell High School on Feb. 1 by a score of 58-38 and then came back the next day with a big league win over Plymouth North, 60-41.

The modest two-game winning streak puts the Presidents' overall record at 8-8. The team is 6-4 in the Atlantic Coast League.

In the game that was called by the coaches as "the biggest game of the year," Quincy avenged their season-opening loss by thoroughly handling an unsuspecting Norwell team.

The team's tri-captains all played major roles in the victory.

"Meagan Tobin started out cold, but quickly heated up by scoring 13 first-half points and finishing with a season-high 22 points (including four three-pointers)," head coach Jeff Bretsch said. "Marybeth Torpey also played a huge game scoring 11 points and directing the offense. Bridhid Kyle hit several key jumpers early on and finished with 11 points as well."

The team's offense was complemented by a strong defensive effort from the whole team and the effort did not go unnoticed by Bretsch.

"The story of the night wasn't the shooting, it was the improved intensity of the Quincy defense," Bretsch boasted. "The white jerseys were everywhere, diving, scrapping and hustling to every loose ball. Marybeth Torpey set the tone with her tremendous individual man to man on Norwell's superstar Katelyn Stravinsky."

The entire team effort carried over into their next game against Plymouth North the following night.

Quincy outscored the Eagles 24-30 start the game, and their stingy press defense only allowed Plymouth North to get past half-court four times in the game's first eight minutes.

"The hot first half shooting of Torpey (3 threes) and Tobin (2 threes) was too much for the Eagles to handle," Bretsch said. "Our defense and hot shooting gave us a 35-13 halftime lead."

The second half was more of the same for the Presidents and when the final whistle blew, Quincy was right back in the mix for a post-season spot.

The leading scorers for Quincy in the game included

Torpey (18 points, 7 assists), Tobin (13 points), Kyle (8 points), juniors Kathryn Carella (5 points) and Julie Kisielius (5 points) and sophomore Alyssa Mullen (4 points).

The Presidents, who played on Tuesday against Whitman-Hanson, travel down to Marshfield this Friday, before traveling down to Plymouth South next Tuesday.

The team will host North Quincy a week from Friday. Tip-off is scheduled for 5:00 p.m.

WINTER CAR CARE

Tough Winter Auto Repair Jobs Need Top Repair Facilities

Winter weather can cause difficult-to-diagnose automotive problems that require the services of top auto repair facilities, according to AAA Southern New England.

AAA offers this advice for choosing the best auto repair shop:

- Look for AAA approved repair shops. These shops display a sign that says "AAA Approved Auto Repair." To be AAA approved, repair shops must meet tough standards for personnel, customer service, equipment and scope of service. Technicians must be certified by the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE).

- Decide what kind of shop can best handle the work. You may not necessarily go to the same place for all repairs.

- Ask friends, family members, and others for recommendations of technicians they trust.

Clean Diesel Cars Offer Fuel Savings

(NAPS) - Growing

evidence shows American consumers are turning to diesel-powered vehicles to help them save money on fuel costs without having to sacrifice power and performance.

Researchers at J.D. Power and Associates predict that diesel sales will account for more than 10 percent of U.S. vehicle sales by 2015-up from 3.6 percent in 2005.

"Today's advanced clean diesel technology offers American consumers a fuel-sipping alternative that does not sacrifice power and performance," said Allen

Schaeffer of the Diesel Technology Forum. Diesel vehicles are inherently fuel efficient, typically getting 20 to 40 percent more miles per gallon than gasoline vehicles.

According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, America could save up to 1.4 million barrels of oil per day, an amount equivalent to the oil we currently import from Saudi Arabia, if one-third of U.S. cars, pickups and SUVs were diesel-powered.

For more information on clean diesel cars, log on to www.dieselforum.org.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of mixed signals can create an unreliable situation in which to make decisions. Best advice: Hold off on making any commitments until you're sure you know what's going on.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An apparently friendly offer comes with some strings attached. Be careful not to get tied into something you don't really want. Thoroughly examine all your options before making a choice.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) If you're not careful, distractions can interrupt your best efforts. Continue to focus on what you need to do. You'll soon have lots of time to enjoy the rewards of your dedication.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Knowledge replaces suspicion as you begin to learn more about that "act of betrayal." On a lighter note, someone close to you might be planning a pleasant surprise.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Control your sometimes-overactive jealousy gene before you find yourself saying or doing something that you could later regret. Best advice: Stop obsessing and move on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to loosen up and do something wonderful and exciting before your more reserved nature resurfaces. A message brings news of imminent change.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Cheer up. Things begin to improve significantly by mid-February. However, you might still need help to get through the rest of this sometimes-difficult period.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Something you learned last week takes on new meaning as you begin to relate it to another situation in your life. It's best to keep this matter to yourself for now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your energy level is climbing, and so is your self-confidence. Good for you, because you'll need a good dollop of both to tackle an exciting challenge on the way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A family issue might interrupt a career-linked project. Try to give the matter the attention it needs, but be careful not to jeopardize your workplace situation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some self-doubt shows up this week, causing you to question your ability to handle a new challenge. But you know you can do it, and this is your chance to prove it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A personal matter requires you to be as clear and forthcoming as possible in order to avoid misunderstandings. A career move is eased with the emergence of new facts.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of reaching people that makes them feel good about themselves. You would be a splendid motivational speaker.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It is the time of the year to pay homage to a great American... the 16th President of the United States - Abraham Lincoln.

"Honest Abe's" fundamental strength - as a human being, as a politician, and as chief executive of our nation - was his love of his fellow man and, conversely, his abhorrence of man's inhumanity to man. Lincoln despised the subjugation of one human being by another. He fought with all his wisdom, wit, and power to assure equal opportunity and fair play to all. A peace-loving man, he had the misfortune to come into leadership at a time of complicated emotions and bloody hatreds. He was, by nature, a man with humor and a zest for life. He bore the griefs of a nation at war on his shoulders.

SCOTT DEWARE

Lincoln was more than a great American. He was a great humanitarian who made his way to immortality through the force of his own intellectual powers and faultless character.

As we pay homage to this great man, let us remember and be proud that his memory is cherished throughout the world wherever people have an understanding of his conception of the dignity of the common man.

The family of Dorothy Brooks would like to thank the many friends and families who expressed their sympathy for the loss of our mother, wife, grandmother, sister, aunt and friend. All of the support we've received through this difficult time has helped us cope with our grief.

Grandpa loved gardening, baseball, and playing the harmonica.

Your memories are precious. That's why, at Keohane Funeral Service, we take the time to find out what made your loved one special.

Whether it's gathering some of the flowers he so tenderly cultivated or finding a musician to play "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" on the harmonica, you can count on us to help you plan a service that will be just as unique as the person you love.

Angelina A. Cingolani, 88

Sales Associate At Jordan Marsh

A funeral Mass for Angelina A. (DeLongo) Cingolani, 88, of Quincy, a retired sales associate and homemaker, was celebrated Wednesday in Saint Mary's Church, 95 Crescent St., West Quincy.

Mrs. Cingolani died Feb. 2 at the Colonial Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Weymouth after a brief illness.

Born in Cohasset, she moved to Quincy at an early age and was a Quincy resident most of her life. She attended Quincy schools and graduated from Quincy High School.

She was a devoted homemaker and was also employed at the former Jordan Marsh as a sales associate.

She enjoyed dancing; she and her husband would go dancing every weekend.

Mrs. Cingolani enjoyed spending time with her grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

She also enjoyed gardening and yardwork.

She was a member of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Quincy Sons of Italy.

Wife of the late Dante "Danny" Cingolani, she is survived by a daughter, Ellen Obshatkin of Quincy; two sons, Daniel P. Cingolani of Abington and John M. Cingolani of Bourne; three sisters, Janet Baldassini of Braintree, Lorraine Lecomte and Dorothy McDonough, both of Wilmington; a brother, Michael DeLongo of Randolph; seven grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Liver Foundation, NE Chapter, 88 Winchester St., Newton, MA 02461; the Brain Aneurysm Foundation, 612 East Broadway, South Boston, MA 02127; or to the Children's Hospital, P.O. Box 414421, Boston, MA 02241.

Catherine B. Mullin, 93

Homemaker

CATHERINE B. MULLIN
1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

A funeral Mass for Catherine B. (Hickey) Mullin, 93, of Quincy, a homemaker, was celebrated Monday in Saint John the Baptist Church, 44 School St., Quincy.

Mrs. Mullin died Feb. 1 at the Hancock Park Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Quincy after a long illness.

Born in Quincy, she was a lifelong Quincy resident. She lived most of her life in the Quincy Point section of Quincy.

Mrs. Mullin was educated in Quincy schools and graduated from Quincy High School.

A devoted homemaker, she enjoyed spending time with her family.

She also enjoyed sewing and was an avid Boston Red Sox fan.

Wife of the late Reginald S. "Reggie" Mullin, she is survived by a daughter, Patricia A. Mullin of Randolph and a son, Kevin M. Mullin of Trustin, Calif. Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals,

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Nicole's Law Revisited

It's actually a good time to discuss the Nicole's Law again.

If you recall, Nicole's Law pertains to the installation of carbon monoxide (CO) detectors within all residential properties. Residential properties include 1 & 2 family homes, multi-family buildings, apartments, condominiums, townhouses, etc. They're required within any residential structure that contains fossil burning fuel equipment, including fireplaces, or contains attached or enclosed parking. Fossil fuel burning equipment is any equipment utilizing oil, gas, wood, coal, pellets or combustibles.

Within these residences, the law requires the presence of a CO detector on each level of habitation, and within 10 feet of a bedroom door on a level with a bedroom. The CO detector must be installed as per the manufacturer's instructions. It can be a battery-powered detector, a plug in with a battery backup or a hardwired combination with a smoke detector, if the smoke detector portion is of the photoelectric type.

These detectors were to be installed by March 31, 2006 in all of these occupancies with limited exceptions. Those exceptions being those residences eligible for, and choosing an alternate compliance option. This option pertains to owners of residential buildings that have existing fire alarm systems that directly notify the fire department when in alarm.

In these instances, CO detectors target specific areas, rather than being installed in each unit. For instance, if in a multiunit residential building, there is no fossil fuel burning equipment in each unit, but there is a centrally located fossil fuel burning furnace, hot water heater, laundry or generator, the option allows owners to target the CO alarm detection in only those areas and adjacent areas, as long as they are tied into the building's alarm system.

In this instance, CO detection must be present in the room containing the furnace, hot water heater, laundry or generator, and all adjacent spaces to this room, for instance, apartments next to and above. This option, if chosen, was mandated to be installed by January 1, 2007.

We currently inspect residences prior to their sale. We then check for proper placement of smoke detectors and carbon monoxide detectors, and upon the completion of the inspection, produce a certificate for the owner to be presented at the passing. However, as these deadlines indicate, don't wait for the sale of a home to install CO detectors, conform to the requirements of Nicole's Law and install these detectors now for your own protection, if you haven't done so already. Meanwhile we at the fire prevention bureau are ready to assist you and answer any questions you may have.

Be safe!

sands of dollars in reduced debt payments.

"Much like it is managing household finances, Phelan said sometimes the toughest thing to do is to put money in the bank", Phelan said. But in municipal finance, putting money into reserves will save us hundreds of thousands of dollars in the long-run and will ensure that our taxpayers have the resources necessary to avoid any major tax increases in the future. We have developed a plan, committed to that plan, and have seen early successes. I will continue to manage the City in the best interests of the overall financial health of the city."

"Our goals are high for 2007," Phelan said. "I expect that major projects such as the development of downtown Quincy, construction of a new Quincy High School, the restoration of the Broad Meadows marsh, and the creation of a vibrant waterfront area at the Southern Tide Mill site among others, will not affect our ability to continue to provide the valuable city services that residents depend on daily. Above all else, we will remain focused on keeping our neighborhoods safe, clean and welcoming."

OPEN LETTER FROM
John Hilane
PHASE II DIAMONDS & FINE JEWELRY

Dear Friend and Valued Customer:

In October 1976, PHASE II DIAMONDS & FINE JEWELRY began in Quincy's Center as a One Dollar Store. As time passed, our customers have grown and we added more gift items and fine jewelry. For over 30 years we have been your family jeweler, basing our business on integrity, service and customer satisfaction. We pride ourselves on providing our customers with exquisite, unique jewelry at fair prices. Serving the customers of Quincy and surrounding areas has provided me with many friends and great memories.

To all things there is a season. After much thought and careful deliberation, I have decided to pursue other interests and therefore have made the difficult decision to close PHASE II DIAMONDS & FINE JEWELRY. I want to thank you for your loyalty. I want to give you the opportunity to save during the largest sale in our history.

In order to quickly complete this task, I am offering our ENTIRE INVENTORY of fine jewelry items including Diamond Jewelry, Precious Gemstone Jewelry, 14K Gold Chain, Earrings, Pendants, Watches and more at tremendous savings of up to 60% off during our fabulous total liquidation GOING OUT OF BUSINESS SALE.

Sincerely,

First Co-Recipients In 22 Years

Vincent Moscardelli, P.J. Foley Share Sun Citizen Of Year Honors

The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year is not one-but two.

Patrick J. "P.J." Foley and Vincent "Vin" Moscardelli are the first co-recipients of the award since it was established 22 years in 1985.

Both were selected for their outstanding volunteer community service.

Moscardelli, former principal of Central Junior High School, for his generous support of high school and youth sports and other worthy causes.

Foley for his environmental and conservation efforts and accomplishments.

They were among 36 nominated for the award by Quincy Sun readers.

The final voting by a panel of judges resulted in a deadlocked tie between Moscardelli and Foley.

"We decided we should honor both of them rather than try to break the tie," said Sun publisher Henry Bosworth. "Both are very deserving."

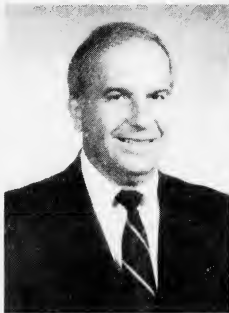

They will receive their awards at a reception in April at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

"We congratulate P.J. and Vin for their selection and also the other 34 nominees," Bosworth said. "Being nominated is an honor in itself."

It only takes one nomination to be considered for The Sun Citizen of the Year Award.

Foley was nominated by William Weed of Curlew Rd., "for his dedication and hard work in saving the salt marshes in Quincy and securing federal funding for these projects."

Moscardelli received 27 nominations citing his contributions to the city as a teacher and principal, a business leader and for "hundreds of good deeds" over many years. Nominating him were: Paul Phillips, president of the Quincy Education Association; Frank Santoro, Quincy High School principal; Lou Ioannilli, North Quincy High School principal; Jim Rendle, Quincy Public Schools Athletic Director; Dr. John Franceschini, Jr., director of Physical Education and Health, Quincy Public Schools; Ken McPhee, director of Safety and Transportation, Quincy Public Schools; Peter Chrisolm, former North Quincy High School principal; Ron Ivil, president of Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame; George Burke, 339 Hancock St., Quincy; Thomas F. Williams, Esq., 21 McGrath Highway; Mario Casali of Braintree; Andrew Mercanto, 12 Hunt St.; Al Moscantolo of South Weymouth; Raymond Papile of Scituate; Tony Green, 12 Hunt St.; Priscilla Ivil of Weymouth; Joseph Lydon, Governors Rd.; Carl Soderstrom, Jr., German Ave.; Fred Cobban, 86 Exeter St.;

Scott Simpson, Davis Rd.; James Moscardelli Weymouth; Qi Li Tan, Hancock St.; Jian Zhi Tan, Tyler St.; Arlene Connolly, Colby Rd.; Lorraine Fratalia, Hancock St.; John Boey, Hancock St.; Victoria Kosliu of Norwell. VIN MOSCARDELLI In addition to his involvement in high school and youth sports, Moscardelli has given considerable time to other causes. Among them sponsorships of golf tournaments that have raised $85,000 to fight muscular dystrophy. Moscardelli, now a Braintree resident, grew up in Quincy and was in the Quincy public school system 20 years as a teacher, coach and principal. Parents and peers saw him as a role model for students and teachers. His last 12 years was as principal at Central Junior High School from where he retired in 1982. But he did not really retire. He just changed careers. He had such great affection for that school that when he opened a real estate firm in 1986 no one was surprised when he named it Central Real Estate.

$7 Million For Sidewalk, Street Water Projects

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Hard hats and jackhammers will be commonplace in nearly every neighborhood this summer as the Department of Public Works earmarked $7 million for projects sprucing up sidewalks, road and improving antiquated water mains.

DPW Commissioner Stephen J. O'Donnell outlined the multiple projects Monday at the City Council's Public Works Committee meeting. He noted that funds are available through the state's Chapter 90 and the mayor's budget.

"We're looking at a good season," O'Donnell told the committee after submitting lists of 18 road improvements and neighborhoods and residential areas.

O'Donnell noted that there's been "a major major slowdown in state work" so contractors are vying for jobs in cities and towns. In fact, he said that he's had 13 bidders on one project.

"Nobody's getting any money in plowing. It's been a tough winter," O'Donnell said, adding he expects a "very productive Spring."

According to O'Donnell, DNR of Stoneham has already been awarded a $1.6 million contract for the road improvements. The sidewalk improvement program, estimated at $2 million, will go out to bid in the next few weeks. Additional projects will be handled by city crews.

Another $4 million has been earmarked for two water main replacement projects, one labeled "Willard Street" and the second "Hancock St." Nearly all of the existing water mains in both projects are over a century old, dating back to the late 1800's or 1900's. The oldest at St. Ann's Rd. was constructed in 1883.

O'Donnell told city councillors

Package Store License Suspended 21 Days

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board voted 4-1 Tuesday to suspend the license at Franklin Beer & Wine, 55 Franklin St. for 21 days with all days to be serve for delivering alcohol to minors.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele voted against the suspension.

On a second motion, the board voted unanimously to ask the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) to revoke the delivery of alcohol license.

According to Chairman Joseph Shea, the License Board does not issue delivery of alcohol licenses, but it is the matter of the ABCC he said.

A report on the violation was made by Lt. Peter Turowski with Officer Ken Yee who observed the delivery of beer and cigarettes to a 16 year old at home with no adults present. He said it had become a "pattern" of Franklin Beer & Wine not to ask for an ID.

Both motions were made by Police Chief Robert Crowley, who told manager Mai Do that she has "full responsibility" for how the alcohol is delivered.

Crowley said he based his decision on the suspension because Franklin Beer & Wine had been cited in 2005 for delivery to a minor. At that time they were issued a six day suspension, but in lieu of the

that the two projects address most of the "low flow" areas of the city where water pressure is low at hydrants and in homes. At $1,310,300, Blume Construction was awarded the contract for the Hancock Street project. The second project estimated at $2.3 million is currently out to bid.

Councillor Joseph G. Finn is chairman of the Public Works Committee with vice-chair Brian McNamee and members James H. Davis, Kevin F. Coughlin, and Leo Kelly.

THE SIEGEL FAMILY recently donated money to the City of Quincy to purchase a portable defibrillator for emergency responders. The gift was a gesture of deep appreciation after police and firefighters saved Vernon Siegel's life after he suffered a heart attack. From left are Firefighter Stephen Sweet, Vernon Siegel, Police Lt. Charles Santoro and Mrs. Leila Siegel.

A Thank You For Saving Vernon Siegel's Life Siegel Family Donates Money For Portable Defibrillator

The Siegel family is deeply grateful to the City of Quincy and its police and fire department officers for the outstanding job they did Nov. 14, 2006.

The quick-thinking, training and selflessness of Police

Lt. Charles Santoro, Officer Michael Sullivan, Officer John Leuchte and Firefighter Stephen Sweet literally saved Vernon Siegel's life.

After suffering a heart attack behind the wheel of his car, Siegel, accompanied by his wife, Leila Siegel, crashed their motor vehicle through a fence at the corner of Quincy Avenue and Southern Artery. At that time, Lt. Santoro was traveling behind the Siegels, exited his vehicle and approached the crashed vehicle and realized that Mr. Siegel had no pulse. He began rescue-breathing CPR and brought back Mr. Siegel's pulse.

Moments later, Officer Michael Sullivan, Officer John Leuchte and Firefighter Stephen Sweet arrived on scene. At that time, it was determined that a defibrillator may be required.

While working in unison, these individuals prepped the victim, attached the device and activated the defibrillator. After analyzing the victim, the appropriate shock was given. The victim's pulse and breathing were re-established.

As a thank you for saving Mr. Siegel's life, his family donated money to the City of Quincy to purchase a portable defibrillator for its first responders. The City Council accepted this donation at their Feb. 5 meeting.

Mark Jaehnig Sworn In As Park Commissioner

Mark C. Jaehnig, a life-long Quincy resident and youth sports organizer and coach, was sworn in Tuesday as executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

Jaehnig took his oath from City Clerk Joseph Shea in Mayor William Phelan's office. Attending the ceremony was his wife, Christine, his parents, Charles, Sr. and Joan; his brothers, Dan, Fox 2225 newsman, Charles, Jr., Stephen and Michael.

Mark and his wife have four children, Patrick, David, Matthew and Andrew and currently live in North Quincy.

"I am excited about having Mark Jaehnig bring a fresh perspective and energy to the Park Department," said Phelan. "Mark has shown a life-long commitment to our community through his volunteer involvement in a wide number of programs that benefit young people. He brings to the position a unique combination of business experience and familiarity with our city and its park system. I am impressed by his professionalism and his love for our community. I think he's going to do a great job."

Jaehnig succeeds Tom Koch who resigned as executive director to run for mayor.

Jaehnig operates his own chiropractic office in North Quincy. He graduated Magna Cum Laude from Palmer College of Chiropractic. Prior to that, he received a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science with a Minor in Public Administration from Stonehill College, where he graduated Cum Laude. He is a 1975 graduate of Boston College High School.

Jaehnig is the founder and director of the Sacred Heart Basketball program, which helps 800 children learn the game. He has coached soccer, football, baseball and basketball at a number of Quincy youth leagues for the past 18 years and was instrumental in starting the travel baseball program in Quincy. He received the Applebee's "Good Neighbor" award for his work with Sacred Heart basketball in 2004. In 2005, he received the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award for his volunteer service to the youth of Quincy.

"It is an honor to be chosen to head the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department and join the Phelan administration," said Jaehnig. "The position currently presents a host of both opportunities and challenges and I am excited about adding some new fresh ideas to the department."

Jaehnig cited his respect for the Park Department employees as a reason for accepting the position.

"As a coach, I have seen the tremendous effort put

"Is it too late for me to refinance?"

(The surprising answer? Probably not!)

If you just go by what you hear or read in the mainstream media, you might think that the refinancing "window" has slammed shut. But that's a simplification that's simply not true. Here are the facts: Mortgage rates are still bouncing around near 50-year lows. So if you want to refinance for whatever reason - to be mortgage-free before you retire, to pay for tuition, to consolidate other loans and debts or just to lock in a low rate before the window does close - you still have time. But possibly not much. So don't wait.

Esther And Valentine's Day

Well, I let Valentine's Day slip by me. But if you don't mind, I'd still like to mention it while the flowers received Wednesday, are still fresh.

Thought you would like to know (in case you don't) that if it hadn't been for a spinster who lived her later years here in Quincy, Valentine's Day might be just plain Feb. 14. Just another cold, ho-hum day in the middle of winter.

Esther A. Howland, who apparently never found her own true love, was the mother of the American valentines we know today.

Because of her, Feb. 14 is now the day to be sure to tell that someone special "I love you" with a valentine, flowers, candy or jewelry, etc.

Esther lived most of her life in Worcester and graduated from Mount Holyoke College in 1849.

That year, she came across a number of valentines sent from England to her father who owned a Worcester stationery and bookstore.

Esther, as the story goes, didn't think much of them and decided she could create better and more romantic ones.

She designed some samples and before long was on the way to a $100,000 a year business which was pretty hefty for those days. That in turn, sparked the nationwide industry of today.

Esther lived in Worcester until 1886 after both her mother and father died. She had given up her valentine business in an act of love to care for her bedridden father.

She came to Quincy to live with her brother, Charles at 2 Adams St. And died there March 15, 1904 at the age of 75.

She never married, apparently never finding her own valentine.

But she did live to see the nation-wide industry that she spawned with her creations back in 1849.

And she must have smiled whenever she thought of the instructor at Mount Holyoke College, who back around the time she was creating her valentines, was warning his students against sending "any of those foolish notes called valentines."

But how did Feb. 14 get to be Valentine's Day?

Legend takes it back to the year 270 and a man named Valentinus, believed to be a Roman priest who helped Christian martyrs persecuted under Emperor Claudius II. That was a crime punishable by death.

Valentinus, as the story goes, was arrested and brought before the Emperor whom he tried to convert to Christianity.

Claudius was so impressed by Valentinus, he tried to save his life by converting him to the Roman gods. Valentinus refused and was condemned to be beaten, stoned and beheaded.

According to the legend, while awaiting execution, Valentinus became friends with the blind daughter of his jailer and restored her sight.

On the eve of his execution, he supposedly wrote her a farewell note and signed it, "From your Valentinus."

The next day he was beheaded. The date: Feb. 14. But let me close on a lighter note, especially for you men.

Roses are red.

Violets are blue.

If you forgot her

I pity you.

Budget Cuts Knock Out Sheriff's Youth Programs

Overcrowding at the Norfolk County jail and a stagnant real estate market is costing the sheriff's office two of its most popular youth programs, at least for a year.

Sheriff Michael Bellotti recently announced that the Youth Leadership Academy and After School Program will not be in operation this year due to serious budget considerations.

"It's unfortunate we have to shut down these programs this year, but we're hopeful we can bring them back in 2008," said Bellotti.

"We have to take this budget crisis seriously and do everything we can within the office to close the gap."

"It's still not going to be enough but we would never go to the Legislature for help without first doing everything in our power to ease the burden."

The sheriff's office gets more than one-third of its operating budget from county and state deeds excise taxes so the correctional center has taken a big hit from the gloomy housing market.

The inmate population of the jail, designed to hold 302 when it was built in 1992, reached an all-time high of 745 in November, creating a shortfall of more than $5 million.

"Revenue is down 30 per cent and costs in some instances are up by more than 100 per cent," said Bellotti. "This creates a significant challenge for us operationally."

The sheriff's office has also been forced to layoff and furlough management employees, freeze hiring and equipment purchases as well as terminate outside contracts.

The youth programs have been very successful in the past several years. The Youth Leadership Academy saw its 3,000th participant last year with a record 800 children, ages 10 to 14, in the summer.

There were nearly 200 children on a waiting list to participate in both programs in 2007.

"It's not easy making these decisions," said Bellotti. "We're all hoping that our sacrifices now will help us come back strong in the near future."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1939 postcard view of Coddington Street from its intersection with Washington Street in Quincy Square. A master plan developed by the city's Planning Board in the 1920's called for lining both sides of this street with large buildings all the way down to Sea Street with the then new police headquarters as the anchor on the far end. A number of buildings were built in accordance with that plan, including the Court House on the left, the High School and the Vocational School. On the right were built the Bethany Church, a medical building and the YMCA. Not built was a large city-owned sports coliseum that was to be located on Faxon Field. The old Court House was torn down in the mid 1980's and the site is now home to an apartment complex at President's Place. Note the angle parking that provided many more spaces than what is there today. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Houston, We Have A Problem

Thirty-seven years ago in April of 1970, I remember being riveted, like many Americans, to the news stories of an unfolding event that was capturing the world's attention. It was real television connecting us to real life, the story of three young astronauts named James A. Lovell, Jr., John L. Swigert, Jr., and Fred W. Haise, Jr., men whose lives hung in a delicate balance 200,000 miles from earth for the better part of four days on a space ship crippled by a burst tank line to a cryogenic oxygen tank.

The incredible events of April 11 to 18, 1970 were later dramatized in the movie Apollo 13, a hand-drawn favorite of my son Matthew who as a six year old when it was released in 1995, watched it enough to know the characters' lines. That movie was on Saturday afternoon as we ate lunch together, and he turned to me, now as a very bright 16 year old, and he said, "Dad this story holds a metaphor for what we are dealing with today. The astronauts found themselves on a small spacecraft damaged by an unintended consequence of human action, floating in space with a dwindling supply of energy, for which they had to make great sacrifice to conserve what they had left, with rising levels of CO2 gases, a problem that they needed to correct in order to survive."

Their survival he said, "required them to adapt to their circumstances, sacrifice their comfort, think creatively and apply scientific knowledge. It's a microcosm of what our small planet is grappling with, damaged by the unintended consequences of human activity, faced with a finite and dwindling supply of certain resources for energy, and confronted with ever increasing levels of CO2. We need to adapt to our circumstances, sacrifice a little comfort, think creatively, apply scientific knowledge and do something."

I'll say one thing when he watched it at age 6 it was just a great movie and not a metaphor. But he is absolutely right. Because, to take a line from that time, "Houston, we have a problem." Just like 37 years ago there is a riveting story of survival that is today capturing the attention of the world.

That story is depicted in the 2006 movie "An Inconvenient Truth," narrated by former Vice President Al Gore. That story of survival is our own. I suggest the movie as recommended viewing irrespective of your political persuasion. The movie will provoke you to think and consider the many changes that are occurring to our environment here and across the globe.

The Feb. 2, 2007 released United Nations Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change report concludes in specific detailing current and projected effects of global warming-including sea-level rise, vanishing alpine glaciers, and increases in severe-weather events-prompting calls for more-concerted action to reduce carbon-dioxide (CO2) emissions, and the need for a conscious control over the environment and a unity of purpose that humans have yet to achieve on such an enormous scale. To steal a line from "An Inconvenient Truth" this report is a canary in the coal mine, a dire warning and a call to action.

As a city, we have undertaken some positive steps to effect change in small ways. We have replaced our traffic lights with LEDs to draw less energy and last longer, begun to audit our energy consumption and implement energy saving measures, switched to low-sulfur diesel fuel, apply green technology to the anticipated construction of a new high school, placed solar panels on the roof of North Quincy High and hopefully will do the same at Quincy High in the near future, and we recycle 26% of our waste stream.

But there is much more we can and must do individually. We can conserve energy, buy only Energy Star related products, reduce driving, purchase electricity from energy renewable sources, recycle more, and drive less. As a city, we can add to that and require green building technology, protect our urban forest, plant more trees, and take a host of other actions, because in this survival story, our survival story, "Houston, we have a problem."

Commends Coughlin For Global Warming Resolution

I would like to commend and thank Councillor Kevin

Coughlin for putting the issue of global warming on the Council's agenda. By filing three environmental resolutions last week, Coughlin not only underscores the importance of this issue, but also the significant role local government can play in making a difference.

I hope our City Council will support the resolutions. Maura O'Gara

Nurses Reported To Plan March On City Hall

By FRANK MCCAULEY

Reports were circulating that nurses at Quincy City Hospital would march on City Hall in support of two petitions through which they are seeking readjustment of both wages and vacation time.

Dr. Joseph P. Leone, director of the hospital, said that he heard reports that nurses would go to the City Council meeting.

Dr. Leone and two of his nursing administrators, Miss Mary O'Gara and Miss Ann Morin, will confer with Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and the City Council with regards to the nurses' requests.

PUBLIC HEARING SLATED ON BUDGET

On a resolve offered by Council President James R. McIntyre, the City Council set March 9th as the date for a public hearing on 1959 city budget. The hearing will give citizens the opportunity to express their thoughts and opinions on the $18,000,000 budget.

'Made In China' Films At Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, will host a special "Made in China" Film Fest for adults this month.

Five films will be screened from Saturday, Feb. 24 through Tuesday, Feb. 27, highlighting a variety of genres including comedy, romance, drama, and martial arts.

Here's the schedule and a brief description of each film title:

NOT ONE LESS (1999)
Directed by Yimou Zhang
Saturday, Feb. 24 at 11 a.m.

Wei Minzhi is a stubborn 13-year-old who takes a substitute teaching job in a tiny provincial town because they can't afford anyone else. When one troubling boy heads off to the city to help support his starving family, Wei sets out to bring him back because she won't receive her bonus if any students are missing.

• Rated G / Mandarin with English subtitles.

HAPPY TIMES (2001)
Directed by Yimou Zhang
Saturday, Feb. 24 at 2 p.m.

Zhao is an aging bachelor who hasn't been lucky in love. Thinking he has finally met the woman of his dreams, Zhao leads her to believe he is wealthy and agrees to a wedding far beyond his means. His simultaneous efforts to sustain this imposture and to raise money set the movie into motion.

• Rated PG / Mandarin with English subtitles MAGNIFICENT BUTCHER (1979)

Directed by Sammo Hung Kam-Bo and Woo-Ping Yuen
Sunday, Feb. 25 at 2 p.m.
When a kung master's goddaughter is murdered by his own lustful son, Wong Fei-hung's mischievous student Butcher Wing is blamed.

Wing's brother is killed in an attempt to cover up the truth. Now he must fight to clear his name and get revenge. This movie brings together two of the greatest martial arts filmmakers in their only creative collaboration, with an A-list cast that includes several legendary kung fu actors.

• Rated PG-13 / Cantonese with English Subtitles
QUITTING (2001)

Directed by Yang Zhang
Monday, Feb. 26 at 7 p.m.
This is the story of Jia Hongsheng, a rising Chinese movie star of the early 1990s, from the cutting edge of China's artistic movement, through a period of conflict with himself and his parents, to a mental institution and finally on the quest to rediscover himself and his family.

The role of Jia Hongsheng is played by the actor himself, and nearly all of the other characters in the film, from his parents to his fellow inmates at a psychiatric hospital, also play themselves.

• Rated R / Mandarin with English subtitles
2046 (2004)

Directed by Wong Kar-Wai

Tuesday, Feb. 27 at 7 p.m.
2046 is a hotel room, a futuristic story, and a state of mind. Starting in 1966, we see ladies' man and newspaper hack Chow on various Christmases as he lives, loves, and writes in a decrepit hotel and nearby restaurants. After an affair with old flame who lives in the Oriental Hotel, Chow moves into the adjacent room and meets the two women whose stories will cast shadows over his own.

• Rated R / Cantonese with English subtitles

All screenings are free and sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Koch Urges Phelan To Name Traffic Engineer

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch this week urged Mayor William Phelan to fill the long-vacant traffic engineer position, calling the job vital to protecting neighborhoods and easing the traffic mess on the city's streets.

"It is unacceptable and more damaging every day for a city of our size, already facing so many development changes, to be without a traffic engineer for so long," Koch said in a letter to Phelan. "This is an issue that begs for leadership and only you can resolve it. I respectfully ask you to do everything in your power to hire a full-time traffic engineer as soon as possible."

The city has gone 18 months without a full-time traffic engineer, a department head Koch said plays a crucial role in public safety, helping neighborhoods deal with major projects, and finding ways to ease congestion on traffic-choked streets. While acknowledging the difficulty of finding a qualified candidate for the job,

Koch said the sheer length of the vacancy "suggests that simply not enough has been done to find the right person."

Koch said discussions at coffee hours, neighborhood meetings and individual encounters with residents showed him that traffic stands as one of the top concerns of residents of the city, adding that filling the long-empty office is a simple way to start addressing those concerns.

Koch pointed to one neighborhood group he recently visited that, he said, was forced to pay for its own traffic engineer rather than accept the findings of a consultant hired by the developers of a major project.

"These are taxpayers, and it is unconscionable that they are forced to pay for a service their tax bills are undoubtedly expected to cover," Koch said, adding that the city's inability to hire a traffic engineer highlights a much broader disconnect between residents and the mayor's office.

Koch said the number of large projects either in the planning stages or already under construction makes the absence of a traffic engineer even more glaring.

Teachers Picket Over Contract Delay, Issues

MEMBERS OF THE Quincy Education Association, the teachers union, protested outside City Hall last week. Teachers have been without a contract since August. They say that a proposal for them to pay a larger share of health insurance premiums amounts to a three-year pay cut.

Winter Carnival, Presidents' Day Festivities Monday

Mayor William J. Phelan announces the entertainment lineup for the "City of Presidents" 11th annual Winter Carnival and Presidents' Day Celebration on Monday, Feb. 19 from noon to 4 p.m. in Quincy Center.

Festivities will include a variety of entertainment including presidential and historical reenactments, magic shows, live music, hay rides, ice sculptures and much more.

Admission is free. The entertainment schedule:

City Hall Council Chambers, 1305 Hancock St.

• Noon and 2 p.m.: George Moore as George Washington
Join actor George Moore in his portrayal of George Washington: Revolutionary War Hero, America's first president and Father of the Country.

• 1 p.m. and 3 p.m.: Columbia's Musick - Washington & Adams: Music for Our First Presidents

This program will featuring wide-ranging and seldom-heard music from the life and times of George Washington and John Adams. The concert will include presidential marches, festive songs performed during presidential tours, dance music (Washington was an exquisite dancer), chamber music from the collection of Washington's step-daughter Nelly Custis, and birthday songs for Washington and Adams.

Columbia's Musick is a vocal and instrumental ensemble dedicated to music heard in America from the 1720s through the 1920s. The group concertizes widely, with appearances at The Metropolitan Museum in New York, the USS Constitution Museum, Peabody Essex Museum, John Carter Brown Library at Brown University, Heritage Museum & Gardens, Washington College (MD), the Mississippi Academy of Ancient Music, and Old Sturbridge Village, among other venues. Columbia's Musick is Ensemble-in-Residence at Boston's historic King's Chapel.

• 1 p.m. - 2 p.m. - Abraham Lincoln, "Settin' the Record Straight"

Richard Swanson has spent three decades researching Abraham Lincoln. He has also written and illustrated a book on Lincoln. It was only naturally that his scholarship, enhanced by his Lincoln-esque stature, would lead him to create this theatrical piece about America's sixteenth president. Dr. Swanson completed a 25 year career as Professor of Mathematical Sciences at Bentley College retiring early to go on the road as Abraham Lincoln. President Lincoln will answer questions and pose for photographs with the audience after the presentation.

• 2 p.m. and 3 p.m.

Abigail Adams

First Lady, mother of a president, financial manager, farm manager, and advocate for women's rights, as she stated in her letters to husband John Adams, "Remember the ladies, and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors." Meet Abigail in her final resting place as she describes her Revolutionary experience and much more from the home front perspective.

Diabetes Self-Management Topic March 14 At Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center will host "Spring Into Diabetes Self-Management," a free HealthMatters health education lecture, Wednesday, March 14 from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at QMC, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy.

Attendees will learn strategies to manage their diabetes and to prevent potentially life threatening health complications from diabetes.

Jane Griffin, RD, LDN, a Quincy Medical Center-affiliated clinical and outpatient dietitian, and Kristen Lavoie, RN, CWON, a wound/ostomy clinical nurse specialist, will review strategies to help people better manage their diabetes, including diet recommendations and proper foot and wound care.

The free lecture series is open to the public. Light refreshments will be served.

Advance registration is required and available 24-hours per day and seven days a week, by calling the QMC Physician Referral Service at 1-877-479-CARE (2273).

Tax Tips From The Experts. QUALIFIED TUITION PROGRAMS

Education costs for families are concerned about college tuition payments. The Federal Government has provided some relief in the form of Qualified Tuition Programs more commonly known as 529 Plans.

Most states and many educational institutions have established qualified tuition programs consisting of:

- College tuition prepayment plans and
- Savings plan trusts.

College tuition prepayment plans allow you to purchase tuition credits at selected colleges and universities at current tuition rates thereby locking in future tuition costs.

Savings plan trusts are essentially mutual funds that permit you to invest funds and allow them to grow tax-free, provided they are used for qualified higher education expenses.

The key benefit is that you are investing money that will grow in value over a period of time and eliminate the tax on income taxes of that growth.

Qualified tuition programs generally only cover schools in the state in which the plan is established and generally are available to residents of that state. However, you can establish a savings plan trust in a state that offers a plan and use the funds at any school in the country.

When setting up the trust, a trust agreement must be made with the trust company, which will manage the money for you. The trust company will also handle the tax reporting for the trust. It is important to consult with a tax professional when setting up a trust.

For more information on these plans, contact the Quincy Sun's Tax Services at 617-376-2226.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Barbara's Presidents' Day Cherry Pie and Then Some

When ever our "club" goes out to lunch, our friend Barbara usually has a delicious recipe for me to try. This one is called "3 Sister's Pie" which includes three different berries.

Other berries can be substituted, but this one features blueberries, cherries and strawberries. And a great pie to make on President's Day. If not fresh, frozen can be used.

3 SISTER'S PIE

- 1 1/2 cups blueberries
- 1 1/2 cups cherries
- 1 1/2 cups strawberries
- 1/4 cup orange or apple juice
- 3/4 cup sugar

3 tablespoons tapioca

1 tablespoon flour

2 tablespoons butter

Pie crust for bottom and lattice top

In a large bowl add the juice and the berries.

Prepare pie crust on a nine inch pie plate. Mix together the flour, tapioca, sugar and sprinkle some of this on the bottom of the crust. Then fill the pie shell with the fruit mixture. Sprinkle the rest of the sugar, tapioca, flour on top and dot with the butter.

On top, make strips, (lattice) on top.

Bake in a 425 oven for 15 minutes, then 350 for 45 more minutes.

LICENSE BOARD BRIEFS

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Granted a change of managers at Hannaford Supermarket, 475 Hancock St. from John Frontiero to Benjamin Theriault.

•Granted a permit to Louis Tozzi to hold a 10th annual ALS "AKA" Squirrel Run, Saturday June 9 at Pageant Field.

•Granted a one day all alcohol license to Michael Shields, St. Ann's, 575 Hancock St. for their St. Patrick's Day Dinner Dance, March 10 from 7 p.m. to midnight.

•Granted a transfer of the common victualer/all alcoholic restaurant & entertainment license now held by Garrett's Tavern LLC, to CJMK Inc., doing business as Trattoria Alba, Nardi Keka, manager.

•Granted a transfer of the common victualer, beer and wine restaurant license from S.W. Kwong Ent. Corp. doing business as Asian Cafe, 21 Scammell St. to Philip & Sophia Hui, Inc.

Lt. Governor Murray Visits Marshall School Quincy Model For Full-Day Kindergarten

By TERRY COGSWELL

Quincy's successful full-day kindergarten program is serving as a model for those planned statewide.

Lt. Gov. Tim Murray and Mayor William Phelan visited Kerry Connolly's kindergarten class at the Clifford H. Marshall School last Friday and were impressed.

"Reestablishing all day kindergarten is a top priority of this administration," Murray, former Worcester mayor, said.

The challenge, he said, lies in funding the full day programs, especially considering Chapter 70 cuts in education.

He thinks the full day program will be an opportunity for children across the Commonwealth, but cautioned it will not happen overnight.

When the lieutenant governor and mayor arrived at the school, they were informed by 14 active and engaged youngsters that the best part of school is "Learning, Legos and playing outside."

Murray and Phelan met with school administrators and teachers to recognize the progress made in the modeling of all-day kindergarten classes.

Last spring, a Phelan's initiative, Quincy implemented the all-day kindergarten program in all elementary schools. Prior to that the program was in six schools only.

Phelan said Quincy faced numerous challenges in facilitating and implementing the program. One challenge included renovating six classrooms.

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said there is a specialist in each school, an integral part of the Integrated Learning Team, determining the best intervention for struggling readers.

Edith Hughes, and Early Childhood Coordinator said, "The advantages are staggering for the full-day kids."

THE PROGRESS IN Quincy's model full day kindergarten program brought Lt. Gov. Tim Murray and Mayor William Phelan to the Clifford Marshall School last week. They are shown here with Norman Sienna, 6, and Kristen Topalli, 5. Behind them is School Committee Vice-chairwoman Elaine Dwyer.

Board Approves Beer, Wine On Clam Box Patio

The License Board at Tuesday's meeting voted unanimously to alter the premises at The Clam Box, 789 Quincy Shore Drive allowing them to serve beer and wine outside on the patio.

One abutter said she had concerns over the fact that there will be a children's playground across the street. The other abutter said he observed a fight and said he thought the police should've been called.

Chairman Joseph Shea read a letter from Council President Doug Gutro who said it was important to have an access and egress into the restaurant and added he would defer the decision to Police Chief Robert Crowley.

Crowley said as far as concern over children is concerned there is "no problem as children would not be using the playground at 11 p.m."

He said that Schwanke Brothers, owners of The Clam Box have a "well run, family type restaurant" and said he saw "no problem if a patron wanted to have a beer outside."

Calling it a "well run establishment" Crowley said he was "in support" of extending the premises.

Atty. Louis Cassis was counsel for the Schwanke Brothers.

Vincent Moscardelli, P.J. Foley Share Sun Honors

(Cont'd From Page 1)

The firm has contributed over $30,000 to Quincy public school programs.

Moscardelli is one of the spearheads of the Quincy High School 50's Alumni Club, comprising QHS football players of the 1950's who are involved in many worthy causes.

The group, for example, raised $18,000 to aid former Quincy High School quarterback Kevin Moore who has been in a coma since 1998 after being injured when a car plowed into a parked one he was sitting in.

The group also raises funds for scholarships.

And has held tributes to legendary Quincy Coaches Munroe MacLean and Bill Sullivan and North Quincy's Pete Zoia, and had their football jersey numbers retired. They also donated display cases for Zoia memorabilia outside the NQHS gym.

Ron Ivil, president of the QHS 50's Alumni Club notes, "Vin has been active in all of these efforts. And he does so many other good things but doesn't tell anybody."

Moscardelli, a QHS 1955 graduate, was active in sports himself. He is in the Quincy-North Quincy Football and Baseball Halls of Fame. He also coached basketball and soccer at Atlantic Junior High School and baseball at NQHS.

He is a graduate of Tufts University and Boston State College and received his Masters Degree at Bridgewater State College.

He is past president of the Quincy Education Association and the ERA Broker Council and was the South Shore Realtor of the Year in 1996. He received the Campbell Award for community service and the Clifford H. Marshall "Attitude is Everything" Award.

His mother, Nancy Burke, 97, still lives in the family home on Virginia Rd., Merrymount.

His wife, Leah, whom he married in 1960 died four years ago. Their two daughters, Merilee Trenholm and husband Gary, and Susanne Hegarty and husband, John and their two daughters all live in the same Braintree neighborhood as Vin.

P.J. FOLEY

Foley, a lifelong Quincy resident and a 1976 graduate of Quincy High School, lives in Houghs Neck with his wife, Julie.

He started his crusade to restore salt-water marshes in 1959 in the backyard of his Sea Street home. While cleaning the yard he discovered household articles buried under the adjoining seaweed.

He sought permission from the city to expand the cleanup and organized neighbors and friends. The volunteer group, calling itself "Marsh Madness" went on to restore 300 acres of salt-water marshes along Houghs Neck.

A $4 million project to restore Broad Meadows marshes was tackled next with the money coming from grants.

Foley estimates some 1,000 acres of marsh have been restored.

"It is the largest restoration project in the state," he says. "And I have been working with some great people"

Among them he cites the volunteers, members of the Beaches and Coastal Commission, Mayor William Phelan, Congressman William Delahunt, state Senator Michael Morrissey, state Rep. Steve Tobin and Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly.

Foley says the goal of restoring the marshes is to:

"Restore tidal flow to long neglected areas of marsh while improving flood, fire and mosquito control.

"We are creating hatcheries for fish and habitat for birds not seen here for generations. Proper marsh management can eliminate 99 percent of mosquito problems."

Foley is now working with state and federal agencies to establish a commercial lobster fishery here in Quincy.

A new project for him is determining whether renewable wind energy is feasible for Quincy.

Last August, wind-measuring detectors were mounted on the 180-foot tower at the Quincy police station and on the 700-foot Quarry Hills tower to collect data. A wind station on Thompson's Island is part of the network.

The project, paid for by grants, is being carried out with the cooperation of the UMASS Amherst Wind Studies Program. The data collecting is expected to be completed by May, at which time Quincy will have a good idea if renewable wind energy is a future possibility.

Foley, who attended UMass Boston, has been a Verizon technician for more than 25 years. He is a member of IBEW Local 2222 and political director for IBEW.

He is a member of the Beaches and Coastal Commission, Open Space Committee, Tourism Advisory Commission.

Foley has been recognized for his work by the EPA, the National Oceanographics and Atmospheric Administration, Boy Scouts of America and is the

Mark Jaehnig Sworn In As Park Commissioner

(Cont'd From Page 3) Park Department. These employees care about their jobs and our parks. I look forward to learning from them how I can help them do their job more efficiently."

Jaehnig listed some of his goals for the upcoming year:

- Building a new track facility.
- Meeting with stakeholders and more input from park-users on how we can improve the park system.
- Making sure the city is kept clean and beautiful.
- Completing the formal garden facility.
- Ensuring that the diamonds at Kincaide, LaBrecque, O'Rourke and Bishop are repaired and paid similar attention to Adams Field.

- Finishing the restroom facility at Mitchell/McCoy Fields.
- Reviewing the policies concerning the use of Veterans' Stadium now that new turf has been installed.
- Improvements to Mount Wollaston Cemetery.
- Capital equipment upgrades to help workers perform their jobs better.

"Mayor Phelan is investing more than $4 million in the upgrade of our park system and I am fortunate enough to join the team in the process of this historical improvement effort," Jaehnig said. "I look forward to working with our community to make sure we spend our available dollars in a manner consistent with what the community is asking for."

Jaehnig said he will spend the coming weeks meeting with employees, coaches and other stakeholders to learn more. "We need to open the line of communication with our constituents. Ultimately, we work for them and we should respond to their input and needs."

"I have known Mark for many years through his involvement in youth sports," said Geoff Hennessy, Director of the Quincy Track Club and the track coach for Quincy and North Quincy High Schools. "Based on my experience, I look forward to working with him."

7 Deadly Mistakes That Will Cost You Thousands When You Sell Your Home

Quincy - A new report has just been released which reveals 7 costly mistakes that most homeowners make when selling their home, and a 9 Step System that can help you sell your home fast and for the most amount of money.

This industry report shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling homes have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. The fact of the matter is that fully three quarters of homesellers don't get what they want for their home and become disillusioned and - worse - financially disadvantaged when they put their home on the market.

As this report uncovers, most homesellers make 7 deadly mistakes that will cost them literally thousands of dollars. The good news is that each and every one of these mistakes is entirely preventable.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "The 9 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and For Top Dollar."

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report, call 1-800-611-0351 and enter ID #1000. You can call anytime, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Call NOW to find out how you can get the most money for your home.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

ALCOHOLIC PERIPHERAL NEUROPATHY

Alcohol can be toxic to the nerves in the body. Excessive use can cause neuropathy in the foot that is characterized by a loss of sensation that is similar to diabetic neuropathy. A person without good sensation in his or her feet cannot feel cuts or ulcers on the feet that are then susceptible to infections. If you have neuropathy, examine your feet frequently, and look for any cuts or ulcers. Do not walk barefoot or soak your feet in hot water. Examine the insides of your shoes before wearing them. See your podiatrist frequently for any foot issues at all. Neuropathy is permanent, although some medicines can be prescribed that can reduce the burning sensation associated with neuropathy.

What are your feet saying about the state of your health?

Do they demand immediate attention, or do they just require periodic routine medicine? Either way, you'll find the foot care you need close by. Conveniently located in Randolph, you needn't travel any further than 999 North Main Street, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING, for compassionate, experienced, professional care for a full range of podiatric problems, from peripheral neuropathy to bunions and blisters. Comprehensive foot care for the family beings with a call to 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building.

HINT: Exposure to certain environmental toxins found in metals and pesticides can also cause neuropathy.

Current, Upcoming Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit Programs

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit offers many programs throughout the year to Quincy residents of all ages. The programs listed below are programs that are running now or will be in the weeks to come. For additional information of available programs, check out the Quincy Police Crime Prevention website at HYPERLINK "http://www.ci.quincy.ma.us/police.asp"

QUINCY POLICE TO OFFER RAD (Rape Aggression Defense) PROGRAM:

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit will again be offering the highly acclaimed RAD program for women ages 18 and over, and age 16 with an accompanying adult.

The program is a hands-on, women's only course that begins with awareness, prevention, risk reduction, and avoidance, while progressing on to the basics of hands-on defense training. The program runs for four consecutive Thursday nights: March 8, 15, 22, & 29 from 5:30 PM - 8:30 PM. Participants must attend all four classes (although Class 4 simulation is voluntary) and pre-registration is required. If you would like to register, please email your name, age, and phone number to HYPERLINK "kbarkas@ci.quincy.ma.us"

A confirmation email will be sent to all registered participants. If you have any questions, please contact Detective Karyn Barkas at (617) 745-5753.

BASIC BOATING SAFETY: The Quincy Police Marine Unit will be offering this boating course over a period of three Saturday mornings, commencing on February 17.

The program will be held at the Marine Center at 137 Bayview Avenue, adjacent to the Quincy Yacht Club. A second course will begin on March 10. For more information, contact Sgt. Robert Gillan at (617) 745-5860.

STRANGER AWARENESS: Officers are conducting seminars in all 2nd and 3rd grades in both public and parochial schools about the dangers of having contact with people they do not know. The course covers scenarios as well as how to report incidents to teachers, parents and the Police. Officers involved in this program are Bob Bell, Mark Folan, Jim Detremont and Sergeant Mark Kennedy.

INTERNET SAFETY FOR CHILDREN: This course is being offered to all 4th and 5th grade public and parochial students, discussing the appropriate use of the Internet. The Officers cover a wide range of problems associated with various sites and recommend guidelines for proper use. Lt. John Steele, Sgt. Sean Duggan, Officer Brian Flaherty and Detective Karyn Barkas are the Instructors.

ANTI-BULLY PROGRAM: This is a pilot program at Central Middle School, in cooperation with Guidance Counselors and Teachers, set to begin this week and then be offered to the other middle schools this spring. The course will cover five aspects of bullying and cyber-bullying: Identifying the Bully, the Victim, the Bystander, the schools' policy and related criminal offenses. The initial program is being presented by the team of Capt. Paul Keenan, Guidance Counselors Steve Sylvia and Maura Tenaglia and Health Teacher Kaitlin Powers.

MIDDLE SCHOOL EARLYBIRD BASKETBALL PROGRAM:

The basketball program runs for 10 weeks before school (7:00 A.M.) and finishes with a championship. Depending upon the school, the league is either coed or separate leagues are created for boys and girls. Although there were play-offs and champions crowned, the program stresses relationship building between the police and the students, between students of varying grades and getting students involved in healthy activities. The program is currently running at Broad Meadows, with Det. Dennis Maloney, Atlantic Middle School (School Resource Officer Steve Burgo) and Central Middle School (Lt. Minton) will begin after the February school vacation.

CENTRAL MIDDLE SCHOOL CITIZENSHIP PROGRAM:

The purpose of this bi-monthly course is to encourage 8th graders to become involved in the community and volunteer for programs. The Teacher, Mr. Jim Phelan, promotes many of the volunteer activities in the school that benefit those in need. As part of the program, guest lecturers from a wide range of occupations speak about their commitment to the community.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT POLICE ACADEMY:

In its 15th year at Quincy High School, under the direction of the teacher Mr. Flaherty, this full year program links students and Police Officers together in an academic setting.

Police Officers go into the high schools and present a wide range of law enforcement topics to the students. This program helps students determine if this is a field that they may be interested in pursuing. Police Officers and students interacting helps break down communication barriers and promote better understanding. There are field trips to prisons, police academies and tours of the police station. Each student is required as part of his or her curriculum to participate in a "Ride Along" on either a Friday or Saturday night to see "the job" in person. Safety is a priority for the students. There is also a K-9 Unit demonstration.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT POLICE ACADEMY: now in its 8th year under the direction of the teacher, Mr. Ambraziejus, this half year course, starting next week, offers the same opportunity as the above mentioned program.

GOALS PROGRAM: The GOALS program is for students who have had difficulty in high school. Police Officers speak at this program with a focus on improving relations and helping students who may have had a brush with the law.

RAD HIGH SCHOOL PROGRAM: This was a pilot program in early 2006 offered at North Quincy High School.

The RAD (Rape-Aggression-Defense) program was a success and is in session now. The courses' focus is on female seniors who are going away to college. Being away from home, most likely for the first time and vulnerable to new surroundings, this program will compliment the students' preparedness as they go on to their next challenge. The program educates the student on awareness of their surroundings and teaches them self-defense.

For additional information, contact Det. Karyn Barkas at 617-745-5753.

SENIOR CITIZEN POLICE ACADEMY:

Since 1990, this academy has presented various courses to residents living in the 11 senior complexes. Each four-week program meets once a week for two hours and the subjects change each year. Ward Councilors are invited during the final week, along with the K-9 Unit. The Academy will be at Drohan Apartments in February, O'Brien Towers and the Towne Brooke House in March and at Tobin Towers in April. For more information, contact Sgt. Richard Potter at (617) 984-4262 or Lt. Minton at (617) 745-5719. Some of the courses offered:

Department history, Elder Abuse, Scams, Criminal Investigations, Crime Update, Driving Safety, Prescription, Drug Safety, Fire Safety, Personal Safety, Anti-Terrorism, Domestic Violence, Self Defense.

SAFETY SEMINARS: on a wide range of topics, the Crime Prevention Unit will be at Beechwood on the Bay on March 7, at 9:00 A.M. discussing "A Day of Safety" and at the Bethany Congregational Church the same afternoon to discuss "Scams."

QUINCY POLICE INTERNSHIP PROGRAM:

Each semester the Police Department provides an opportunity for college students to perform an internship for credits, learning about the many facets of the department. For more information, contact Lt. John Sullivan at (617) 745-5712.

PROJECT LIFESAVER: Teaming up with the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, Project Lifesaver is part of a national program to locate and rescue missing persons who have wandered due to Alzheimers or related conditions such as autism or memory related disabilities. Electronic monitoring is used to track those enrolled in the program.

For additional information, contact Lt. Minton at (617) 745-5719 or Carol Flynn at (617) 479-1212.

PROJECT H.E.L.P.: This ongoing program, created by Quincy Police Dispatcher Carol Flynn, is available to all who have memory problems or have a tendency to get lost. This free program makes it easier for the Police to locate a person who is missing. To enroll in this simple program, a photo (taken by a Police Officer) and an application are required, and will only be used if the person has been reported missing.

For additional information, contact Lieutenant Minton at (617) 745-5719 or Carol Flynn at (617) 479-1212.

For information on any of the above programs, contact Lieutenant Dan Minton at (617) 745-5719.

Flushing Out Trouble

Q. I happened to read about the guidance you offer in the matter of fixing problems related to plumbing. The flush-out system in my house is defective. When the lever is operated, water from the tank keeps flowing into the toilet instead of stopping and letting water fill up the tank again. This does not happen every time the lever is operated, but it does happen frequently. Could you please let me know what should be done to rectify the defect? — Bashker A.K., via e-mail

A. The main culprit in this case is probably the flapper valve. This large rubber valve (which literally operates like a flap, or in some cases looks like a little plunger or cap) is located at the bottom center of the reservoir tank. Its job is to allow water to flow into the toilet bowl for flushing, and to stop the flow of water when the flush is complete.

Watching how this valve works is actually kind of neat. Remove the lid of the tank and flush the toilet a few times, observing the valve at the bottom of the tank. When operating properly, a chain or metal rod lifts the valve up when you depress the flush lever (which is hooked to a simple lever system). The valve stays up while the tank empties — pushed up by a small vacuum created by the water flowing rapidly out of the tank. When enough water has flowed out of the tank, the vacuum is no longer sustained, and gravity takes over, allowing the valve to fall back down in place over the outlet. The water then refills the tank and stops thanks to another leverage process in the flush assembly.

When this fails to work, it's almost always because the flapper valve is getting hung up somehow. Sometimes the pull chain is too long and gets twisted, making it too short to let the valve down properly. Adjust the length of the pull chain so that it is not too slack and test the flush again.

'Hardscaping' Can Increase Your Home's Value

(NU) — Want to increase the value of your home? If so, invest in hardscaping.

Most people are familiar with the term "landscaping," but may not be familiar with "hardscaping," which describes the use of concrete products designed to serve a landscaping function.

Two studies, by Clemson University and the University of Florida, found that hardscaping contributes to higher resale value in single-family homes.

Since the return on investment is contingent on the quality of the hardscaping job, it's important that you find the right hardscaping contractor for your project and use high-quality materials like segmental retaining walls and interlocking concrete pavers.

Homeowners should consider the following when choosing a hardscaping contractor:

- The scope of the project: Make sure the contractor understands your vision and will be able to implement it. You may want to ask the contractor to design your hardscaping project. Many hardscape contractors have in-house design services.

- Proper licensing: Your contractor should be properly licensed, bonded and insured for the work proposed. Many regions require special licenses to conduct earthwork, grading and plumbing operations. The contractor also should have liability and workers' compensation insurance.

- Solid references: Check references and make sure the contractor has experience on projects of similar size and scope.

- Certification and training: Inquire about the contractor's experience with the products being installed. Ask if the contractor has been certified or trained by the product supplier or achieved recognition from a local or national trade association.

Such certifications are provided by the National Concrete Masonry Association for segmental retaining wall installation and by the Interlocking Concrete Pavement Institute for paver installation.

- Guarantees: Many contractors or nurseries will guarantee plant materials for up to one year and hardscaping installations for one year or more. Find out what is covered by the guarantee.

For more information about segmental retaining walls, visit www.ncma.org. For information about concrete pavers, visit www.icpi.org.

Flavin & Flavin Realty Among Top Real Estate Companies In Quincy

Edward P. Flavin, owner of Flavin & Flavin Real Estate, 1085 Hancock St., Quincy, announces his firm had ranked among the top real estate companies in Quincy consistently for a number of years, according to MLS-PIN.

In addition, the MLS Property Information System indicates Michael Flavin, Marguerite Flavin and Steve Fishman were all top producers for all agents in Quincy in 2006. Michael Flavin finished sixth in all of Quincy.

Flavin & Flavin Realty is a full service agency which has been a continuous family-owned business since 1925. All agents are full-time, college educated and committed to quality professional real estate service.

"Our primary objectives are to be knowledgeable in all aspects of our business, be honest and fair in all our dealings, be interested in people and their problems and treat each client's needs as if they were our own," Flavin said.

Dress Up A Drab Room With A Personal Mural

(NU) — From vacation souvenirs and knickknacks to family photographs, nothing makes your house feel more like your home than personal mementos. Imagine a room where a treasured family photo is the focal point-plashed larger than life across the walls.

Whether it's your child's finger-painting masterpiece or a candid shot snapped on the beach, it's now possible to turn those memories into murals. Murals Your Way, owned by the Hopkins, Minn.-based Environmental Graphics, can turn personal photographs into wall murals.

"Murals are a hot trend right now," said Jackie Just, public relations director for Environmental Graphics, adding that the company's mural business has more than doubled in the past year.

Murals Your Way has created custom murals for clients of all different backgrounds. Several golf scenes have been used as backdrops for in-home putting greens and professional golf shops alike.

The owner of Four Generations Pizza, a small pizza shop, used black-and-white family photos of the generations in murals on the walls all around his shop. In another creative twist on personalized décor, a photo of 5-year-old quadruplets posed in front of the Magic Kingdom at Disney World was turned into a mural for their playroom.

In addition to customized murals, Murals Your Way also offers more than 4,000 stock images that can be turned into murals, from Tuscan villas to Hawaiian sunsets. All murals can be custom-made to fit any wall from 4 by 6 feet and larger—there is no limit to the size that can be produced.

Artwork or original photos for custom murals can be mailed to Murals Your Way or submitted via compact disc, e-mail, negative or slide. Digital photos or art should be sent as a JPEG file. All original images are stored in a safe, dry, fireproof environment and returned in mail-safe packaging immediately after use. Custom murals take seven to 10 business days to produce and ship.

For more information on Murals Your Way, visit www.muralsyourway.com.

Save Money By Sealing Windows, Doors

(NU) - If you want to save money in the winter months, checking the condition of your home's windows and doors should be high on your to-do list.

With the average household spending half of its energy dollars on heating and cooling, it pays to plug all the air leaks you find.

Officials with World Energy Solutions (stock symbol: WEGY), an energy services company based in St. Petersburg, Fla., note that homeowners who take such measures also ultimately help reduce air pollution by lessening the demand placed on power companies.

"Homeowners who save an average of $25 on their monthly electric bill will reduce greenhouse gas emissions from their power company by roughly 6,000 pounds per year," said Jeff Stokes, World Energy

Solutions vice president.

The first thing to do is to check windows to ensure they are well-sealed, and caulk any small openings along the frames and sills, both inside and out. Also, consider installing door sweeps to block outside air.

Larger openings, such as exterior holes for plumbing and electrical wires, should be sealed with spray foam. Attic doors and hatches are a major source of unwanted cold air, so be sure to carefully apply weather-stripping in those areas.

Another problem area is the seam where basement walls meet the home's foundation. Any gaps should be caulked to keep unwanted air from entering.

And when it comes time to replace windows and doors, climate is an important consideration.

Energy-efficient windows and doors employ special glazing between the layers of panes to handle the job.

Consumers should consider a window's U-value, a measure of insulating ability.

It is also important to find out how much daylight and heat the window lets in. Glazing can be chosen to allow high, moderate or low heat gain. Framing materials have improved, too, offering better insulation than in the past.

The type of window you buy also makes a difference. Casement windows typically provide a tighter seal than double-hung windows.

For information on energy-saving approaches from World Energy Solutions and how the company is helping businesses use energy wisely, visit www.wesinc.net.

Now, we can...
Pahk the Car!
by Linda & Frank

When we moved from Boston to Quincy, we made more space for our car with the extra driveway space. Century 21 Annex Realty agent helped us find a house what we wanted, and was always available to answer our questions, and even called us while she was on vacation.

Now, we can pahk the car in our own driveway, get a dog and fire up the grill in our new backyard. Our real estate agent will be "guest of honor" at our first cookout!

Is Your Exercise Partner a Cell Phone?

The prominence of cell phones has more than tripled in recent years. An estimated 2.14 billion people in the world are cell-phone subscribers, making it an integral part of the lifestyle of most people, including those who use the gym.

The awkward looks and stares a person may have received 10 years ago if seen talking on a mobile phone while exercising have changed dramatically. Today, it's become common to see someone answering a phone call while walking on the treadmill, text messaging a client in between sets or using their phone as an MP3 player.

This has changed the culture of many fitness facilities — and not always for the better. Risk for injury, quality of workout and maintaining a positive workout environment can all suffer at the hands of cell phone users at the gym.

Any distraction to someone exercising, especially while using equipment, can increase the risk of injury for them and anyone around them. Walking on the treadmill while using one hand to hold the phone, or focusing on reading text messages can keep someone from being aware of what is going on around them, potentially causing a misstep due to a lack of attention to details such as speed and intensity.

The quality of your workout also may decrease if your focus is more on your conversation than on the proper technique of the exercise. Even if using a wireless earpiece to talk, not focusing on proper breathing or body awareness can lead to an ineffective workout.

At most fitness centers there is not an enforced policy about talking on your cell phone while exercising. Many facilities try to discourage members from using their phones while working out, but may not be 100 percent successful. Loud talking and inappropriate conversations can cause a frustrating environment for other exercisers.

There are instances due to work or family emergencies that the use of a cell phone is necessary. The key is to be courteous, respectful and understanding of the people exercising around you. Keep your calls to a minimum and move to an area away from exercise equipment and other people working out while talking, texting or checking e-mails on your mobile device.

It may be true that exercising with a cell phone is better than not exercising at all. But exercise can also help with stress management in addition to helping you reach your fitness goals. Taking time away from a hectic schedule to exercise without your mobile device can give you just the break you need.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Expanded Supervised Gym Program During School Vacation Week

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct an expanded day schedule of supervised gym programs during the upcoming school vacation period. Gyms will be supervised from 9 a.m. to 12 noon for free activities for boys and girls from age 8 through high school. School gyms will be open in all neighborhoods of the city and will feature activities such as basketball, floor hockey, gym games and dodge ball, Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, said.

Registration is done at each location and those ages 8 through grade 5 will attend from 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

Those in grades 6 through 12 will attend from 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon. Participants may attend the program of their choice.

Some minor changes in times may occur in some locations to accommodate differences in enrollment. In addition to the day schedule, the ongoing night gym program will also be conducted in selected locations and all regular Saturday morning programs will be conducted on Saturday, Feb. 17 and Feb. 24.

"The department expects these programs to be well attended and have always been beneficial to participants and working parents," Welch said.

Participants are requested to wear sneakers at all locations.

The schedule is as follows:
No programs on Mon., Feb. 19 due to the Presidents Day holiday.

The gyms scheduled to open 9 a.m. to 12 noon on Tues., Feb. 20 are Atherton Hough, Bernazzani, Merrymount, Montclair, Squantum and Atlantic.

The gyms scheduled to be open 9 a.m. to 12 noon on Wed., Feb. 21 are Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Snug Harbor, Wollaston and Point Webster.

The gyms scheduled to be open 9 a.m. to 12 noon on Thurs., Feb. 22 are Merrymount, Montclair, Squantum, Snug Harbor and Atlantic.

The gyms scheduled to be open 9 a.m. to 12 noon on Fri., Feb. 23 are Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Wollaston and Point Webster.

Saturday-Regular Gym Programs from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Quincy's Kathy O'Brien Featured In 'Go For Red Women' Radio Ads

Kathy O'Brien of Quincy, marketing services manager for Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, is featured as one of six representatives from the company who pledge a commitment to the American Heart Association's Go Red For Women campaign in a series of advertisements airing on Oldies 103.3 FM.

The ads encourage women to join Go Red For Women, a national initiative that encourages women to understand and reduce their risk of heart disease, their number-one killer.

The series of advertisements, which tout Harvard Pilgrim's support of the Go Red For Women movement through its presenting sponsoring of the Boston Go Red Luncheon, features Harvard Pilgrim Health Care CEO Charlie Baker introducing one employee — each declaring the unique ways they "love their hearts" — in each 60-second spot.

O'Brien, formerly Kathy Hussey, a mother of four who is a lifetime resident of Merrymount, coaches her twin daughters' Squirt hockey team for Quincy youth on the weekends. O'Brien is an avid runner, including five Boston Marathons — one of which she ran while her children cheered her on at Heartbreak Hill.

She considers it her mission to foster a healthy lifestyle for her children, stay fit and have fun doing it. In her segment, she discusses how her winter outdoor fun with her kids helps her stay active and fit. Her message reinforces one of the core components of the Go Red For Women movement, which emphasizes that physical activity and time spent with family are not mutually exclusive.

An excerpt follows:
"Hi, I'm Kathy O'Brien from Harvard Pilgrim. I choose to Go Red with my children. During the winter, we spend a lot of time outside. We go skiing, and sledding and ice skating, and even build snowmen! Getting active with them is a great stress reliever. Plus I'm able to exercise while having a great time with my family."

The "Go Red For Women" advertisements are currently airing on Oldies 103.3 FM, which, along with Mix 98.5 and Women's Business, supports the Go Red For Women movement in Boston as an official media sponsor.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

A WELCOMING SMILE

A smile is one of the first things that people notice. When gaps, chips, discoloration, or wear rob patients of their smiles' potential, the dentist can help bring new freshness to their faces with bleaching, bonding, and laminated veneers. Replacing amalgam fillings with tooth-colored restorations on visible surfaces can also go a long way toward improving a smile. Professional bleaching makes teeth shades whiter for a more youthful look, and bonding uses tooth-colored materials to fill in spaces and chips, and otherwise impart a more youthful contour to tooth surfaces. In some cases, porcelain veneers may be recommended for a longer-lasting result. If you think that you may benefit from a smile makeover, schedule and evaluation.

Even the subtlest change in your smile can make a dramatic difference in the way you look and feel about yourself. We invite you to talk to us about the cosmetic dental options most suitable for you, what your expectations are, and the dental fees involved. We are a highly qualified and experienced team of professionals. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our entire staff is thoroughly trained, skilled, and sensitive to your needs. Our goal is to make each visit to our office a comfortable and positive experience. PH: 617-479-6220. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Torpey's 3-Pointer Paces Quincy Past W-H

By SEAN BRENNAN

Three was the magic number last Tuesday night for the Quincy girls' basketball team.

The Presidents won their third straight game against a Whitman-Hanson team that has won the past three Atlantic Coast League titles.

Quincy (9-9 overall, 7-5 in the ACL) never lead until junior Marybeth Torpey buried a three-pointer with five seconds left in regulation to give the Presidents the upset win, 52-49.

In the two teams first meeting of the year on Jan. 9, the Panthers rolled to a 22-point victory, and early on in this game, the Presidents once again found themselves in a deep hole. Whitman-Hanson (14-5, 9-2) opened the game on a 14-3 run, but this time around; Quincy eventually found its rhythm.

Junior Meagan Tobin's hot shooting (three 3-pointers and 13 first-half points) got the Presidents back to within seven points at the break, and the team used the half-time intermission to regroup on the defensive side of the court. The strategy worked. Whitman-Hanson could not figure out Quincy's defensive effort and scored a total of 14 second-half points.

"We found our rhythm at the end of the first-half, and Tobin took her play to another level by relentlessly attacking the hoop and hitting her outside jumper," head coach Jeff Bretsch said. "At halftime, the girls refocused on defense and came out to start the second-half determined not to back down. The team responded by holding the Panthers to only 14 second-half points."

The defensive star of the second-half was Torpey. Her tireless defensive effort made it tough on Emily Trapp, the league's leading scorer, to get her hands on the ball in crunch time.

"Despite her five-inch height difference on Trapp, Torpey shut her down," Bretsch said. "The rest of the team amped up the ball pressure and good things started to happen. We gradually cut into their big lead and the team narrowed it to a razor thin margin for much of the last three minutes of the game."

The team's defensive focus translated into a much-improved offensive effort in the second-half. Taking advantage of a mismatch of her own, the Presidents' Leslie Campbell came up with two clutch baskets in the second half to give her nine offensive rebounds (11 points, 10 rebounds total). The post play of senior Hope Collins proved to be the straw that broke the Panthers' back. Collins scored all four of her points late in the game, and it was her final hoop with the 49 seconds remaining and no time left on the shot clock that tied the game at 49-49. It was the first time all game that Quincy had not trailed.

"After Collins' hoop tied the game, the girls responded with a big stop at the other end," Bretsch said. "With 24 seconds remaining, the team worked the ball around to allow time to tick away, and it eventually found its way into the hands of all-star point guard Marybeth Torpey. Without hesitation, she stepped up and drilled a monumental 3-pointer with six seconds to go. Despite their best efforts, Whitman-Hanson was unable to get a shot off in the final ticks. For the second straight year, Quincy acted as the spoiler."

The Presidents traveled down to Marshfield High School last Friday night looking for a fourth consecutive win, but a slow start doomed the Presidents and they lost, 46-40.

"We started out cold against the Rams, and trailed 27-10 at the end of the first-half," Bretsch said. "We had a hard time stopping them (Marshfield had two players score 26 out of 27 points) and we need to do a better job early in games."

Quincy almost made it two comeback victories in a row against a league foe, but the closest the Presidents got was to within three points. Down by three with :41 seconds remaining, Quincy had to foul and Marshfield made their free throws and sealed the win.

"We nearly came back, but we ran out of time," Bretsch said. "One positive was that our free throw shooting was great (14 for 19). We have three games left and need just one win to make the post-season, so we should be in good shape."

Leading the way for the Presidents were Campbell (16 points/14 pts. in the 2nd half) and senior captain Brigid Kyle (10 points).

Quincy played last night against Plymouth South. The Presidents play host to North Quincy High School this Friday night (5:00 p.m.) and the team finishes up its regular season against Hanover High School on 2/21.

Three Red Raiders Qualify For Div. II Wrestling Tourney

The North Quincy Red Raiders had three wrestlers qualify for the Division II state tournament at last Saturday's Metro Sectionals. The Quincy Presidents had two wrestlers qualify.

North Quincy's Jon Tan (119) and Phil Kelly (285) both took first place in their respective weight classes, while Jack Leung took third at 140.

Also competing for the Red Raiders were Dennis Leung (sixth at 112), David Duong (fifth at 125), Danny Sok (sixth at 130) and Louis Chin (sixth at 145).

Quincy's Camillo Arredondo finished first at the 171-pound weight class and Paul Reggianianni came in fourth at 135.

All five wrestlers will compete for a state title in the Division II state tournament that begins this Friday.

DO YOU SOMETIMES GET THE SURGE?

If your vehicle's engine surges while you are on the road, the problem is likely caused by engine management failure. This means that the sensors that monitor performance and emissions are relaying problems to the power train control module (PCM), which controls fuel mixture, timing, and emissions management systems. As the result of a failure, the vehicle will surge. For instance, if a sensor value is out of the normal range, the PCM may hunt for a value, which causes the engine to surge. Or, a tear in the intake boot may create a vacuum leak that causes one or more sensors to malfunction. Testing the diagnostic trouble codes with a PCM scanner will usually reveal the culprit.

Engine surges can affect performance and the safety of your automobile. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we have the diagnostic tools and technicians trained to use them to find and then fix the problems that are causing engine surges. Located at 258 Quincy Ave., East Braintree, we urge you to bring your vehicle to us at the first sign of engine surge. Questions? Call 781-843-1550, 9am-5pm. We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: A plugged exhaust system can cause excessive back pressure, which can also lead to surging.

North Quincy Eyes Share Of ACL North Crown

The North Quincy Red Raider girls' hoop team has put themselves in position to earn a possible share of the Atlantic Coast League North Division championship.

The Red Raiders defeated Plymouth North High School last Tuesday (2/6) by a 69-39 margin. With the win and a Quincy victory over league-leading Whitman-Hanson the same night, North Quincy is currently tied with Panthers for the North Division lead. The two teams split their two games this season. Both teams held serve on their home courts.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

"Somebody called it in (Quincy's victory) to the girls on the bus, they were going nuts," head coach Doug MacFarlane said.

Leading the way for North Quincy were senior Megan Therrien and sophomore Jess Howlett. Both scored eight points in the victory. Junior Rebecca Goreham contributed five points, 10 rebounds and six assists.

At 15-4 overall and 10-2 in the Atlantic Coast League, the Red Raiders have one game left on their regular season schedule. And it is a big one.

This Friday evening at 5:00 p.m., North Quincy will travel down Hancock Street to play Quincy High School. The Raiders won the first game of the year against the Presidents, and they will need to bring their A-game if they hope to earn their 16th win of the season as the Presidents have won four out of their last five games.

Presidents Tie W-H, Await Post-Season Seed

The Quincy High School boys' ice hockey team played two games last week, and with only one regular season game remaining (tonight against North Quincy), the Presidents just have to sit back and wait to see where they will be seeded in the post-season.

Quincy (9-3-4 overall, 6-2-4 in Atlantic Coast League play) skated to a 2-2 tie against Whitman-Hanson High School last Wednesday night.

ICE HOCKEY

Senior Anthony Gilbody and sophomore Zach McCaul each scored for the Presidents.

Junior defenseman Mike Lebel assisted on both goals.

On Saturday, the Presidents played host to the league-leading Rams of Marshfield High School (10-6-1 overall, 9-1-1 in league play), and came away with a hard-fought 3-3 tie.

Scoring for the Presidents were Ted Walsh and Anthony Gilbody.

Quincy and North Quincy will face-off tonight at 7:10 p.m. at the Quincy Youth Arena in the second of two games between the schools this season. The Presidents defeated the Red Raiders, 4-1, in the first meeting on Jan. 27.

Q-NQ Athletes In MIAA Meet

The Quincy/North Quincy cooperative track team will feature eight athletes at Friday's MIAA Division I Championship to be held at the Reggie Lewis Center.

Shot-putters Joe Page and Kelly Pineo lead a squad which includes sophomores Jeff Pereira in the 55-meter hurdles, freshman Mary Schwartz in the 1000-meters and Rebecca Stanton in the high-jump. The boys' relay team of Pereira, Danny Jackson, Wilson Araujo and Pat Watkins will compete in the 4 x 200-meter relay race.

The squads are coming off a very successful meet in the Atlantic Coast League championships also held last Friday at the Reggie Lewis Center.

Scoring for the boys' team were Jackson (55-meters), Pereira (hurdles/long jump), Rongfu Zhen (long jump), Page (shot put) and the 4 x 200-relay team (Pereira, Jackson, Araujo and Watkins).

Point getters for the girls' team included Schwartz (1000-meters), Pineo (shot put) and Erin Collins (shot put).

Many of the girls also got their personal bests of the season despite finishing out of the scoring. Mikayla Shruhan (55-meters/8.52 sec.), Jen Nhan (55-hurdles/10.80 sec.), Lily Man (600-meters/1:51.3 minutes), Allison Figueroa (600-meters/2:00.4 minutes), Schwartz (1000-meters/3:17.17 minutes), Tara McFarland (1000-meters/3:40.2 minutes), Caitlin McCarthy (1-mile/6:08.1 minutes) and Jess Davis (2-mile/13:06 minutes) made the meet a rewarding experience for the entire team.

"John Fidalgo and Andrea Bomar did a great job working with these kids whether it be middle or long distance, or hurdles, these kids were ready and the fact that only Page, Araujo and Pineo are seniors bodes well for the future," head coach Geoff Hennessy said.

Both the boys and girls teams finished at 2-3 in the Atlantic Coast League, with both teams wins coming against Sandwich and Norwell High Schools.

The ACL also announced its league all-stars last week. Joe Page and Jeff Pereira were named to the North Division all-star team on the boys' side, and Kelly Pineo and Rebecca Stanton were named to the North Division all-star team on the girls side.

Raiders Ice Plymouth N., Take Step Toward Tourney

The North Quincy (6-5-3) boys hockey team edged its way closer to qualifying for a post-season berth with a convincing 4-0 victory over Atlantic Coast League foe Plymouth North last Wednesday night on the road.

Senior captain Nash Winters scored the game-winner in the first period and sophomore sensation Brandon Gilmore had a goal and an assist for the visiting Red Raiders.

Winters' game-winner was assisted on by senior captain Ted Walsh. Senior forward Matt Martin and senior defenseman Ken Patey also found the back of the net for North Quincy.

WINTER CAR CARE

Tips for Emergency Winter Driving Situations

(NU) - Severe winter weather can make driving a challenge for even the most experienced motorists.

Extreme cold temperatures make vehicles more likely to break down if proper maintenance has not been preformed. Heavy snowfalls and icy road conditions can lead to vehicles sliding off the road and becoming stuck in the snow.

"Prevention is key to avoiding vehicle breakdowns," said John Nielsen, director of AAA's Approved Auto Repair Program. Drivers should have a certified technician inspect their vehicles, including the ignition system, antifreeze, lights, heater, windshield wipers and washer fluids.

Should motorists find themselves stranded in the snow with no help in sight, AAA cautions drivers not to needlessly spin the tires; this only digs the vehicle deeper in the snow. To properly free your vehicle, AAA experts suggest the following:

1) Clear away as much snow as possible from around the tires, under the vehicle and near the vehicle exhaust pipe.

2) Improve traction by scattering sand around the front tires for front-wheel drive cars, and around the rear tires for rear-wheel drive cars. Vehicle floor mats may work in a pinch.

3) Place the car in low gear (automatic transmissions) or second gear (manual transmissions) and gently press the accelerator. Ease off if the tires begin to spin.

4) If still unable to free the vehicle, try slowly rocking the car. Ease forward with the car in low gear (automatic transmissions) or second gear (manual transmissions). When the car will no longer go forward, release the accelerator to allow the car to roll back.

5) When the vehicle stops its backward motion, apply minimum pressure to accelerator again. Repeat these actions in rapid succession until the vehicle.

6) If others are available to help, have them push to assist the car's rocking motion. People pushing the vehicle should not stand directly behind the wheels because of the risks of flying gravel, sand and ice.

7) If you are unable to free your vehicle, set up reflectors, flares or other signal devices to alert passing motorists.

8) If you stay in your car, tie a bright cloth to your antenna to alert rescuers. If you run the engine for warmth, make sure snow does not block the exhaust pipe, which could cause dangerous fumes to back up inside the car.

9) If you can leave your vehicle and reach shelter safely, contact your local AAA auto club for assistance. AAA members can request roadside assistance by contacting their club or visiting www.AAA.com.

The Garden Bug
World's oldest rosebush
St. Mary's Cathedral in Hildesheim, Germany was built in the 9th century. A rose bush, planted at the base of the cathedral at its founding, lived for centuries. Bombed in World War II, it was thought destroyed, but the roots sprouted anew. The plant continues to flourish and draws many visitors each year.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You don't like rejection. But instead of trying to "ram" your ideas through to an unresponsive audience, stand back and wait for a more favorable environment later this month.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Job commitments call for the tidy Taurean to charge into those problem-plagued projects and get them into shape. Then go ahead and enjoy the fun and friendships of your expanding social life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The pressures of the workplace are beginning to ease. While you still need to stay connected to your ongoing commitments, you'll be able to take more time to relax with family and friends.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel that you need to prove how much you can do. But be careful not to take on more than you can handle, or your risk being bogged down. An Aries has a message for you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Financially it could be a little tight for a while. So resist the urge to splurge on things you don't really need. There will be time enough to indulge yourself when the money squeeze eases later this month.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You demand trust from others. But someone is creating a situation that could put your own trustworthiness in question. Be sure to keep all lines of communication open.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A problem delays the recognition that you hoped to receive for your hard work. But all will soon be resolved. Remember to make patience your watchword this week.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Those wonderful ideas could expand your workplace prospects and ultimately lead you on a new career path. Your personal life also opens up new vistas.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) So much seems to be swirling around you these days that you might find it hard to focus on priorities. Best advice: Take things one at a time, and you'll get through them all.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Work out situations with what you have, and avoid the temptation to create complications where they don't exist. This applies both at home and in the workplace.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Keep your keen senses open to possible changes in personal and/or professional situations. Knowing what might lie ahead gives you an edge on how to handle it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Personal pressures at work could create a problem with your performance. Best advice: Focus on the job ahead of you. If necessary, you can deal with the other issue later.

BORN THIS WEEK: Like your fellow Aquarian Abraham Lincoln, you have a way of handling the most difficult situations with grace and conviction.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Valentine's Day is for children, lovers and romantics. Well, essentially, yes, but when it comes to affairs of the heart, everyone is included.

Valentines need not be expensive. A happy note written in your own handwriting... a telephone call to someone who might not otherwise receive a call.

Some people find it hard to say "I love you," but on Valentine's Day they express that sentiment with special remembrances or gifts. It is also a day that "mushy" sentiments on brightly colored paper are not really taken seriously (i.e. Valentines exchanged by children at school.) The serious thing is the number of valentines received, not the sentiment. As people mature, the sentiment becomes more important than the number.

It takes only a little time to send a valentine, or a note, or to make a telephone call to someone, especially someone who is a little "out of circulation" these days. A little surprise gift will make that someone feel special, and you'll feel good, too!

Rocco Fanuele, 96

Former Union Waiter, Restaurant Owner

A funeral Mass for Rocco Fanuele, 96, of Quincy, a former union waiter and restaurant owner, was celebrated Monday at St. Joseph's Church, 556 Washington St., Quincy.

Mr. Fanuele died Feb. 9 at Milton Hospital.

He opened an Italian Restaurant, The Venice, on the corner of Dorchester and Savin Hill Avenues in Dorchester when he was 53.

He sold the restaurant two years later and opened the Roma Restaurant in Codman Square, which he operated for eight years until it was destroyed by a fire in 1978.

Mr. Fanuele was a union waiter until age 75.

Born in Italy, he came to the United States when he was 12. He attended Boston schools.

Mr. Fanuele was a member of the Local 26 of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders Union.

Husband of the late Carmela (Viglietti) Fanuele; he is survived by two daughters, Isabella A. Lobosco of Albany, N.Y., and Rosemary Elliott of Sharon; two sons, Vincent J. Fanuele of Hull and Anthony Fanuele of Swansea; a brother, Charles Fanuele of Stoneham; three sisters, Porzia Lobosco of Norwood and Isabella DeBellis and Carmella Verelli of Italy; 11 grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Milton Hospital Fund, 92 Highland St., Milton, MA 02186.

THE RICHARDSON BUILDING, the original Thomas Crane Public Library, ranks high nationwide for its architectural beauty a recent poll shows.

Ranks 43rd Among Top 150 In National Poll

Thomas Crane Library Takes High Honors As Architectural Beauty

The Richardson Building, the original Thomas Crane Public Library, is highly ranked nationwide in America's Favorite Architecture public poll.

The Romanesque style, built in 1882 and designed by famed architect Henry Hobson Richardson, placed 43rd among 150 structures considered the best works of architecture.

The recent poll was conducted for the American Institute of Architects by Harris Interactive.

Photographs of 248 different structures including the Richardson Building was placed on a website (AIA 150.org) and viewers asked to vote.

Some 1,804 people voted for a final best 150.

The Empire State Building took top honors, followed in the first 10 by: The White House.

The 43rd placed Richardson Building was just behind the Sears Tower in Chicago in the voting and ahead of such architectural notables as:

Waldorf Astoria (46).
Carnegie Hall (48).
Rockefeller Center (56).
Faneuil Hall Marketplace (64).
New York Times Building (68).
Yankee Stadium (84).
Boston Public Library (90).
Radio City Music Hall (100).
Fenway Park (113).
John Hancock Tower (142).

"We are honored to learn that the American people love our Richardson library as much as the people in Quincy," said Ann McLaughlin, director of the Thomas Crane Library.

"The library has been a favorite place for generations of Quincy people. How wonderful to know that this beautiful building is so universally loved."

The building is considered Richardson's masterpiece in library architecture.

2006 Report Issued

Rooming House Task Force Finds Violations At 40 Properties

The city's Illegal Rooming House Tax Force cited 40 properties for violations in 2006 according to a report issued Tuesday.

The violations included 15 for operating an illegal lodging house, 20 for having an illegal apartment and five miscellaneous.

The Task Force also cleared 58 other properties of any violations. Inspections of 98 properties were carried out.

The Task Force was formed by Mayor William Phelan as part of his "Neighborhoods First" initiative.

Members include the building inspector, code enforcement officer, health commissioner, and representatives from police and fire departments.

The group investigates all calls and reports of illegal lodging received by the Building Department and code enforcement officer.

"This has been an area of concern for our residents and we have approached the problem with a comprehensive solution involving the range of laws, ordinances, and personnel necessary to enforce a range of codes," said Mayor William Phelan.

"An illegal house can have a dramatic impact on a neighborhood and we are determined to ensure that our neighborhoods are protected from such activity."

The Task Force still conducts regular investigations of calls. Residents who suspect an illegal rooming house in their neighborhood are asked to call (617) 376-1456.

"We remain responsive to concerns people have about the quality of life in their neighborhoods by responding to every complaint and continuing our unannounced inspections," said Jay Duca, Director of Inspectional Services.

The city issued a "Good Neighbors Guide" in 2006 to help educate residents about the various ordinances and codes that impact our neighborhoods.

"Education and enforcement are companion efforts to ensure that our neighborhoods are protected," Phelan said. "The strength of our city lies in the quality of our neighborhoods and we will continue to work to protect that quality."

47,780 Census Forms In Mail

Some 47,780 forms for the city's 2007 census went into the mail Wednesday. City Clerk Joseph Shea announces.

A four-page "Quincy View" newsletter from Mayor William Phelan was included in the mailing.

The census will determine Quincy's population, which Shea says currently, is 90,342.

"I think we could reach the 91,000 mark this year," he says.

In addition to determining

JOSEPH SHEA

the population, the census information helps calculate the city's federal aid, and establish a jury list.

The mayor's newsletter provides neighborhood updates, and information on the energy saving program in municipal buildings, streets and sidewalks improvements, and a waterfront park to be built at Broad Meadows.

There is also a suggestion box inviting residents to submit ideas to help the city provide better services or to save money. The winner will have lunch with the mayor.

THE MOUND STREET Beach in Quincy Point made a pretty winter scene Saturday but the ice and snow forced postponement of the John Hancock Plunge. It is rescheduled for March 3.

John Hancock Plunge Reset For March 3

The John Hancock Plunge still hasn't even had a toe dunked.

The event, sponsored by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission was postponed for the second time Saturday because of safety reasons and has been rescheduled for Saturday, March 3.

The Mound Street Beach in Quincy Point was covered with ice, forcing the postponement.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, a member of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, was at the beach and expressed concern for safety on the slippery beach.

He said that the sheet of ice covering the normally sandy area even extended five or six feet into the water, making conditions very dangerous.

Proceeds from the event will go to the Interfaith Social Services of Quincy. Fee to take part is $10.

Ward 1 Councilor Leo

Kelly, chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, said entries will still be taken.

Those interested, are asked to write a $10 check payable to the Interfaith Social Services and mail it to Chickie Abdallah, commission treasurer, 48 Silver St., Quincy, MA 02169.

The event was originally scheduled for Jan. 20 to coincide with Hancock's birth Jan. 23, 1737 here in Quincy.

QMC To Host Free Health Lectures

Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, will host a free HealthMatters health education lecture series designed to help area residents become better informed about their health.

•Got Diabetes?

On Wednesday, March 14 from 5:30 to 7 p.m., Jane Griffin, RD, LDN, a QMC-affiliated Clinical and Outpatient Dietitian, and Kristen Lavoie, RN, MSN, a Wound/Ostomy Clinical Nurse Specialist will review strategies to help people better manage their diabetes.

•Got Chronic Back Pain?

On Wednesday, March 21 from 5:30 to 7 p.m., Dr. Brian Kwon, a QMC-affiliated Spine Surgeon in practice with the Boston Spine Group, will present a review of the causes of and treatment programs for chronic back pain.

•Got Aching Knees?

Coughlin Proposes Mandatory Recycling

Councillor Kevin Coughlin proposes that the city make recycling mandatory.

Coughlin introduced an ordinance at Tuesday's City Council meeting that would require all residents living in single-family and multi-family dwellings of up to eight units and who have municipal trash collection to participate. Those not complying would risk having their trash not collected.

Recycling has been on a voluntary basis for more than a decade.

"Mandatory recycling makes a lot of sense," Coughlin said. "And will save taxpayers a lot of money."

The proposed ordinance was referred to the Ordinance Committee for study.

Under it, residents would separate paper, cardboard, glass, plastic bottles and jars and aluminum and tin cans for recycling.

None of those materials could be placed in regular trash containers.

Montclair School To Celebrate Dr. Seuss' 103rd Birthday

Montclair School students and staff are joining students nationwide in celebrating Dr. Seuss' 103rd birthday Friday, March 2 from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Students ambassadors dressed as their favorite book characters will escort local and state elected officials, school administrators, Rotary Club members, officials from the Quincy Police and Fire Departments, local businesses, and members of the

KEVIN COUGHLIN

"It shall be the policy of the City to reduce the amount of solid waste generated and to require the recycling of recyclable materials to the fullest extent possible," the ordinance reads.

The program would be carried out in three steps:

On April 1, the Department of Public Works would begin an educational program regarding the recycling requirements.

On July 1, the DPW would begin placing notice tags on trash containers with significant amounts (10 percent by volume or more) of paper, cardboard, glass and plastic bottles and jars and aluminum and tin cans.

Beginning Jan. 1, 2008 violations would result in refusal of curbside trash collection services. Customers would be required to remove those items from trash containers before they would be collected.

Quincy's recycling rate is around 25 to 26 percent, Coughlin says.

"I believe it's time for Quincy to codify our residential recycling program and look at both regulatory and creative incentives to double our recycling rate within the next five years."

"We save $82.35 per ton for each ton of recycled material diverted from regular trash presently averaging 11,000 tons per year. Imagine what we can save taxpayers if we double that while doing so many good things for our environment."

Coughlin also proposes that the city council encourages all restaurants, supermarkets and other food handlers to participate in a comprehensive plan to recycle and compost food waste and other organics. Such waste, he says, accounts for 30 percent of all commercial waste disposal.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Feb. 24, 1836, Texas Colonel William Travis sends a desperate plea for help for the besieged defenders of the Alamo, ending the message with the famous last words, "Victory or Death." Only 32 men responded to Travis' call for reinforcements. On March 6, the Mexican army stormed the Alamo, and Travis, Jim Bowie, Davy Crockett and about 190 of their comrades were killed.

• On Feb. 19, 1847, the first rescuers reach surviving members of the Donner Party, a group of California-bound immigrants stranded by snow in the Sierra Nevada Mountains. Eighty-nine people had set out from Springfield, Ill., the previous July. Only 45 of the original party reached California.

• On Feb. 21, 1885, the Washington Monument is dedicated in Washington, D.C. The monument remains today, by District of Columbia law, the tallest building in the nation's capital.

• On Feb. 22, 1923, the 1 millionth Chevy is produced. Chevrolet began when William Durant hired Louis Chevrolet, a Swiss race-car driver and star of the Buick racing team, to design a new car to challenge the success of the Ford Model T.

• On Feb. 25, 1938, Miami's first drive-in movie theater opens. Admission was 25 cents per car and 25 cents per individual, with no car paying more than $1. The drive-in craze would peak in 1963, when 3,502 theaters were in operation across the country.

• On Feb. 20, 1943, movie-studio executives agree to allow the Office of War Information to censor movies informally. World War II led to a proliferation of war-themed films, and the government feared that vital information might be disclosed through movies.

• On Feb. 23, 1954, a group of children from Arsenal Elementary School in Pittsburgh, Pa., receive the first injections of the new polio vaccine developed by Dr. Jonas Salk. Globally, there are now roughly 250,000 cases of polio each year, mostly in developing countries.

Is That All There Is?

Remember Peggy Lee's hit lament, "Is That All There Is?"

Some are wondering if that title might have a political version here this election year.

We are sure of a good mayor's race between three-term incumbent William Phelan and former Park Commissioner Tom Koch for voters to chew on.

PHELAN

KOCH

That's a lot right there. The best mayoral race since 2001 when Phelan upset six-term incumbent James Sheets by a scant 17 votes.

But, is that all there is?

Could that be the only race this year? No council or school committee battles?

Right now all seems quiet on that political front.

And observers are wondering if nine city councillors and three school committee members could go on the ballot unopposed?

Don't know if that has ever happened before, but could it this year?

Some think so.

The three school committee members up for re-election this year are: Vice Chairwoman Elaine Dwyer, Linda Stice and Dave McCarthy. No challenger seems to be stirring.

CHENEY

mean he will.

And the city council?

Publicly, all's quiet at the moment. But it seems quite unlikely that nine councillors could get a free ride to re-election.

Former Councillor Mike Cheney indicated he might run. But that doesn't There's speculation there could be a woman candidate running at large. She is well known, has held a local appointed office here and reportedly is "thinking" about it.

The council is again an all-male body.

There have been only four women elected to the council in the city's history: Edna Austin, Joanne Condon, Patricia Toland and Alicia Gardner, the last. She was elected in 2003, served one term and stepped down.

And many, today, feel the council could use a woman's touch.

There's some speculation two or three ward councillors might have opposition. But right now that's all that is speculation. No bodies have stepped forward.

Up for re-election in the council this year are:

Councillors at-large Joseph Finn, John Keenan and Michael McFarland and Ward Councillors Leo Kelly (1), Dan Raymondi (2), Kevin Coughlin (3), Jay Davis (4), Council President Doug Gutro (5) and Brian McNamee (6).

Another question: Could any of them decide not to seek re-election. Possibly one.

And Raymondi is still keeping 'em guessing about possibly getting into the mayor's race. He ain't saying yes, he ain't saying no. All you get from him is that Raymondi smile.

RAYMONDI

All the guessing on who's running and who's not will be over fairly soon.

Nomination papers will be available at the Election Department in City Hall in early May.

But the possibility that the mayor's race could be the only one this year is intriguing.

Is that all there is?

We'll soon find out.

Basic Boating Course At Houghs Neck Maritime Center

The Massachusetts Environmental Police is offering a basic boating course entitled "Boat Massachusetts" at the Houghs Neck Maritime Center, 137 Bayview Ave., on March 10, 17 and 24 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

"Boat Massachusetts" is offered to the public at no charge. The primary purpose of the course is to foster safe boat operation through increased awareness of required safety equipment, safe boating practices and legal responsibilities.

Youths 12 through 15 years of age who successfully complete the course, will be issued a Safety Certificate allowing them to operate a motorboat without adult supervision, as required by state law. This course will also satisfy the state requirements for personal watercraft users who are 16 or 17 years of age. All graduates will be issued a course completion diploma and a Safety Certificate. Taking the class as a family is encouraged and has proven to be highly rewarding.

All three classes are required for completion.

Pre-registration is required with the Massachusetts Environmental Police (508-759-0002).

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1929 POSTCARD was one of a series published by the Granite Trust Company to mark the opening of their new 10-story art-deco bank building in Quincy Square. This is a view of the bank's president, Theophilus King. King had come to Quincy as a young man and served as president of the bank for 50 years. He was involved in many other businesses including being president of the Quincy Quarries Company that owned and leased out many of Quincy's now defunct quarries. Along with his son, Decevere, who succeeded him at the bank, King was also one of Quincy's most generous philanthropists. The King Family Trust continues to provide annual gifts to dozens of Quincy's churches and service organizations. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Honor The Legacy Of The Civilian Conservation Corps

This coming year, 2008, shall be the 75th anniversary of the Civilian Conservation Corps, which, in my opinion, marked the start of the "Greatest Generation."

The years 1933-1942 were of the "Greatest Generation" created in this United States of America. At the time of the Great Depression, employment for family providers was nil. During this catastrophic Depression era, a piece of federal legislation was created for the purpose of improving the economic structure of our waning country while also aiding in conservation efforts. This was created to help the United States of America cultivate the usefulness of their able-bodied youth to expand the workforce, thus improving our economic condition.

Three million young boys, aged 17-25, agreed to serve their country in a time of economic depression and were paid a small salary to do so. This made these three million young men become the "bread winners" for their families in a great many cases. One hundred thousand of the three million enrolled in the Civilian Conservation Corps were from Massachusetts and served in more than 28 Camps throughout this Commonwealth and several other states throughout the nation.

When the next national emergency came about (World War II), 85 percent of the three million served in one of the Armed Services.

The U.S. Navy and Coast Guard were appreciative of the Civilian Conservation Corps for the Merchant Marines and asked for their help during and after the service in the Civilian Conservation Corps. Gallups Island, here in Boston Harbor, served as a radio school for the Merchant Marines.

The first 10 classes of 200 hundred predominantly CCC guys. Many of them perished at sea before they were 18 years of age during the Murmansk Run (the history of the Murmansk Run is flimsy, however, a little searching for its history will be gratifying.)

In summary, the Civilian Conservation Corps provided opportunities for the youth of our nation to improve our economy and environment and lift us out of the darkest of times. This is an absolute example that every economic and emergency situation that our nation has endured has been solved by the youth of the United States of America.

March 31, 2007, has been declared "Civilian Conservation Corps Day" with the governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and he has requested the citizenry to recognize this observance annually.

Please join with me this year in honoring the legacy of the three million youths who helped shape the face of our great nation.

Jamaican Compost Plan To Be Evaluated

By FRANK McCAULEY

The results of the Jamaican composting trip taken by Quincy city officials last week will be evaluated at a conference to be held next Monday night at his office, Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa.

Della Chiesa said that he drew the following conclusions as a result of his trip to Kingston, Jamaica:

This Week
1964

43 Years Ago

One, the operation at Kingston is successful in that it converts a waste material to a marketable product at less cost to the city than incineration.

Two, the evidence indicates that the end product is a valuable soil rebuilder and conditioner.

Three, the indications are that there will be an adequate market for the product as it is promoted and advertised and as it becomes better known.

DELLA CHIESA TO SEEK MORE SNOW REMOVAL FUNDS

Mayor Della Chiesa planned to ask the City Council at its next meeting for an additional $50,000 for snow removal operations. Since the first of the year the city has spent $212,000 for snow removal while only $180,000 was placed in the 1964 budget.

FINANCE COMMITTEE REVIEWS DPW BUDGET

One hundred jobs have been cut from the Public Works Department budget since 1958 through Mayor Della Chiesa's "No hire, no fire" policy. DPW Commissioner Charles R. Herbert told the Council's Finance Committee. The Finance Committee cut a total of $12,995 from the $2,314,000 Public Works budget requests.

'Henry Hudson' Visits Wollaston School

Henry Hudson, who explored the New York area at the time of the Pilgrims, recently visited the Wollaston School in the person of Steven Weisse from the New Netherlands Museum in Albany, N.Y.

Fifth graders made navigational tools and learned about Hudson's voyages up the Hudson River and around Hudson's Bay in Canada in a presentation by the museum.

Many artifacts from Henry Hudson's ship, "The Half Moon," were discussed and students got to sample "hardtack" a sort of ship's biscuit that was a staple food on long voyages.

19th Annual Quincy Lunar New Year Festival Feb. 25

Quincy will host a major celebration of Asian culture with the 19th Annual Quincy Lunar New Year Festival on Sunday, Feb. 25 at North Quincy High School from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The festival is a free event organized by Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) under the leadership of the event's chairmen Frank Poon and David Yi Zou.

Backed by the City of Quincy and several local sponsors, it follows the highly successful Quincy August Moon Festival and underlines the links between Quincy and Asia.

"Last year's festival was a great success with more than 4,000 people attending, and with additional activities being planned this year's Lunar New Year Festival promises to be bigger than ever," said John Brothers, Executive Director of QARI. "The festival has grown as the Asian community in Quincy has grown. We are pleased to feature many Asian cultures at the event and invite all members of the community to celebrate with us."

The Asian Lunar New Year is celebrated at the end of the annual cycle of new moons and each New Year is named for one of the twelve animals. According to ancient legend, the Lord Buddha once summoned all animals to come to him. When only 12 came, he rewarded them by naming each year for them. This year - 2007 - is the Year of the Pig.

Lunar New Year celebrations are held in Asian communities throughout the world. Traditionally, the New Year is a family holiday where families come together to visit, share meals and present gifts of "lucky" red envelopes to children. Quincy's celebration will reflect this tradition.

"The New Year Festival is a family-oriented event which represents the involvement of more than one hundred local businesses, government and social service agencies and individuals, all working to bring together several generations of the community to celebrate the new year," said event co-chair Frank Poon.

These many different groups include students of Quincy High and North Quincy High Schools; Grand Sponsors Mohegan Sun and Sunshine Travel; QARI institutional members such as South Shore Elder Services and Quincy Community Action Programs; and volunteers from the community.

As a family event, the festival will offer entertainment to delight all ages. There will be performances of Asian music and dance and exhibits featuring the work of local Asian artists. There will also be a children's area with Asian games and crafts. Local restaurants will serve different types of Asian cuisine including Chinese and Japanese foods.

New additions to the festival are a reading corner where elders will engage and entertain children by reading popular stories. This activity is being carried out in coordination with Project RISE which strives to increase parents' understanding of the importance of reading to their young children as a critical component of school readiness.

The festival will also work to bridge the past and present by showcasing traditional Asian garments and modern costume characters, such as Minnie and Mickey Mouse, all of which will be worn by local teens.

Quincy Asian Resources Inc. is a not for profit organization dedicated to promoting the development of the Asian-American community. For more information about the Lunar New Year Festival or QARI, please contact QARI at 617-472-2200 or visit HYPERLINK "http://www.qari.info" www.qari.info.

Friends Of Music To Meet Feb. 28

The Friends of Music in the Quincy Public Schools will meet Wednesday, Feb. 28 at 7 p.m. in the Hunting Room at the Office of the Superintendent, 70 Coddington St., Quincy.

With the encouragement of Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, this organization helps to support and nourish the continued growth of the music programs and students in the Quincy Public Schools.

The Friends of Music also raise awareness of the choral, instrumental and string programs in the community and promote musical excellence for its student performers.

This Feb. 28 meeting is open to all Quincy residents with a child, grandchild, niece or nephew in the music program of the Quincy Public Schools, or to those who simply have a love for and an interest in music and the valuable role it can play in the development of a child.

Those who have questions, or cannot attend the meeting are asked to call the Curriculum Office of the Quincy Public Schools at 617-984-8760.

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN (center) and Quincy 2000 Collaborative announced an expanded Multicultural Business Development Initiative designed to increase the city's outreach to the increasing number of Asian and Brazilian Businesses opening in Quincy at a recent meeting at the Neighborhood Club. From the left, Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative; Hong Xue, Managing Director of MetLife; Carlos DaSilva, Office of Total Assistance; Peter Racicot, Quincy 2000 Board Chairman and Sr. VP at Fallon Ambulance and John Brothers, executive director of Quincy Asian Resources.

Quincy 2000 Expands Multicultural Business Programs

Mayor William Phelan and Quincy 2000 Collaborative, a public/private economic development partnership, announce an expanded Multicultural Business Development Initiative designed to increase the city's outreach to the increasing number of Asian and Brazilian Businesses opening in Quincy.

"Our growing Asian and Brazilian community contributes greatly to the social and business fabric of the City, and we want to ensure that the economic development resources and services provided reach all individuals and business owners. Strengthening the collaboration among all businesses instills economic vitality in the City, and fosters social stability for the benefit of the entire community," said Mayor Phelan.

Underwritten in part by a grant by the Massachusetts Department of Business and Technology and the City of Quincy, the program creates over 25 workshops and seminars designed to help start-up businesses and existing companies grow and prosper in the community. The Small Business Technical Assistance Grant Program is part of a state-wide funding effort established to stimulate and support entrepreneurial business growth in Massachusetts. The program is designed to help small businesses gain access to loans from the private banking community in Massachusetts.

Translation and Bi-lingual support in Cantonese, Mandarin, Portuguese and Vietnamese will be provided in all programs offered, as well as publications written in Chinese and Portuguese. Bi-lingual one-on-one business counseling will also be available to help individuals create a business plan, prepare a business loan application, and obtain the necessary permit and licenses.

"It is our goal to ensure that every individual interested in opening a business in the city has access to the various programs and services available to help them succeed," said Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative.

For more information on the programs and services available at Quincy 2000 Collaborative visit their website at www.Quincy2000.org or visit their office at 1250 Hancock St., Suite 127N. 617-847-1454.

Raymond Tung Appointed Quincy Medical Center Trustee

Quincy Medical Center announces Raymond K. Tung has been appointed to the Board of Trustees.

A resident of Wellesley, Tung is senior vice president/director of New England Markets for United Commercial Bank.

Tung started his banking career with Citibank in Asia, managing corporate and individual clients in Hong Kong. Subsequently, he joined the then Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company to handle their Asian regional project finance business. He was thereafter transferred to Taiwan to be the President and Chief Operating Officer of the Bank's joint-venture leasing company, focusing on small and medium businesses.

After successfully growing the business volume and profitability in the leasing venture substantially, Tung was reassigned back to New York as Managing Director and Head of Aerospace Group for Asia when the Bank merged with Chemical Bank. During this tenure, he completed numerous pioneering and major financings for leading airlines in Asia.

At the Bank's next merger

with Chase Manhattan Bank, he was reassigned out to Asia as Managing Director and Head of Shipping Group. He managed one of the largest ship financing portfolios in Asia, and executed numerous landmark investment banking and commercial banking transactions with top-tier shipping companies. In 2000, The Bank was renamed JPMorgan Chase.

In March of 2002, Mr. Tung joined Asian American Bank in Boston as president and CEO. Three years later, he led the successful merger with United Commercial Bank. He assumed his current position as director of New England Markets when the two banks merged in November 2005.

Tung received a MBA in finance and international business from Columbia University and a Bachelors of Science degree in accounting from Long Island University.

Tung is currently on the Board of Directors of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and the Board of Governors of Tufts-New England Medical Center. He is also a member of Fannie Mae Massachusetts Partnership Office Advisory Council, Federal Reserve Bank of Boston's Community Development Advisory Council, FDIC's Minority Bankers Roundtable and an advisor to eChinaCash.

Vets Adviser At COA Office

John D. Miller of Home Care Partners, will be at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., each Wednesday to advise veterans or their surviving spouses of their in-home care benefits.

To schedule an appointment, call the Council on Aging at 617-376-1506.

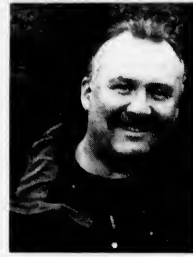

P.J. Foley Appointed To Planning Board

Mayor William Phelan has appointed P.J. Foley of Houghs Neck to a five year term on the Planning Board.

"P.J.'s commitment to our community is relentless," said Phelan. "He is a unique, well-rounded individual that brings a diversified skill set to the Board. I believe that he will add significant perspective to an already professional Board."

"I am honored to be selected by Mayor Phelan and I look forward to working for such a forward-thinking administration," said Foley. "There are a number of positive initiatives that the Planning Board will review and I am thrilled to be able to play in role in helping shape a positive future for Quincy."

Foley has received a number of awards and recognition, including being named "The Quincy Sun" 2006 co-

P.J. FOLEY

Citizen of the Year.

He has been recognized by the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration for his work in restoring marshes throughout Houghs Neck. His "Marsh Madness" projects have drawn hundreds of volunteers and helped restore close to 300 acres of salt marsh.

He has volunteered to help with the City's renewable energy efforts and with the restoration of the Souther Tide Mill property. He is also volunteering to help local, State, and Federal government officials improve water-borne transportation in Quincy.

Foley is employed by Verizon and is active in Local 2222.

He and his wife Julie live in Sea Street.

Currently on the Planning Board are Atty. Robert Harnais, William Allen, William Adams, and James Fay.

"I want to thank all of our volunteer boards and commissions for the assistance they provide the city," said Phelan. "Hundreds of citizens volunteer their time and talents for the betterment of Quincy and I am grateful for all their help."

Tax Assistance For Low, Middle Income Payers

The Council on Aging will again sponsor the AARP Tax Aide Program to provide free, personal income tax assistance to low and middle income taxpayers.

Special attention is given to those 60 years old and older.

The assistance will be provided, by appointment, each Monday beginning Feb. 12 and lasting through the tax season at the Richard Koch Park and Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway.

For an appointment, contact the COA at 617-376-1508.

“I really enjoy the convenience of living at Linden Ponds.”

—Mary Lynch, moved from Quincy

Like many, Mary Lynch had lived in her Quincy house for a long time and was a little hesitant to move to Linden Ponds, a dynamic community on the South Shore. But after taking a closer look, she decided it was the perfect place to live. “I’ve made some really good friends here,” says Mary.

Since moving to Linden Ponds, Mary can now pursue her hobbies without the worries that used to come with owning a house. “I go to some of the exercise classes, and I play dominos and cards—I’m having a great time,” says Mary.

You too can start enjoying the care-free Linden Ponds lifestyle.

80th Birthday, 55th Ordination Anniversary Father Bill’s Double Celebration Raises Over $100,000 For Homeless

By CAITLIN BELL

A celebration of the life and work of Fr. William McCarthy raised more than $100,000 for Father Bill’s Place, the interfaith shelter for the homeless named for him.

More than 600 gathered at the Lantana in Randolph recently in honor of his 80th birthday and the 55th anniversary of his ordination.

Earlier, Fr. McCarthy celebrated a Mass of Thanksgiving at St. John’s Church where he served 18 years as pastor, stepping down but not into retirement in 1995.

Father Bill, a legend in the Quincy and the surrounding South Shore area since his installation as pastor of St. John’s Church in 1977, has touched countless lives in the community.

As employees past and present, former parishioners, friends, family and city and state leaders made their way into the sold out banquet hall, many had a story about how Father Bill had made a difference in their lives.

The St. John the Baptist

Parish Choir, under the direction of Paul Kelly, sang an original song, expounding on his good work and legendary reputation.

Arthur Tobin, the Clerk Magistrate of Quincy District Court and former mayor, was the master of ceremonies.

James Orcutt, co-founder of My Brother’s Keeper recalled Father Bill’s generosity at Thanksgiving. “Every year Father Bill arrives at My Brother’s Keeper with so many turkeys in the trunk of his car, the front wheels are practically off the ground.”

State Rep. A. Stephen Tobin, while presenting a joint resolution from the Massachusetts Legislature, shared with the crowd the influence Father has had on those serving on Beacon Hill. “Father Bill helps keep our morals, ideals and values in the right place.”

Father Bill has always been known for his commitment to the poor and this is no more evident than in his drive to eradicate homelessness. As the name sake of Father Bill’s Place, and its chief fund-raiser, he has made great strides in the fight to the homelessness.

In the years since Father Bill allowed homeless men to sleep in the basement of the St. John’s School, Father Bill’s Place has become more than just an emergency homeless shelter and has led the way in providing housing to those in need.

As John Yawzinski, Father Bill’s Place Executive Director noted, “Father Bill’s Place now has more units of housing than emergency shelter beds.”

Father Bill has worked tirelessly to make a difference in the South Shore Community, and he truly has succeeded in that. Mayor William Phelan pointed out, “Father Bill is one of the city’s greatest assets.”

Father Bill takes the accolades in stride. For 55 years he has had a simple mission, to take care of the poor, and at 80 years young, he shows no signs of slowing down.

Moss Will Shorten Life of Roof

Q. I have a huge butt-nut tree that completely blocks out all sun on the north side of my roof. I assume that is what caused all the moss that grows in between the shingles. First, will the moss hurt the roof, and if so, how do I get rid of it? — Carol S.

A. Moss grows where there is little direct sunlight, and it can do extensive damage to a roof if not kept under control. On some types of roofs, such as those with wood shingles or heavy tiles, moss takes hold in the deeper cracks and crevices and is rarely completely eradicated. Asphalt shingles do not hold up well once moss gets underneath them. If the roof is cleaned regularly and preventive measures are taken, the shingles will hold out much longer.

Clean the shingles of all roof types by first brushing away surface moss. Use a bristle brush attached to a pole (available at home improvement stores), and either stand on a ladder and reach up, or climb onto a non-mossy spot of the roof (always wear a safety harness if working on the roof, and have a partner with you). Brush downward, not upward, to dislodge the material and prevent it being shoved underneath abutting shingles.

Apply a nontoxic roof cleaner to the affected area. Oxygen bleach (not chlorine bleach) is one recommended product to kill moss and algae on wood or asphalt roofs. Rinse thoroughly, protecting any plants below by covering them with a tarp.

To prevent the problem from recurring, you must create an unfriendly environment for moss. First, have a professional tree specialist come and thin out the branches of your butt-nut tree, to allow more sunlight to filter through (this has some added benefits — improving the health of the tree and lessening the chance that it will topple onto your house in a wind-storm).

Second, apply thin copper or zinc strips (about 3-4 inches wide, available from roofing suppliers) near the top of the roof, sliding one edge under a row of shingles and tacking into place. These metals discourage plant life from taking hold (and you thought copper roofs were just decorative).

Tips For How To Protect Against Potential Scams

Thinking About Home Improvement?

By THOMAS F. WILLIAMS, Esq.

With spring fast approaching, many home-owners are eager to get out and tackle long awaited home projects. When problems arise, however, the creation of a "dream house" can become a costly nightmare.

Home improvements can be a substantial investment; it is important to do your homework before taking such a big step. Homeowners should be actively involved in every step of the project and be aware of their legal rights as consumers.

Here are a few considerations for homeowners in order to avoid potential problems:

Choose the Right Contractor. According to Massachusetts state law, most contractors and subcontractors who perform home improvements on owner-occupied homes must be registered with the state. First, verify registration by asking to see your contractor's state-issued Registration Certificate. You can also check with the Board of Building Regulations and Standards, Home Improvement Contractor Registration Program (617-727-7532) to verify registration. Also, look for the six-digit registration number that contractors are required to display on all home improvement advertising, contracts and building permits.

Ask for References. Find out about a contractor's recent projects and ask to contact former clients familiar with the contractor's performance and business practices. It's also a good idea to ask to see samples/pictures of former projects.

Get Estimates. Get written bids or estimates from at least two or three contractors including detailed job specifications, materials, labor, time line, and the total charges for the work. Note: Under Massachusetts law, a contractor cannot collect more than 1/3 of the total charge for the project in advance.

Check Complaint History. Contact the Attorney General's Office and small claims court to see if any complaints have been filed against your contractor due to incomplete or substandard work, or any other deceptive practices.

Execute a Complete Contract. Put everything in writing! Never enter into any home improvement project without a contract that includes a contractor's contact information and identification, a complete description of the work to be performed, total price, payment schedule, registration notice, three-day cancellation notice, permit notice, and a blank space notice, which warns against signing contracts or forms that are incomplete or are missing required provisions.

When things do go wrong due to defective work, contract disputes, cost overruns, or other issues that cannot be resolved with your contractor, there are several options available to you. You may contact the Attorney General's Office at 617-727-2200 for a mediator referral or find a private mediator. You can also call the State Arbitration Program at 617-973-8787. The Home Improvement Guaranty Fund provides potential eligibility for relief in situations where a homeowner obtains an arbitration award or a court judgment against a registered home improvement contractor.

Improving your home should be a rewarding experience, not a costly headache. Remember: do your homework, be informed, and know your rights and remedies.

Neighborhood Housing Services Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore in conjunction with Brockton Housing Partnership will host a first-time homebuyer workshop Monday, March 5 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, March 10 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The workshop will be held at Remax Landmark,

630 Park St., Stoughton (Brockton). Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

The workshop is open to residents of Massachusetts, regardless of income.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend the educational workshop. At the workshop, participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender.

Topics covered will include mortgage options, legal aspects of the home-buying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from real estate professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

Cost is $15 per person. Call (617) 770-2227 ext. 31.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

House Numbers

You know where you live. But do we? There's actually a state law, as well as a local ordinance, requiring street numbers on your home. Do you have them?

Should the fire department have to respond to your home for an emergency, let's say someone's in medical distress. It's 3 a.m. and no one is on the front stoop to assure our immediate identification of your home or to inform us of the nature of the emergency. There's no front porch light on differentiating your home from the others, suggesting, "this is the house!" Valuable moments might be lost if your house number isn't clearly identifiable.

I'm surprised at how often this need is taken for granted. We attempt to keep every home in conformity with the ordinance when they're inspected for smoke and carbon monoxide detectors upon sale of that home. We insist that house numbers be clearly visible and of a contrasting color against the house.

I'm not certain whether I've conveyed the following story before. Years ago as a lieutenant, I was returning to the station, standing on the apron with another firefighter. We did so to stop traffic while the apparatus was backing into the station. We had just returned from an incident where an individual required medical attention. If I recall correctly, the individual was experiencing symptoms of a heart attack. Upon arrival at that incident, we would have entered the home, immediately attempting to accumulate as much information about the person's condition, obtain what history we could including a list of medications. When the ambulance arrived, we would have conveyed that information to their personnel, and eventually assist them in transferring the patient to the ambulance. The patient would then be transported to the hospital, while we returned to the fire station.

While walking into the station with this firefighter, he said to me that he wished we could have done more at that incident. I was touched by his genuine concern and the apparent empathy for the distress of the individual and their family. I responded by saying, that this could be our 2000th medical assist, it might very well been that family's first experience with an emergency for a loved one. I added we didn't just administer oxygen, or monitor their condition, we brought the assurance that comes with professional assistance, bringing some control to a chaotic and frightening situation.

It is our earnest desire to respond and offer quality care and attention at an incident, and time can be a determining factor in success or failure. We're here to help, we want to be there for you if need be, help us help you, make certain the numerical address of your home is clearly visible with contrasting numbers in front of your home.

7 Deadly Mistakes That Will Cost You Thousands When You Sell Your Home

Quincy - A new report has just been released which reveals 7 costly mistakes that most homeowners make when selling their home, and a 9 Step System that can help you sell your home fast and for the most amount of money.

This industry report shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling homes have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. The fact of the matter is that fully three quarters of homesellers don't get what they want for their home and become disillusioned and - worse - financially disadvantaged when they put their home on the market.

As this report uncovers, most homesellers make 7 deadly mistakes that will cost them literally thousands of dollars. The good news is that each and every one of these mistakes is entirely preventable.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "The 9 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and For Top Dollar."

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report, call 1-800-611-0351 and enter ID #1000. You can call anytime, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

'Guns 'n Hoses' Hockey Game To Benefit Jamie Cochrane Fund

The first "Guns 'n Hoses" ice hockey game featuring teams from the Quincy Police and Quincy Fire Departments will be held Saturday, March 10 at 6:40 p.m. at the Quincy Youth Arena. Tickets are $10. Proceeds will benefit the Jamie Cochrane (QPD) Scholarship Fund.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, Feb. 10, at approximately 5 a.m., Officer Chris McDermott was dispatched to Furnace Brook Parkway to quell a loud party on the third floor of the apartment building. The officer learned from tenants that the large group arrived an hour earlier and a loud party started.

The officer could hear the party from the first floor, so he advised the third floor tenant holding the party to quiet the group. The male assured the officer he would take care of the problem.

Officer McDermott descended the steps, waited a few minutes, then heard the laughing and music get louder. After the noise failed to abate, he returned to the apartment and listened outside the door, hearing someone say, "Nocigarettes—let's roll a joint (marijuana)."

LT. DAN MINTON

The officer knocked on the door, identified himself and asked for the door to be opened. Someone inside responded, "I know my rights. I don't have to open the door."

A second request was made to open the door, but the male retorted, "I'm not opening the door."

Sgt. Michael O'Shea arrived on scene, heard the disturbance and was updated by Officer McDermott about the possible drug use. Inside the apartment complex, other tenants were now coming to the hallway, which is important to show in court that others were disturbed for a charge of "disturbing the peace."

Attempts were made to contact the landlord to get a key to the door to no avail.

The group began singing songs and the disturbance grew worse. Officers Patrick Folan and John McGovern arrived on scene and observed a male leave the apartment. When the officers approached the male, he went into a combative stance. He was told to place his hands behind his back but failed to heed the warning. The officers grabbed him and a struggle ensued.

The suspect (#1) was handcuffed, led away to a cruiser and charged with "disorderly conduct."

The occupants of the apartment were looking out and yelling obscenities at the police. One partygoer opened the apartment door and the officers attempted to push the door open, but it was quickly closed. The officers heard furniture being moved against the door, creating a barricade.

Officer Klier, who was working in the station, received a telephone call from the apartment. The caller said the officers should leave because they were not going to open the door, adding the officers "should take off their guns and badges so we can settle this like men."

Inside the apartment, people were asking to be let out, but were told they could not leave because the police would come in. Soon after, an argument inside led to a scuffle, with furniture being knocked over.

Sgt. O'Shea directed his officers to enter the apartment for the safety of those inside. Officer Daniel Church kicked the door in and other officers assisted in pushing the barricade away.

Once inside, the officers found several individuals with bottles in their hands. Several orders were given to drop the bottles (potential weapons/projectiles) and get on the ground, but not all complied. Due to the number of partygoers and their failure to follow directions, the officers sprayed the offenders with OC (form of mace) and then placed them under arrest after a brief struggle.

From within the apartment, five people were arrested and charged with "disturbing the peace" and "resisting arrest."

The renter of the apartment was also charged with "procuring alcohol to a minor."

Names were taken of those inside the apartment who complied with the order to get down on the floor and they will be summonsed into court for "disturbing the peace."

Nice work!

Exercising With a Hernia

Q. My husband was recently diagnosed with a hernia in his abdominal area and is awaiting surgery. I know a little about this condition, but not as it pertains to exercise. We exercise together three times a week and want to continue. Should we?

A. The Cleveland Clinic estimates that 5 million Americans develop hernias each year. A hernia is described as a weakness or defect in the lining of the abdominal or pelvic wall. The inner layers of the abdomen (intestines) push through the weakened area, causing a protrusion, bulge or tear. This can occur at birth or develop later in life due to a natural weakness in the abdominal wall or from excessive strain. A hernia can affect both men and women of all ages.

While 80 percent of hernias occur in the groin (inguinal) or upper thigh/groin (femoral) area, they can also be located at the navel (umbilical) or at the site of a previous incision (incisional). Symptoms of a hernia can include visible protrusion at the site of the hernia, pain while lifting and a dull sensation and vague feeling of fullness.

Once a hernia has occurred it will not reverse, just get bigger. Research suggests that almost all hernias need surgery before the condition worsens, potentially resulting in the strangulation of the intestines, causing an emergency situation.

The first course of action is to discuss this issue with your husband's physician, who can inform you of the risks of exercising with a hernia and the precautions your husband will have to take. Ask as many questions as necessary and be sure to tell your doctor that your husband is active and wants to exercise.

There are potential risks of developing a hernia if you have a family history, cystic fibrosis, undescended testicles, excess weight, chronic cough, constipation or enlarged prostate. Be aware of these risks and see your doctor if any symptoms arise.

Although it is too late for your husband, the good news is that there are steps you can take to help prevent a hernia, or to keep a hernia from reoccurring once repaired. Maintain a healthy weight, use proper lifting techniques with everyday activities, avoid being constipated by practicing healthy eating habits, drink plenty of fluids and, of course, exercise regularly.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfw@heartsinc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

New Treatment Helps Age-Related Eye Disease

(NU) - More than 15 million American seniors live with some form of an eye disease called age-related macular degeneration, or AMD.

There are two forms of AMD, dry and wet. While all cases begin as the dry form, it is the wet form that accounts for about 90 percent of all AMD-related blindness.

Wet AMD can result in sudden and severe central vision loss and worsens rapidly without treatment.

However, Lucentis, a new drug, has the potential to improve or maintain vision in many patients with wet AMD. In key clinical trials, nearly all patients (95 percent) treated with Lucentis maintained their vision, and more than one-third of those patients' vision improved by three lines or more on the study eye chart.

Many of the more than 1.7 million people with the advanced form of this disease have lost the ability to perform daily activities or even recognize family and friends. AMD is one of the leading causes of central vision loss in people over 55.

Lucentis was recently approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and is now available to physicians, primarily retina specialists, or specially trained ophthalmologists, to treat patients with wet AMD.

"During the Lucentis study program I could tell things were gradually getting better," said Ted Johnson, a patient with wet AMD. "The distortion was gradually disappearing; the blips and the horizontal lines disappeared; the gray area in the center of my vision was getting lighter."

Lucentis is a prescription medication given by injection into the eye. Lucentis has been associated with detached retina and serious eye infection and should not be used in patients who have an infection in or around the eye.

Increases in eye pressure have been seen within one hour of an injection. Serious side effects included inflammation inside the eye, and rarely, effects related to the injection procedure, such as cataracts. If your eye becomes red, sensitive to light, painful, or has a change in vision, you should seek immediate care from your eye doctor.

For full prescribing information, talk to your doctor or call 866-LUCENTIS (866-582-3684) or visit www.LUCENTIS.com.

Go Red Luncheon Raises Over $400,000 Against Heart Disease

QUINCY RESIDENT Kathy O'Brien (seen left in photo), marketing services manager for Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, with Advertising Manager Kerith Kristel-Smith and Colleen Devlin, advertising coordinator at the 2007 Boston Go Red For Women Luncheon. The three served on a team of dedicated employees from Harvard Pilgrim to support and promote the luncheon, which welcomed nearly 600 donors, volunteers, and local celebrities to unite against heart disease in women. The luncheon featured a fashion show, styled by Boston designer Denise Hajjar, which showed attendees how to "Go Red in Your Own Fashion."

Life Line Screenings At Park, Recreation Dept.

Residents in the Quincy area can be screened to reduce their risk of having a stroke when Life Line Screening is at the Quincy Park and Recreation Department, 1 Merrymount Parkway, on Thursday, March 15. Appointments will begin at 10 a.m.

A stroke, also known as a "brain attack," is ranked as the third leading killer in the world, and the second among women. Through preventative screenings, the risk of having a stroke can be greatly reduced.

Screenings are fast, painless and low cost. They involved the use of ultrasound technology, and scan for potential health problems related to: blocked arteries which can lead to a stroke, aortic aneurysms which can lead to a ruptured aorta, and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which are a strong predictor of heart disease.

Also offered for men and women is a bone density screening to access their risk for osteoporosis.

All four screenings take less than an hour to complete. A complete vascular screening package, including the stroke/carotid artery, abdominal aortic aneurysm and ankle brachial index (hardening of the arteries) screenings is $109. Sign-up for the complete vascular package; includes the osteoporosis screening and pay only $129.

For more information regarding the screenings or to schedule an appointment, call 1-877-237-1287 or visit www.lifelinescreening.com. Pre-registration is required.

DENTISTRY for the 21st century

ORAL EXAM

One important aspect of an oral exam involves checking for cancer. The death rate for oral cancer is higher than that of cervical cancer, Hodgkin's disease, or cancer of the brain, liver, testes, kidney, or skin (malignant melanoma). Because the disease is often detected too late, only about half the 30,000 Americans diagnosed with the disease each year survived more than five years after diagnosis. However, with early detection, the percentage increases significantly. Thus, patients should seek prompt attention for any persistent sore or lesion in the mouth that does not heal within a few days. Other warning signs include color changes, mouth or lip tenderness or numbness, and the appearance of a tough or crusty spot in the mouth.

Your dentist has the skills and tools to ensure that early signs of cancer and pre-cancerous conditions are identified. You and your dentist can fight and win the battle against oral cancer. Please call 617-479-6220 for an evaluation today. We provide a wide array of services including preventive dentistry, crowns & bridges, dentures, and cosmetic and restorative dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Oral health is a long-term commitment we share with each patient. We provide excellent clinical skills and state of the art equipment. Our goal is to help you preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.QuincyDentist.com.

P.S. Oral cancer occurs twice as often in men as women, and it has typically been seen in adults over the age of 45.

North Quincy Claims Share Of League Crown

By SEAN BRENNAN

In a game that had serious ramifications for both teams, the North Quincy Red Raiders squeaked out a 52-51 victory over the Quincy Presidents last Friday night in front of a packed East Gym at Quincy High School.

For the Red Raiders (16-4, 11-2 in the Atlantic Coast League), their second win over Quincy this season brought with it not only city bragging rights, but also a share of the Atlantic Coast League North Division title. The Red Raiders finished the season as co-champions with Whitman-Hanson High School.

Under the direction of head coach Doug MacFarlane, the Red Raiders earned the school's first division title as a member of the Atlantic Coast League. North Quincy and MacFarlane had previously won league championships in 2001 and 2002 when the team was part of the Old Colony League. The championship also represents MacFarlane's third league title in his nine-year history as coach of North Quincy. He is retiring at the conclusion of the season.

For the Presidents (10-9, 7-6 in the ACL) and head coach Jeff Bretsch, the loss, though painful, can be used as motivation heading the team's final regular season game against Hanover and hopefully into next week's Division 2 South State Tournament.

"The last six games there has been a razor-thin margin of victory and defeat for our team," Bretsch said early this week. "If not for a tough loss to Marshfield and this one-point loss to North Quincy, we could be riding into the post-season on a six-game winning streak. Either way, we are peaking at just the right moment. Last year at this time, we entered the tournament in a similar position (scheduled to be between a 8 and 14 seed) and advanced farther than any Quincy team in school history."

The game itself started out with Quincy jumping out to a 9-0 lead on Senior Night and over the course of the game, Quincy increased their lead to 14 points. Leading the charge for Quincy was junior captain Meagan Tobin. Tobin scored a season-high 24 points and led Quincy to a 27-13 lead late in the first half, but the Red Raiders are not co-champions for nothing.

North Quincy responded to the early deficit with a 7-0 scoring run to close out the first half. The score at the break was 27-20 Quincy.

"That scoring run to end the first half was huge for North Quincy," Bretsch said. "But the thing that hurt us and helped them was just how good they were throughout the game from the free throw line. They are not known for their free throw percentage, but the were almost perfect last Friday."

North Quincy finished the first half with a low field goal percentage, but the Raiders were a perfect 12 for 12 from the line. Their success carried over to the second half and when all was said and done, North Quincy finished the game 20-of-26 from the charity stripe.

Down by seven to start the second half, the Red Raiders outscored the Presidents 32-24 in the final 20 minutes of play, and the team did so with its two of its best players sitting on the bench with foul trouble.

Rebecca Goreham and Siobhan Carnell who were forced to sit for most of the second half, watched as Quincy went on an 8-2 run with just over six minutes to play. At the 4:30 mark and with a league title slipping away, MacFarlane put Goreham (one of the ACL's best players) back on the court and the move quickly paid dividends.

Goreham and Lauren Stille snapped the Presidents' momentum with an unorthodox 6-point play that changed the outcome of the rest of the game.

"The turning point was that 6-point play," Bretsch said. "They scored in transition and got fouled. But the free throw was missed; they grabbed the rebound, scored and got fouled again. They missed again but once again scored on the rebound. Six points in one possession down the court turned the game around."

North Quincy would take the lead for the first time at the three-minute mark on a full-court pass from Goreham to Stille. The breakaway basket gave the Raiders a 46-45 lead.

Quincy responded with a quick bucket to make the score 47-46, but a Catherine O'Connell layup with 2:20 remaining put North ahead for good, 48-47.

For the Red Raiders, Goreham finished the game with eight points and 16 rebounds. Megan Therrien and Katherine O'Connell each scored eight points and Stille lead all North scorers with 13 points (9-of-11 from the line).

Senior captain Bridhid Kyle's nine points and junior captain Meagan Tobin's game-high 24 points led the Presidents.

"Give the kids the credit, I never expected to be 11-2 in the league," MacFarlane said. "I thought we would be good, competitive, but I did not know we would be this good."

Any thoughts of another matchup between the two city teams this year will have to be put on hold until next season, as the two schools play in different divisions come tournament time.

When the tournament pairings come out at the end of the week, the North Quincy Red Raiders are sure to be one of the top four seeds in Division 1 South bracket. At 16-4, North will host a first-round game next week.

Quincy, who plays in the Division 2 South tournament, will also have to wait until Friday to see where they will play their first-round game. With a 10-9 record (before the Hanover game), the Presidents are going to be the road team throughout the post-season, but as the team proved last season, it can win on the road in the post-season.

Kiwanis Hockey Tourney Underway At Youth Arena

The 34th annual Quincy Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament got underway Monday at Quincy Youth Arena with a four-game slate.

This year's tournament includes teams from the Bantam, Pee Wee, Mite and Squirt divisions and includes Massachusetts teams from Quincy, Braintree, Milton, Brockton, Hingham, Weymouth, Hyde Park and Lynnfield. There are also teams from Rhode Island (Cranston and Woonsocket) and Canada.

The Bantam Semi-Finals will be held on Sunday morning beginning at 9 a.m. and the weeklong tournament will culminate Sunday afternoon with four championship games: Pee Wees, 11:30 a.m.; Squirts, 1 p.m.; Mites, 2:30 p.m.; and Bantams, 4 p.m.

For a complete schedule of game times call the Quincy Youth Arena at 617-479-8371.

Academic All-American Honors For Bonnie Hirtle

Curry College junior Bonnie Hirtle of Quincy has earned ESPN The Magazine Academic All-American honors for the second year in a row. This year, Hirtle earned a spot on the 2007 College Division First Team All-District 1 Woman's Basketball squad after garnering Second Team All-District 1 honors in 2006.

Hirtle was the only Commonwealth Coast Conference (CCC) player to be named to an Academic All-American team this year. Hirtle is majoring in business management with a concentration in accounting. She currently maintains a 3.90 grade-point average.

On the court this season, Hirtle has played and started in all 21 games for the including: points scored (333), points per game (15.9), field goals made (122), field goals attempted (261), field goal percentage (46.7) and 3-point field goal percentage (33.8). Hirtle is also averaging 4.9 rebounds per game, 1.3 assists per game and 2.8 steals per game.

The Academic All-American Teams program honors 816 male and female student-athletes annually who have succeeded at the highest level on the playing field and in the classroom.

The College Division is comprised of Division II, Division III and NAIA institutions. District 1 includes schools in New England, New York State and five Canadian Atlantic Provinces.

Presidents Impressive In Win Over Red Raiders

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy boys' basketball team ended their regular season on a high note last Friday night with an impressive 60-38 victory over rival North Quincy High School.

The Presidents (14-4, 11-3 in the Atlantic Coast League) got their home fans warmed up on a cold night with a 17-5 scoring run to begin the game. Sophomore sensation Doug Scott, who led all scorers with 25 points, scored seven of his team's 17 points to start the game.

North Quincy's (5-13, 4-9 in the ACL) season ended on a sour note. One year removed from winning 17 games and a share of the league title, the Red Raiders fell short of their goal of reaching the post-season tournament. With the loss to Quincy, North Quincy finished the rivalry part of their schedule at a disappointing 0-2.

The Presidents' defense shutdown the Red Raiders' offense all night long and with a relentless man-to-man defense, Quincy kept the pressure on North Quincy for the full 40 minutes of play.

"Our defense created everything for us offensively," Quincy head coach Bob Fisher said. "Our guards (Scott, Paris Amado and Sean Boyd) pressured their guards effectively, and Steve Connolly did a great job of containing their big man, Marcellus Lee. We did a good job shooting, on the boards and penetration, but our defense was the key to everything."

With the score 32-19 at the break, the Red Raiders, behind seniors Matt Edgerly and Terrell Johnson made a game of it with just over 13 minutes to play in regulation. A two-point bucket from Johnson put the score at 37-

26, but Scott countered the Raiders' run with two big-time three-pointers (Quincy had eight 3's on the night) to put the Presidents back in the driver's seat.

At the eight minute mark, the Red Raiders were in danger of falling even farther behind, but Matt Edgerly responded with a quick four points to push the score to 45-32 and the Red Raiders once again found themselves in a dog-fight.

But in the back and forth final minutes of play, Quincy senior Matt Boyle quickly scored five points to push the margin back up to double-digit points. After Edgerly scored to run the score to 47-

HIGH-TECH SAFETY FEATURES

Among the newest high-tech safety features found on vehicles is lane departure warning. This safety system automatically warns drivers who wander out of their lanes, which may be an indication of falling asleep at the wheel. Another new safety system, blind-spot detection, senses vehicles in the driver's blind spot when using the turn signal. It alerts the driver by sounding an alarm, setting off a vibration, or flashing a light to make the driver aware of a potential hazard. In addition, there are a wide variety of systems that handle emergency situations such as unlocking doors, turning on lighting, and shutting off fuel when airbags deploy. Most of these features are expected to be cheaper and more widely available in time.

Technological advances in automotive safety features are becoming more prevalent in new vehicles over time. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, your safety is one of our chief concerns, and we strive to ensure your safety in every service we perform. We invite you to come see us at 258 Quincy Ave., East Braintree, where we can discuss safety innovations. Questions? Call 781-843-1550. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 10am-6pm.

HINT: Adaptive cruise control reacts to a potential collision when cruise control is in use by braking hard and tightening the seatbelts automatically.

Presidents Defeat Raiders

34. Scott ended any hope North Quincy had with another three-pointer at the 3:42 mark. The Red Raiders would not get any closer the rest of the way.

"Scott is a special player," Fisher added. "Whenever you need a big basket, he can go get you one-and he is still just a sophomore. Matt Boyle also gave us a spark late in the game when we needed one."

North Quincy struggled all game long on the boards and with trying to handle the defensive pressure that Quincy kept on bringing. The Raiders found themselves in a big hole early and playing catch-up against the 14-4 Presidents proved to be too much for this young team to overcome.

"The second shots that we allowed them right out of the gate killed us," North Quincy head coach Kevin Barrett said. "Steve Connolly set the tone for them early with his aggressive play. You can't afford to dig yourselves a hole like we did against a quality team that plays defense like Quincy. They disrupt everything you are trying to do."

The leading scorers in the game for Quincy were Doug Scott with 25 points, Steve Connolly (12 points) and Sean Boyd (6 points). The leading scorers for the Red Raiders were Matt Edgerly (12 points), Terrell Johnson (11 points) and Marcellus Lee (eight points).

"I'm very proud of the way Matt Edgerly came out and matched Quincy's intensity," Barrett said. "I'm also proud that our kids battled back several times. They never threw the towel in."

Both Quincy and North Quincy participated in the Vin Moscardelli Tournament this past Monday and Tuesday and both will be playing in the Quincy High School Holiday Tournament today (2/21).

For the Presidents, their next step is to sit back and wait for their post-season seed to come out this Friday. At 14-4 and 11-3 in league play, Quincy is one of six teams in Division 2 to have 14 plus victories on the season. They can expect to be one of the top six teams in D2 and most likely will be hosting a first-round game early next week.

WINTER CAR CARE

Choosing A Motor Oil: Facts Over Friction

(NAPS) - Selecting the right motor oil is often a quick and inexpensive way to improve your car's performance and reliability. However, finding the type of oil that's best for your particular car can sometimes be a challenge. Here are some tips:

Two components determine how well motor oil will perform in your car. One factor is the base oil and the other is the combination of chemicals-or additives-that are added to the base oil.

The two primary types of base oil are mineral and synthetic. Mineral oils are by-products of refined crude oil. Synthetic oils are man-made compounds whose molecules are all the same size and shape; consequently, synthetic oil has less friction and performs significantly better than mineral oils.

Chemicals must be added to give motor oil the characteristics needed to do its job. Typical additives include detergents to reduce the formation of residue, defoamants to deter absorption of air, anti-wear agents, antioxidants and others.

Some of the biggest technological advances in lubrication are to be found in chemical additives. Most of these breakthroughs have been developed by companies that specialize in high-performance lubricants, as opposed to major oil companies whose primary focus is refining and selling crude oil by-products, such as gasoline.

For example, a company called Royal Purple has developed lubricants that are said to outperform both leading mineral oils and other synthetics. Their oil is designed to reduce engine wear, increase horsepower and torque, and save gas and emissions.

For many, the easiest way to select motor oil is to follow the good, better, best model: GOOD: Mineral-based, or regular, motor oils are the cheapest and most widely available oils. They typically use standard additive packages that provide minimal levels of performance and protection.

BETTER: Synthetic, or man-made, motor oils are more expensive, tend to have a longer service life and offer some improvements in protection. They typically use the same additive packages found in mineral-based oils.

BEST: High-performance synthetic motor oils are the most technologically advanced oils. Although they often outperform mineral-based or synthetic motor oils, they are about the same price as standard synthetic motor oil. Usually, they are only available through auto parts stores and select oil change centers.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's nice to know that you're finally getting due credit for your efforts. You should also know that new opportunities will follow. A family member brings important news.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Any uncertainty that begins to cloud an impending decision could signal a need to re-examine your reasons for wanting to take on this commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You benefit from taking time out of your currently hectic schedule to do more contemplation or meditation. This will help re-energize you, both in body and soul.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Nursing hurt feelings can zap the energies of even the usually self-confident Sea Goat. Best advice: Move forward. Success is the best balm for a painful ego.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A display of temperament surprises you, as well as those around you. It could be all that pressure you're under. Consider letting someone help you see it through.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Some things don't seem to be working out as you'd hoped. Don't fret. Instead, take some time out to reassess your plans and see where changes could be made.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy traveling and meeting people. You are especially good with children and would make an excellent teacher.

SCOTT D. WARR

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"I was summoned by my country, whose voice I can never hear but with veneration and love." These words were spoken on April 30, 1789, by a tall, tired man. After losing many battles, but winning a war, he had hoped to retire from public life to his beautiful and beloved home on the banks of the Potomac.

His countrymen, though, needed George Washington in peace even more than in war. They called upon him to lead their infant republic forward.

How Washington responded to the summons is described in his Inaugural Address. In an eloquent passage, the first President of the United States gave his countrymen of that day and of our own day a responsibility which should always guide Americans: "The preservation of the sacred fire of liberty and the destiny of the republican model of government are justly considered as deeply and finally staked on the experiment entrusted to the hands of the American people."

We Americans have preserved this heritage; its future rests in our hands today, as surely as when the Father of His Country gave his trust to those who heard him on April 30, 1789. We, like Washington, are summoned by our country to preserve "the sacred fire of liberty." ...

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

Oh most beautiful flower of the Carmel! Fruit of the vine, spirit of the Virgin! Blessed Mother of the Son of God! Immaculate Virgin! Assist me in my needs. O, Star of the Sea! Virgin of Luján! O, Virgin of the Mother of Mary! Mother of God! Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. O, Mary, intercede without ceasing for me who trust in you. Amen. (This prayer is from the book "The Most Holy Virgin Mary" by St. Louis de Montfort, O.P., 18th century. It is a beautiful and powerful prayer for the Virgin Mary.)

SOUTH COASTAL BANK recently presented the Houghs Neck Community Center in Quincy a $500 grant from its C.A.R.E.S. community giving program. The program helps local non-profit groups promote and encourage a sense of community, achievement, responsibility and excellence in children through exposure to the arts. Tony Drew, assistant branch manager at South Coastal Bank, presents the grant to Cynthia Antonopoulos, director of the Houghs Neck Community Center. Lending a hand are some of the children who participate in the program the bank supported. The Houghs Neck Community Center provides educational, cultural and social activities and programs for the residents of Houghs Neck. The money funded a youth art exploration program in which participants worked on a variety of projects, including mask-making, sculpting and furniture-painting. For more information on the bank's C.A.R.E.S. program, call Susan Lincoln at 781-681-7206.

ture. The foundation is of Quincy granite, the upper part North Easton granite and the trimming Longmeadow brownstone.

Thomas Crane's son, Albert, donated $20,000 in 1880 for the library as a memorial to his father who had grown up in Quincy Point and at age 26 went off to New York and made a fortune in the stone business.

Albert Crane wanted the library to be named "The Quincy Free Public Library." But Charles Francis Adams, Jr., the keynote speaker at the dedication May 30, 1882 and chairman of the Board of Trustees pressed for "The Thomas Crane Public Library." And, won out.

Three additions have been built since, the latest in 2001 that cost $18 million. The Richardson building now houses the reference section of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

HUD Gives $700,000 Grant For Quincy YouthBuild Program

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has given a $700,000 grant to be used to continue a successful YouthBuild Program and the Training Resources of America (TRA).

The grant, announced by HUD Regional Director Taylor Caswell is part of a $45.5 million in funding nationwide to help thousands of low-income young people who didn't finish high school return to school to earn their diplomas, while training them for a future in the construction trades and other careers.

The Training Resources of America also help to renovate homes for low-income families.

"The positive impact of the YouthBuild Program to the literacy and skill sets of these young people cannot be overstated," said Congressman William Delahunt. "The program has made the difference in so many lives, helping future generations of at-risk youth earn their diplomas, learn a trade and become productive members of our community."

With the funding, TRA will partner with the Quincy Housing Authority and the City of Quincy to provide education and life skills training to area teenagers while renovating 32 public housing buildings.

Four Residents On Xaverian Honor Roll

Xaverian Brothers High School lists four Quincy residents on its second quarter honor roll.

They are:

Tax Tips From the Experts. The Dreaded Alternative Minimum Tax

Federal income tax rules have always been complicated, now the Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT). Originally designed to exact a minimum amount of tax from the very rich, the AMT is beginning to reach mainstream taxpayers. Ironically, many of the tax breaks given to taxpayers in tax reforms recently enacted by Congress will trigger greater AMT liability.

Here's how the AMT works: Beginning with taxable income computed for the regular federal income tax, you add back to that taxable income many of the important deductions you claimed to arrive at regular taxable income. For example, state and local income and real property taxes, miscellaneous itemized deductions, certain mortgage interest and personal exemptions all may need to be added back as well as certain types of business and investment deductions and exclusions. After all adjustments and so-called preferences have been made, you subtract an exemption amount that varies with your income level. Then what remains is taxed at 26% or 28% to arrive at a figure called the tentative minimum tax. If this tentative minimum tax is higher than your regular income tax, you must pay the excess as AMT tax.

The items that put the average taxpayer at risk for AMT are a large number of dependents, high state and local taxes, and large employee business expenses. Using the equity in your home to finance college tuition or other expenses not related to home improvements can trigger the AMT.

The point is if you think that you are a candidate AMT you should carefully analyze planned transactions with your tax advisor to ensure that your transaction will deliver the expected tax result.

Chinese Lunar New Year Festival 'Great Success'

It's been a happening in Chinese communities everywhere since 2000 BC and Sunday the Lunar New Year Festival happened in North Quincy High School.

The 19th annual celebration in Quincy was the best of them all, according to John Brothers, executive director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI).

"The festival was a great success due to the 150 volunteers who made it happen," he said.

"We had about 4,000 in attendance and everyone commented on the improvements from last year. We had many more things for families to do."

One of the most popular of the new additions was a reading corner where elders entertained the young by reading popular stories.

"Our new storytelling event, co-sponsored by South Shore Day Care and South Shore Elder Services, was a huge hit," said Brothers.

"Many of the families enjoyed storytelling in both English and Chinese. The children's area was full of children for face-painting, crafts and cotton candy.

"Twenty high school students dressed in costumes including traditional Chinese outfits and cartoon characters like Sponge Bob Square Pant entertained and posed for pictures.

"As a result, many families stayed the entire day (10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.) because of the number of things going on."

Traditionally, the Lunar New Year Festival is a holiday where families come together to visit, share meals and present gifts of "lucky" red envelopes to children.

The color red is particularly significant since it was the color red along with firecrackers that routed the man-eating beast Nian which led to the first New Year celebration.

Performances of Asian music and dance featured the work of local Asian artists and local restaurants served Asian food, including both Chinese and Japanese.

Some 50 vendors and sponsors held their activities in the school gym and the Sunshine Travel and Mohegan Sun booths entertained at least 1,000 people at their lucky wheel.

The 19th festival celebrated the Year of the Boar or Pig, the 12th and last year of the Chinese zodiac cycle.

Next year they'll begin all over again with the Year of the Rat.

Council Wants Full Coverage Day And Night

Police Union Head Blasts Chief Over Cruiser Patrols

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Some 50 uniformed police officers applauded their union president at City Hall Monday night when he blasted Police Chief Robert Crowley for cutting neighborhood cruiser patrols and accused him of lying to council members in December.

Union president Bruce Tait described the 13 patrol sectors in the city and noted that, "in theory, each of the 13 patrol sectors is staffed by a uniformed patrol officer in a marked police cruiser. It is the officers staffing these 13 patrol sectors who are the backbone of the police department."

Tait then said that Chief Crowley stated at a December council meeting that staffing never falls below "11 sector cars on a shift. That was a blatant lie."

Crowley was not at the meeting. The Sun was unable to reach him Tuesday for direct comment but police spokesman Captain John Dougan said Crowley would have no comment.

According to Tait, in the Summer of 2006, "from June 1 to August 31," which is typically our busiest time of the year, there were 27 instances of a patrol shift being staffed with less than 11 cars, in some instances 9 or even 8.

In addition, Tait charged that there have been 13 instances of "less than 11 cars staffed on a shift" since Chief Crowley addressed the council on December 18.

Tait also reminded the councillors that "in the two fiscal years that Robert Crowley has been police chief, he has returned $1.8 million in unspent money to the city treasury. We're going on dangerous call alone and we're getting hurt because of understaffing, and the chief has returned nearly two million dollars in the last two years. That is simply disgusting."

Chief Crowley was not at Monday's meeting but David Murphy, Director of Operations for the mayor, pointed out that Quincy was recently recognized as the second safest city in the state. Murphy said that statistics used were from the FBI crime reports.

Union, Council Urge Faulty Fire Hydrants Be Marked

One city resident wants to put black shrouds over all non-working fire hydrants in the city. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin F. Coughlin told the Public Safety Committee Monday night.

While the vision of black shrouds all over the city drew chuckles from some councillors and spectators at the meeting, Coughlin warned, "It's no joke. This is a very serious issue."

There just may be too many black shrouds, according to firefighters' union president Ernest Armenti, who told committee members that faulty hydrants have to be marked.

For firefighters, faulty or non-working hydrants mean there is no water, low water or little pressure ready when needed to battle a blaze.

Some problem hydrants may be located on some of the city's oldest water mains which are scheduled for repair this summer. In between times, though, firefighters need to know which hydrants work.

"These are things that have to be addressed," Armenti said, adding, "We need a way of marking these hydrants. I can't remember the 100 non-working hydrants in the city."

The issue is so serious that Committee Chairman Jay Davis said that he will schedule a meeting in faulty hydrants with the Department of Public Works as soon as possible. Davis suggested that even spray-painting faulty hydrants could be a short-time solution.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond suggested workers just put an "X" on hydrants that are not operable. Raymond provided a list of

Quincy Receives $1.8 M, Praise For Homeless Fight

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

People and pride filled the City Council Chamber at City Hall last week as Mayor William Phelan announced receipt of more than $1.8 million in federal grant funds for the homeless and the feds heaped praise on Quincy's handling of its homeless.

The $1,885,091 grant to the Quincy-Weymouth Continuum of Care under the 2006 McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Program will help the two communities provide more housing and services to the homeless.

Quincy also was awarded $92,024 in Emergency Shelter Grant funding.

Philip Mangano, executive director of the U.S. Interagency Council on Homelessness, said he has visited Quincy many times in the past and each time there has been more good news regarding the issue of homelessness.

"And I know there is a lot more to come," he said. "After 20 years of managing the crisis, the intent here in Quincy, as it is around our country, is to begin ending the disgrace of homelessness.

"And you've created a 10-year plan that affirms the best values in your community and ultimately it affirms that you will be tolerant of homeless people but intolerant of homelessness."

He said he often encourages other cities to make pilgrimages to Quincy to see the good work that's being done here.

Mayor Phelan said the 10-year plan to end chronic homelessness, adopted in June, 2005, calls for an increase of 10-12 units per year in permanent, supportive housing. One year into implementation, the city is four years ahead of schedule.

The Quincy-Weymouth Continuum will administer nine projects dedicated to providing support to the chronically homeless and to families that are homeless due to domestic violence.

One of them, known as Teresa's Project, will receive 24 per cent or $452,796 of the McKinney-Vento grant over three years to provide housing for 13 chronically homeless men and women, the heaviest users of emergency services.

The chronically homeless population in Quincy has decreased by an estimated 19 per cent over the past year, a drop attributed in part to two other programs like Teresa's Project.

The Quincy-Weymouth Board on Homelessness counted 142 chronically homeless people living in the streets or emergency shelters in Quincy in January, 2004. A year later the figure was 96, last year 78, and this year an all-time low of 63.

"The new project will bring the number of our permanent supportive housing units for the chronically homeless up to 46," said Phelan. "We've nearly tripled the number of our permanent supportive housing units in just two years and that's a great feat."

Teresa's Project is sponsored by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, better known as Father Bill's Place. A beaming Father Bill McCarthy, just turned 80 with 55 years in the priesthood, was also at the announcement.

"Since its inception in 1984 as an emergency shelter, Father Bill's Place has grown into a highly visible, well-respected social service agency, assisting those in need in the South Shore community," said Phelan. "Father Bill's Place remains steadfast in its mission because, as their motto says, 'The homeless are not that far from home.'"

"Just three years ago, Father Bill's Place was sheltering up to 140 people each night and now they're down to 105. That illustrates that our 10-year plan to end chronic homelessness is working.

The Interfaith Sheltering Coalition will sponsor a second program, the two-year Empowerment Project, which will provide $398,939 in leasing and supportive service funding for eight families that are homeless due to domestic violence.

A total of $958,356 of the McKinney-Vento Grant will go to Shelter Plus Care Projects, six in number, for one-year renewal tenant-based rental assistance projects, subsidizing 45 homeless individuals and 19 homeless families.

And $75,000 will be used for the Homeless Management Information System for a data collection system to track the homeless in Quincy and Weymouth and forecast future trends.

Since 1996, the Quincy Weymouth Continuum has secured $12,605,086 in McKinney-Vento funding for programs to serve the homeless population.

LICENSE BOARD BRIEFS

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Granted an extension of hours of operation to 2 a.m. at the Boston Marriott Hotel, 1000 Marriott Drive to accommodate a benefit for the Ahern Family Charitable Foundation. Margaret Garruto is manager. The board asked that all alcoholic beverages be supplied by the hotel.

•Granted a permit to Bettyanne Lang of Interfaith Social Services, 105 Adams St. to hold the 33rd annual 10k walk Sunday April 22 at 1 p.m. The walk will begin and end at Bethany Congregational Church, Spear St.

•Granted a Keno License to George Pepdjonovic, owner of the Mystic Lounge, 536 Washington St.

•Granted a transfer of the retail wine and beer and common victualer license held by Seaside Market, Inc., 333 Victory Rd., to Pamela M. Amelang, doing business as Latitude 42° Provisions. Hours of operation will be from 5:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. seven days a week. The board told Amelang that no alcohol can be purchased before 8 a.m.

•Granted a one day beer and wine license to Teri Angelis of St. Ann's School for a fashion show and tea Saturday, March 24 from 7 to 10:30 p.m.

•Granted a Keno License to Dianne Newton, manager of the Southside Tavern, 73-75 Liberty St.

Nearly 200 Inspections In First Two Months

Code Enforcement Officer In Fast Start

The city's new Code Enforcement Officer Kenneth Burke has conducted almost 200 inspections in his first two months on the job.

The post was created by Mayor William Phelan to help crack down on violations of many of the "quality of life" ordinances that can lead to the deterioration of neighborhoods. A cornerstone of the "Neighborhoods First" initiative, the Code Enforcement Officer is involved in issues such as storage of junk, improper disposal of garbage or trash, overgrowth of yards, abandoned vehicles, illegal parking, sign and banners, dumpsters, noise, and illegal lodging houses.

"With any new position, I expect that the first few months would be busy, but Ken has done an exceptional job in getting out into our neighborhoods and enforcing our City ordinances," said Phelan. "Without someone specifically assigned to these types of enforcement actions, neighborhoods can take a wrong turn in an irreversible direction. The Code Enforcement Officer is helping keep our neighborhoods strong."

The following is a list of investigations conducted by Burke from Dec. 1 through Feb. 8:

- Illegal Parking/Abandoned Cars - 22.
- Violations of Sign Ordinance - 8.
- Garbage/Junk/Dumpster Complaints - 56.
- Illegal Apartments - 8.
- Illegal Rooming House - 6.

Illegal Business in Residential area - 5.

Excess paving complaint - 13.

Work Conditions complaints/dust/permit - 50.

Illegal drainage - 10.

Noise complaint - 6.

Other - 7.

Of the 191 cases, 178 were either immediately resolved or ticketed and since closed. There are seven cases that the Code Enforcement Officer has taken to court and there are six cases still currently open (works in progress).

Residents who have a complaint may reach Burke at (617) 376-1238. The new office is located at 55 Sea St.

"Ken has grasped his responsibilities quickly and is doing a great job," said Jay Duca, Director of Inspectional Services. "He understands his role in keeping our neighborhoods on the right track. He mixes the right amount of education and enforcement when he is on the job."

21-Day License Suspension 'On Hold' After Appeal

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The 21-day suspension for delivering alcohol to minors at home issued to Franklin Beer & Wine, 55 Franklin St. by the License Board will be "put on hold" said Chairman Joseph Shea at Tuesday's License Board meeting.

Shea said they have appealed to the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission (ABCC).

The board also voted to ask the ABCC to revoke the delivery of alcohol license.

Shea said that the License Board does not issue delivery of alcohol licenses, which is done by the ABCC.

A report on the violation was made by Lt. Peter Turowski, liquor agent for the License Board who observed the delivery of beer and cigarettes to a 16 year old with no adults present. He said it had become a "pattern" of Franklin Beer & Wine not to ask for an ID.

The License Board cannot take any action until the ABCC sets a date for a hear-

Looking for an investment that's guaranteed to grow?

What's the main problem with stock market investments and mutual funds? Simple - you just can't be sure that your money will grow. In fact, you can't even be sure that your principal won't shrink. And while no one would deny that market-based investments should at least be considered as part of a diversified investment plan, sometimes you have money you don't want to put at risk in any way. Maybe it's money you're going to need soon. Maybe it's your IRA or Roth IRA. Maybe you're a conservative saver who simply wants investments that are guaranteed to grow. We understand. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On March 1, 1692, in Salem, Mass., three women are charged with the illegal practice of witchcraft. More than 150 people were later accused of Satanic practices and the resulting trials ended in the execution of 19 innocent women and men.

• On March 3, 1863, during the Civil War, the U.S. Congress passes a conscription act that produces the first wartime draft of U.S. citizens in American history. Exemptions from the draft could be bought for $300 or by finding a substitute draftee.

• On March 2, 1925, shield-shaped highway number markers are used for the first time. Later, interstate highway numbering was improved by the odd-even demarcation that distinguishes between north-south and east-west travel.

• On March 4, 1944, Louis "Lepke" Buchalter, the head of Murder, Inc., is executed at Sing Sing Prison. He was the leader of the country's largest crime syndicate until members of his killing squad turned into witnesses for the government. Lepke was able to order final hits on his betrayers from jail before his execution.

• On Feb. 26, 1957, the final radio episode of "Dragonet" airs. Producer and writer Jack Webb tried to make the show as realistic as possible, using real police files. "Only the names have been changed to protect the innocent."

• On Feb. 27, 1964, the Italian government announces that it is accepting suggestions on how to save the renowned Leaning Tower of Pisa from collapse. In 1999, engineers finally began a slow process of soil extraction under the north side, removing no more than a gallon or two a day. Within six months, the 17-foot tilt had been reduced by an inch.

• On Feb. 28, 1982, the J. Paul Getty Museum becomes the world's most richly endowed museum when it receives a $1.2 billion bequest left to it by the late J. Paul Getty. During the six years Getty's will was in dispute, the original $700 million bequest to the museum nearly doubled.

He's Not Running

Everybody seems to be running for President these days.

Hillary Clinton, Barack Obama, Mitt Romney, Rudy Guiliani, John Edwards, Joe Biden, John McCain, with Newt Gingrich looking like he's waiting in the wings and, who knows, maybe even Al Gore who's hot right now with that Oscar.

But, not me.

Even though my grandson, Jay, 11, wants me to run. That's pretty flattering.

But no, I'm not running. For one reason I'm not qualified. Although sometimes I wonder about the one we have now.

But if I had been in the White House in March, 2003 we sure as hell wouldn't be in Iraq.

But no, I don't think I'll ever run for President. And if someone ever asks me to be his (or her) vice presidential running mate, I'm going to pass that one up, too.

It's not so much that I know I couldn't win. It's that other thing, I've mentioned it before.

I just don't want anyone digging into my background. If I were a candidate for president or vice president, the press would start nosing around.

They probably would ask: "Have you ever committed a crime?"

And I would reply, naturally, "No, never!"

Then they would get to digging deeper and soon some little thing I had long forgotten might pop up and prove a little embarrassing.

Like, when I was a kid in Quincy Point, I did something I shouldn't have.

I sneaked into the Lincoln Theater. Not once, but several times. But the other kids were doing the same thing and you had to be pretty good at it to get away with it.

If you lived in Quincy Point or North Weymouth in the 1930s or early 1940s, the Lincoln Theater on Washington Street near Chubbuck Street was your social center.

The Saturday matinee was a must if you were a kid. For a dime you got a bargain: a serial chapter, Gene Autry, a feature, the Three Stooges or maybe Popeye. A dime wasn't always easy to come by but the Saturday show was usually packed.

Tickets were bought at the little box office out front and the gathering crowd would wait for the doors to open.

As soon as they swung open, there would be a great surge forward. Those of us without tickets would lose ourselves in the middle of the crowd and be carried in with the tide.

The ushers were too busy taking tickets, to notice the ones without tickets just walk by.

If my memory isn't too hazy, I think of kids like Nello DiGravio, Mike Ameen and Johnny Omar in that crowd with me.

And I think that may have been where I first met John Gillis. But knowing John he may have had a ticket.

Those of us who did sneak in didn't do it just to save a dime. It was a challenge. A dare. And we made it a science.

I don't remember anyone getting caught.

But now as I look back on it, I wonder if the owner, Alcide Beaumier, instructed the ushers to be lenient.

He was a very generous, community minded person and knew that we kids didn't have much. He even put on a free Christmas vacation week movie party. And sent each kid home with a box of candy.

The sneaking in came pretty much to an end when the Lincoln started having Saturday matinee drawings for prizes. We made sure to buy tickets to be eligible to win.

We kept one half of the ticket and the other half went into a barrel from which they were drawn.

One Saturday, I won a baseball bat and ball. I was the envy of every kid in the theater.

But when I got back to my seat and the lights went out as the show resumed, I dropped the ball and it rolled down to the stage area. Someone scooped it.

I was heartbroken. So were my friends.

Until I timidly went to Beaumier's office after the show and told him I lost the ball. He kindly gave me another one.

And there was joy in Quincy Point.

We used the bat and ball in a field off Des Moines Road the whole summer, taping the ball when the cover came off and the bat handle when it got cracked. The ball got bigger and the bat heavier as the summer went by.

The Lincoln, like other neighborhood theaters is gone. It was demolished in 1980. Gone but not forgotten.

But that was the scene of one of my crimes. So I'm not running for president or vice president.

The nosey press would probably also find out that I led raids on a tomato garden on Winter Street. And then expanded my operation, targeting that beautiful Macintosh apple tree in East Braintree.

Then there was the time that I...

No. Forget that.

I've told you too much already.

Parent Advisory Council To Sponsor Talk On Dyslexia At QHS April 28

The Quincy Parent Advisory Council (QPAC) to Special Education will sponsor a lecture on dyslexia Saturday, April 28 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Quincy High School auditorium, Coddington St.

Professor and researcher Dr. Maryanne Wolf will discuss fluency and the reading brain. The lecture is for parents and teachers who want to learn more about language-based learning disabilities such as dyslexia and dysgraphia.

Wolf is the director of the Center for Reading and Language Research at Tufts University. She has published hundreds of articles on reading and learning disabilities.

Wolf's presentation will emphasize the importance of fluency research for reading but will also suggest its importance for other academic areas such as mathematics and writing.

Admission is $25 per person due at registration. To register for the lecture, call Linda Perry at (617) 773-1385 or send an e-mail to Lperry0181@comcast.net.

The QPAC to Special Education is a formally organized group of parents and other interested persons committed to the best possible services for children with special needs.

The Parent Advisory Council meets monthly. Meetings provide information, insights, techniques and encouragement through informal discussions and special presentations.

For more information on QPAC, contact Toni-Marie Mahoney, QPAC president, at 617-773-4558 or Andrea White, vice president, at QPACSPED@comcast.net.

Scenes From Yesterday

IN 1913 THIS was a boarding house for men who worked in the numerous factories in the Norfolk Downs area. In this old real photo postcard view the house was on the corner of Hancock Street and Glover Avenue. Later it was moved to a lot just behind it on the corner of Pierce Street when the Sacred Heart Church was built on this site. The house then served as the parish house for the church until the present stone rectory was built.

At that time this house was moved again to its present location across the street on the opposite corner of Pierce Street. To the left of the porch can be seen some of the Derringer's old greenhouses that were on the site of the present Sacred Heart School. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Broken Windows Lead To Other Problems

Policing isn't just about catching crooks; it's about building a safer community.

City Councillor Kevin Coughlin's recent letter about broken windows in a closed warehouse in his district led to a discussion over the so-called "broken window theory." I fully believe in it.

Coughlin is right. Small disorders lead to bigger disorders. The idea is to catch neighborhood dysfunction quickly before it spreads like a disease.

Coughlin's piece concerned broken windows in an actual building, but the term "broken window" is a metaphor for all kinds of neighborhood disorders from actual broken windows, to abandoned shopping carts, to trash lining the streets, to lawns being paved over for use as parking spaces and finally lawlessness.

Community policing and the "broken windows" of our communities are a job for all of us. The police can do their job, but we the citizens must also do ours.

Little problems that are fixable too often grow into larger problems much more difficult to solve.

Bottom line, our communities are our business. It is up to us. We can't pass the responsibility off on the police and blame them when things go wrong. Complex issues need many voices working together.

Our neighborhoods in the end, will be as good as we want them or as bad as we allow them.

Do We Need Another Beer, Wine Store In Quincy?

Do we really need another store in the City of Quincy selling beer and wine?

West Elm Variety is trying again to go before the Licensing Board to produce a wine and malt beverage package store license. The city is giving these licenses out like candy.

The license they issued last year in Squantum has resulted in minors purchasing beer. There are enough places to buy beer and wine within a 1/2-mile radius of West Elm Variety.

If you go up Billings there are three places not counting the bars and restaurants. We want to keep our neighborhoods free of this kind of influence on our children. The licensing board needs to say NO.

Hospital Director Says He Is Not Resigning

By FRANK McCAULEY

The Board of Managers at the Quincy Hospital wants to meet with City Manager William J. Deegan, Jr. to iron out differences between him and the director, according to a statement by Chairman August E. Settimelli.

Hospital Director Dr. Ensio K.F. Ronka said, "I haven't resigned and I have no intention of resigning."

This Week
1950
57 Years Ago

According to Settimelli's statement, the board spent considerable time discussing Deegan's letter published last week, in which he said that he expected the hospital director to maintain the institution on an improved basis on funds provided by the city council.

Members of the board, in addition to the chairman include Mrs. Esther C. Boling, George W. Arbuckle, William J. Martin and J. Brooks Keyes.

FIREMAN SEEK RAISE TO POLICE LEVEL, POLICE ASK UNIFORM REIMBURSEMENT

Quincy firefighters asked for a $200 raise to bring their pay on par with police salaries and police asked the city to buy their uniforms, during the finance session when the council considered the budgets of the two departments. Captain William Curtin represented the firefighters while Patrolman Kenneth Poulin spoke for the police.

Both Finance Committee Chairman Frank N. Orcutt and Mayor Thomas S. Burgin explained that it has been agreed upon to omit these requests from the budget and to give them serious consideration after the final budget figures had been worked out. At that time the Council will be in a better position to determine whether or not the requests of the two uniformed departments can be met, he said.

RUNAWAY FIRE TRUCK HALTED BY ALERT PAIR AT HOUGHS NECK BLAZE

An alert policeman and a bystander stopped a runaway fire truck as it rolled down a hill at a Houghs Neck fire, saving some 30 persons, most of them children, from injury. Patrolman James A. D. MacKay and James E. Cotter of 209 Winthrop St., Houghs Neck, leaped aboard and braked the rolling apparatus before it reached the onlookers who had gathered to watch firemen battle the blaze that routed six persons and an infant. The fire truck, Hose Two, attached to the Houghs Neck Station, slipped its brakes while parked on a steep, icy incline on Winthrop St., opposite 28 Parkhurst St., the home of Lloyd Dunn, 26, and the scene of the fire.

QUINCY-ISM

The Quincy Visiting Nurses Association, a Red Feather Service, will start a new series of Mothers classes at its 1245 Hancock St. office. Five weekly lectures on the growth and care of a baby will be given by Mrs. Ruth Dobbie, association director.

Mrs. Herbert A. Mann, president of the Quincy Woman's Club, cut the 45th anniversary cake while charter members Mrs. James H. Slade, Mrs. Charles Wilson and Miss Almira Simmons looked on. Former city assessor Larry Antonelli and Mrs. Antonelli welcomed a son, Larry Antonelli, Jr., born at Quincy City Hospital. The Antonellis reside at 40 Hughes St., South Quincy. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Adams, 32 Calumet St., Wollaston, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary at a surprise party at their home. The Adamses have a daughter, Claire, a son, Arthur L. Adams, Jr., and a grandson. Granite Chevrolet, 540 Southern Artery, was advertising "Top Quality Cars and Trucks At Bargainville Prices." Pres Hobson, Patriot Ledger sports editor, reports that Quincy pitcher Dick Donovan is hoping to win a spot on the Boston Braves pitching rotation for the 1950 season. New Cub Pack 27 sponsored by the North Quincy Knights of Columbus held its first meeting under the leadership of John B. Newcomb. A large gathering of parents watched as 30 cubs were awarded their bobcat pins. The Finnish Temperance Society of West Quincy was planning a "Repair Fair." Laura Takki, Sr., was honorary chairman of the event which will seek to raise funds for the recently remodeling of the society hall. City Auditor Alexander Smith was honored by his former associates in the accounting department at the Fore River Shipyard prior to assuming his duties as Quincy City Auditor.

Ursula's Corn Pudding

It was a day with the cousins when some of us gathered at our cousin's Gen's beautifully decorated home on a Sunday in December.

Some of us brought a favorite recipe to go with her delicious buffet ranging from Lasagna, meatballs, sausages and on and on.

One of the dishes that were brought in was a corn pudding by my cousin Ursula.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

CORN PUDDING

- 1 egg (beaten)
- 2 cups milk (Ursula used skim)
- 4 tablespoons flour

- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 packages frozen corn niblets (or 2 cans)
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine

In a bowl mix the egg, milk, flour, sugar and salt until blended. Stir in the corn.

Pour in a slightly greased shallow casserole dish. Dot the top with the butter or margarine.

Bake for 15 minutes. Then stir and bake for another 20 minutes or until inserted knife comes out clean.

It's a delicious side dish and so easy to prepare. We cut it into squares to serve.

Purim To Be Celebrated At Hingham-Quincy Chabad

The Hingham Quincy Chabad, 1356 Quincy Shore Drive, will celebrate Purim Sunday, March 4, at 10:30 a.m. giving gifts to the poor and food gifts to friends and reading the Purim story.

Purim, the Jewish Feast of Lots, celebrates the heroism of Queen Esther, whose wisdom, beauty and guile delivered the Jews in Persia from a massacre plotted by King Haman.

It is customary for children to dress in costume on this day.

The celebration at the Chabad will include a megillah reading with simultaneous slide show, arts and crafts for the kids, make your own Hammentashen, a Purim masquerade, music and coffee, pastries, bagels and lox.

The suggested donation is $5 for a child, $10 for an adult and $17 for a family.

RSVP to shevybronstein@gmail.com or call 617-850-5935.

Free Movie For Seniors

The Council on Aging will show the movie of the month free to seniors on the third Thursday of every month at the River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St.

The movie is provided by West Coast Video at no charge. Refreshments will be provided. Call Ann at 617-376-1506 to reserve a seat.

Oscar Nominated Picture At Thomas Crane Library

"Little Miss Sunshine," which was nominated for four Academy Awards, will be the featured film shown free Thursday, March 8, at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

It's the story of pudgy, bespectacled Olive, 7, who seeks the coveted Little Miss Sunshine crown and her dysfunctional family that sets out to help her win it in a beauty pageant. It's rated "R."

Veteran Alan Arkin won an Oscar as the best supporting actor for his role in "Little Miss Sunshine" and the picture itself was nominated for best picture but lost out in the finals.

"The Great Match," the adventurous story of three remote peoples and their efforts to view on television the finals of soccer's World Cup in Japan, will be shown Thursday, March 15, at 7 p.m.

The protagonists in this comedy are a family of Mongolian nomads, a came caravan of Taureg in the Sahara Desert and a group of Indians in the Amazon jungle.

The picture is not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission.

Both programs are free and held at the main library, 40 Washington St. For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

Raggae Beach Party Saturday At Beachcomber

The public is invited to attend the 7th annual "Raggae Beach Party" Saturday, March 3 from 3 to 8 p.m. at the Beachcomber on Quincy Shore Dr. across from Wollaston Beach.

The event is for those aged 21 and older.

This year's featured artist will be Noddaclo, backed by D.J. John "Ras" Kelley.

There will be door prizes and a prize drawing.

Net proceeds will benefit the Habitat for Humanity.

Tickets are $20 at the door and $15 if purchased in advance. Call 781-985-9064.

Course Selection Process At NQHS Starts March 6

The course selection process for the 2007-2008 school year, for current North Quincy High Students in grades 9, 10 and 11 will begin Tuesday, March 6.

Students will be instructed in the process by the Guidance Staff and will have input and recommendations from the academic department heads and their teachers.

The Course Selection Sheets and Course Description Booklets will be sent home with the students. Parents and students are encouraged to work together to make informed choices on the Course Selection Sheets. The booklets are available for viewing on the school's website at:

www.quincypublicschools.com (under academics).

Those with questions about course selection process may call your child's guidance counselor at 617-984-8747. The deadline to return the course selection sheet signed by the student, teachers and parent is Thursday, March 8.

Senior Safety Is Subject At Beechwood Breakfast

Police Lt. Dan Minton of the Crime Prevention Unit will discuss senior safety Wednesday, March 7 at 9 a.m. at the Current Events Breakfast at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St.

Minton, a police officer for 26 years with masters degrees in social work and criminal justice, will discuss such topics as "A Safe Day," "Shopping Safety" and "Scams."

To reserve for the breakfast, call Maryann at 617-471-5712.

Military History Talk At Beechwood On Bay

Military Historian Chuck Fazio will lead two round table discussions of military history planned at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St.

The first will be held Tuesday, March 6, and the second Tuesday, April 3.

Those attending are invited to bring their own lunch. Beverages and desserts will be provided.

Those interested in attending should call Maryann Mahony at 617-471-5712.

Tour Squantum's Secret Treasures

Marie Stamos will lead a free sunset, full moon tour of the "Secret Treasures of Squantum" Saturday, March 3, starting at 4:45 p.m.

Participants in the tour, which is part of the Park Department's Environmental Treasures program, will meet at Stamos and Stamos, 747 East Squantum St.

The walk will explore some of Squantum's history as well as its natural beauty.

For more information, call 617-472-0799.

MR. and MRS. DONALD ROBINSON

Mr., Mrs. Donald Robinson Celebrate 65th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Donald K. Robinson of Quincy, celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary on Valentine's Day. They were married at the former Finnish Lutheran Church.

They have lived at their present address for 50 years.

Mrs. Robinson, the former Martha I. Ahola was born and raised in Quincy. She was affiliated with the family bakery, Ted's Bakery in Quincy, and later cafeteria cook-manager at Sterling Jr. High School.

She was also a culinary arts instructor at Quincy Vo-Tech High School and received the first Al Conti Award as South West Person of the Year.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson are active members of the Faith Lutheran Church and Faith Seniors.

Mrs. Robinson is board member of Ward 4 Neighborhood Association, chairperson of Faith Lutheran Church Women, former board member of Quincy Community Action Programs and Quincy Neighborhood Association.

Mr. Robinson was born in Calais, Maine and is a former maintenance-carpenter for the Quincy School Department. He also received the Al Conti Award as South West Person of the Year.

The couple have a daughter Shirley Irene MacDonald of Marshfield; two grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. They are the parents of the late Susan Marie Robinson.

Their family and friends will host a celebration March 18 at the Faith Lutheran Church.

Ward 5 Scholarship Applications Ready

Applications are now available for the Ward 5 Community Association's annual scholarship program for local high school graduates.

Each year the Association raffles off a number of $250 which the students may use to buy books or cover other school-related costs.

Graduating high school seniors who plan to go to college in the fall of 2007 are eligible, provided they or their families are Ward 5 residents and members of the Ward 5 Community Association.

The $10 membership fee may accompany the application.

The applications are available at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools. Students may also send a letter requesting consideration to 132 Phillips St., Quincy 02170.

For additional information, call Nick Puleo at 617-835-1253.

Robert Page Nominated For National Scholarship Program

Robert W. Page III, a Quincy High School senior and member of the Quincy High School National Honor Society, has been nominated to compete in the National Honor Society scholarship sponsored by the National Associate of Secondary School Principals (NASSP).

Frank Santoro, principal at Quincy High School, announced the nomination, which places Page in the national competition. This year, the program will once again award $200,000 in college scholarships. As a new feature for the 2007 program, special recognition and additional awards will be presented to state and regional winners, along with the selection of one national recipient who will receive an additional $10,000 award.

"Students nominated for the NHS scholarship not only demonstrate academic excellence, but also excel in the areas of service, leadership, and character", said Rocco Marano, director, NHS.

At Quincy High School, Page has been a member of the Student Council, a member of NHS and involved in several service projects. This fall he plans to attend college to study Civil Engineering.

200 Guests Celebrate Year Of The Pig In School Auditorium

Sacred Heart School Lunar New Year Family Celebration

Sacred Heart School in North Quincy recently held its fifth annual Lunar New Year Family Celebration with more than 200 guests celebrating the Year of the Pig in the school auditorium.

The event began with an opening blessing by Fr. John O'Brien, pastor of Sacred Heart Church.

Sue Forbes (on behalf of herself and co-Chairperson Debbie Riordan) welcomed everyone to the celebration and thanked the parents who organized the event, the many faculty members who were present and the parents of all the students for their continuing support.

Saritha Venkat then welcomed the guests with a traditional Hindu song of praise.

Children and adults performed dances and songs from a variety of cultures.

Xiao Hong Hua (Little Red Flower) Chinese Folk Dance Troupe performed the Xin Nian Hao (Celebrating the New Year) dance. These very small dancers (ages 4 and up) did a fabulous job demonstrating the joy that comes from a new year.

Karthikeyan Arumugan, a second grader at Sacred Heart, and his younger sister Varshini sang an Indian carnatic song. This is the classical music of Southern India. It is one of the world's oldest and richest musical traditions.

Karthik and Varshini sang a song of praise to the god of knowledge. Their clear voices and their ability to sing without accompaniment was much appreciated by the audience.

Deepika Babu and Varsha Balaji also performed an Indian carnatic song.

Later in the evening, Jhanvi Chandar and Praharsitha Allam sang an Indian bhajan song. The bhajan has a special place in Indian society. Most bhajans were written between the 14th through 17th centuries. They are songs sung to praise God.

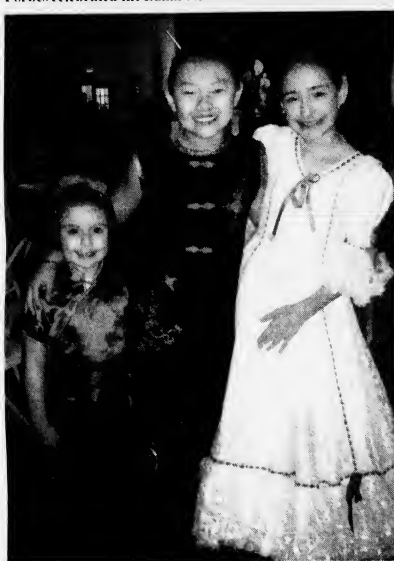

One of the most anticipated part of the event is to watch the many traditional dances that students perform on the stage. Dancers from The Boston Korean Dance School looked fabulous in their yellow and pink robes.

The Boston Korean Dance School is dedicated to teaching students about the Korean Culture. Amanda Lee, a fifth grader at Sacred Heart, has been attending a Korean school on Saturday for seven years. Korean Dance School students performed several traditional dances with fans and drums.

The Iskwelhang Pilipino (Filipino School) is where students learn the Filipino language and culture, including folk dancing. Christy Stuver, a fifth grader at Sacred Heart has been a student at this school five years. The students performed a Tinikling (Bamboo) dance, where dancers step quickly between two horizontal bamboo poles that are rhythmically hit together.

All of the folk dances they performed were lively and fun. Their performance was received with great applause.

Sofie Forbes, a first grader at Sacred Heart performed two improvisational dances, one to a song called Two Butterflies and a second to a song that translates to "Happy New Year." She attends The Dance Studio of Braintree and she has also studied at the Chu Ling Dance Academy.

In addition to the entertaining dance performances, Tai Chi students from XinXing (New Star)

Tai Chi troupe demonstrated the 24 forms of Tai Chi and gave an impressive Tai Chi Kung Fu Fan performance.

Jenny Young, age 12, played the zheng, a stringed instrument that is plucked. She played "The Evening Song of a Fishing Boat." Helen Young, who is 9 years old, played another stringed instrument, the dulcimer. Both girls gave wonderful performances, demonstrating the wide range of musical styles encompassed by traditional Chinese music.

The entertainment portion of the event concluded with a fashion show. Students, parents and guests were invited to show off traditional clothing from all over the world.

and Olivia Raneri, who is 4, modeled the traditional Chinese Qipao (pronounced chi-pow). Hayley Forbes (a fifth grader at Sacred Heart) modeled a contemporary Chinese dress.

Christy Stuver and Avigail Deking modeled Filipino attire, Amanda Lee wore a beautiful Korean Hanbok and Nicole Coloma wore a stunning white lace Peruvian Waltzing dress.

The Kurta, a tunic and pants outfit worn by males in India was modeled by Ashwin Babu, Matthew Brandi and Karthikeyan Arumugan. Colorful Indian silk skirts were modeled by Sreesha and Varsha Balaji, Varshini Arumugan, Jhanvi Chandar and Praharsitha Allam. The ever elegant Indian sari was modeled by Saritha Venkat, Mathangi Rk and Amanda Brandi. Grace Kelliher (a kindergarten student), Sue Forbes and Deepika Babu wore the Indian Punjabi Dress, also known as Salwar Kameez.

Charlotte Kelliher, who at two was the youngest child in the fashion show, modeled an Indian party frock and drew widespread cheers for her efforts. The stage at Sacred Heart looked lovely with a dazzling array of gowns and tunics modeled by the students, parents, families and friends.

Union Head Urges Faulty Fire Hydrants Be Marked

that we called "an unprecedented number of hydrants either inoperable or in immediate need of repair."

Arienti and Fire Chief Tim Pettinelli addressed the committee on a number of issues raised by the union in past weeks. Among the issues was the return of Rescue 1 to service and the question of manning with new recruits or overtime.

Arienti suggested that the current firefighters could provide the needed manpower and suggested that overtime designation be changed to "shift coverage."

7 Deadly Mistakes That Will Cost You Thousands When You Sell Your Home

Quincy A new report has just been released which reveals 7 costly mistakes that most homeowners make when selling their home, and a 9 Step System that can help you sell your home fast and for the most amount of money.

This industry report shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling homes have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. The fact of the matter is that fully three quarters of homesellers don't get what they want for their home and become disillusioned and - worse - financially disadvantaged when they put their home on the market.

As this report uncovers, most homesellers make 7 deadly mistakes that will cost them literally thousands of dollars. The good news is that each and every one of these mistakes is entirely preventable.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "The 9 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and For Top Dollar."

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report, call 1-800-611-0351 and enter ID #1000. You can call anytime, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Koch Draws Volunteers, Names Ward Captains

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch announces his campaign recently completed a citywide organizational drive that attracted nearly 400 volunteers and enlisted grass-roots coordinators in all six wards.

"I truly believe we've tapped into something special out there," said Koch. "To be this far along after such a short time is a great sign that there's a real groundswell of energy in our city for new, respectful leadership, a positive vision for our future and a renewed sense of community centered on working together."

Since resigning his job as head of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments last month to run for mayor, Koch has held organizational meetings in every ward, motivating volunteers and detailing plans for a major grass-roots offensive in coming months.

Koch named a team of captains to oversee outreach efforts in wards, precincts and individual neighborhoods around the city. Named ward captains were: Mike Coffey, Ward 6; Michelle Lydon, Ward 5; Bill Spain and Gail Callahan, Ward 4; Nick Verenis and Linda Bowes, Ward 3; Rosemary Nolan and James Papile, Ward 2; and Jack Nigro, Ward 1.

"The goal is to have somebody working for the campaign on every street in the city, and I think we're going to get there," said Nigro, who is also the campaign's chairman. "One of the best parts of the campaign so far is the fact that if you read down the list of volunteers and people who have committed to helping Tom, you'll really find some of the best people in the city. These are people who love the city, care about its future, and know that we can do better."

The campaign hosted its first fund-raiser Wednesday night at the Neighborhood Club, an event campaign Treasurer Jim Fatseas hoped would raise at least $50,000.

"We're not going to be able to match our opponent dollar for dollar", Koch said, but what we don't have in cash, we're going to make up for in the energy of our volunteers and the honesty of our message."

At organizational meetings, coffee hours, and through visits to the campaign's website, nearly 400 people have volunteered to join the campaign, Koch said. He said anyone wanting to volunteer, or even just pledge their support, should visit www.kochforquincy.com or call 617-472-1306.

Peter Racicot Elected Quincy 2000 Chairman-President

The Quincy 2000 Collaborative Board of Directors recently elected Peter Racicot, Vice President of Business Development at Fallon Ambulance, as President and Chairman.

The board advanced members of the Executive Committee.

"As Chairman, I am excited to continue the mission of Quincy 2000," Racicot said. "I hope to continue the strong partnership we have with the city administration, and continue to work with our board members and many volunteers in strengthening our existing economic development programs, and provide new and innovative projects that will help ensure Quincy remains the economic engine of the South Shore."

The board acknowledged the dedicated service of its past Chairman, Sean Galvin of Galvin Structures, Inc., who has served on the board for over six years and on the executive committee for the past four years.

"I am pleased to have worked with so many dedicated individuals over the years in continuing our economic development programs and services that have created hundreds of jobs and increased the city's tax base," Galvin said.

As Quincy's Public/Private Partnership for economic development, Quincy 2000 is the city's business resource for new companies seeking to locate in the community and existing companies looking to grow and expand.

"Quincy 2000 provides invaluable services and resources to the business community, as well as to the city's effort to strengthen the commercial tax base through the revitalization of Quincy Center and the continued growth of our many smaller neighborhood business districts", Mayor William Phelan said.

The Board of Directors reflects the balance of public and private participation as the mayor, city council president, planning director sit along side representatives from organized labor, large and small businesses and other city entities in a common cause to carry out the mission of Quincy 2000 Col-

Police Union Head Blasts Chief

After three hours discussing the police issues, City councillors responded by supporting a resolution by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi calling for all 13 cruisers to be on sector patrol 24 hours 7 days a week. As part of the motion, the council also endorsed a study of the long and short-term equipment needs of the department.

Several councillors also urged union officers to begin a dialogue with the police chief to improve department relations and said they would review the materials provided by patrolmen's union president Bruce Tait for the next hearing.

Tait called for Chief Crowley's ouster several times during the City Council Public Safety Committee's three-hour hearing on police issues this week. Each time, his uniformed backup of over four dozen strong rose to their feet, clapping in support.

"We can't trust a word that he says," Tait told the Public Safety Committee, adding, "What we need is a new police chief." Last September, Tait's union voted "no confidence" in Chief Crowley.

For the uniformed officers, the major rub is that Chief Crowley returned the $1.8 million from last year's budget while, at the same time, skipping on manning levels, and, repeatedly, cutting sector coverage from 13 cruisers to ten cars or lower and providing outdated equipment to new recruits.

Tait charged that command officers are hesitant to authorize the necessary overtime for full coverage because they would risk the disapproval of their superiors.

As for morale, Tait claimed that some new recruits are outfitted with 15-year old vests and that litigation is intimidating officers who fear that "even a perceived wrong will cost them the job. It's an awful atmosphere to work under."

The Public Safety Committee headed by Ward 4 Councillor James H. Davis, 3rd, has five members but the police issues drew all city councillors to chambers for this week's hearing.

By the end of the hearing, all of the city's nine councillors either voted or asked to be recorded as approving the resolution supporting the full 13 cruiser coverage on a 24/7 basis as well as a study of the long and short-term equipment needs of the department.

Tait addressed the Public Safety Committee hearing, which originally focused on a six-part resolution introduced by Raymondi. Raymondi cited numerous instances when his own district was not sufficiently covered by cruisers. At the same time, he also questioned the $1.8 million dollars in unused police funds returned to the city last year.

Raymondi's original resolution not only endorsed the full 13 cruiser sector coverage for the city but, also, asked that the chief address morale issues in the department, initiate studies of the department's long and short term needs, training and litigation issues.

According to Raymondi, the police department may be sending even more money back this year. Raymondi cited the department's current expenditures which, he believes, indicate that Chief Crowley is "on line to return $2.2 million."

According to the figures, the current police budget is $19.9 million with $19.4 assigned to personnel and as of January 31st, the department has spent 58% of its budget.

Raymondi said that taxpayers should get the police coverage that they are paying for. "Nothing is more important than to put these officers on the street."

All nine councillors outlined their support of full 13 cruiser sector coverage. At the same time, Ward 6 Councillor Brian F. McNamara, along with Davis and Council President Douglas S. Gutro urged Tait to begin a dialogue with Chief Crowley.

"There's no doubt a very deep rupture in the police department," said McNamara who suggested efforts to build a bridge and create a "climate for change to improve communication."

"This chief ain't going any place," Davis told Tait and suggested, along with Gutro, that union officers find a way to open talks with Chief Crowley. Gutro said all parties should "do it in the same room at the same time...bring some sense of unity and commonality."

Davis set another hearing on the full resolution in 60 days, citing the need to review and verify the issues and charges raised Monday.

MEMA Issues Safety Precautions

The Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) has issued safety precautions to be taken on frozen lakes, rivers and ponds.

"Before we experience a tragedy that is unfortunately too common this time of year, it is important that we remind everyone, particularly children, of the dangers of unsafe ice," said MEMA Acting Director Ken McBride.

"Lakes, ponds, streams and rivers throughout the Commonwealth have begun to freeze over, however, the temperature continues to fluctuate above and below freezing, making ice conditions very uncertain. People may be a bit impatient to venture out on the ice for skating, hockey, ice fishing and other winter sports. We highly recommend the use of recreational skating areas provided by your local communities. It is very important to exercise precaution and common sense."

He said to always check with local police, fire or park department to ensure that safe ice conditions exist. However, due to the uncertainty of ice conditions and the dangers presented, many departments will not endorse the safety of lakes, ponds, streams or rivers. The strength and thickness of ice should be known before any activity takes place.

Ice Safety Tips

•Never Go onto the ice alone. A friend may be able to rescue you or go for help if you fall through the ice.

•Always keep your pets on a leash. If a pet falls through the ice do not attempt to rescue your pet, go for help.

•New ice is usually stronger than old ice. As ice ages, the bond between the crystals weakens, making it decay, even if melting has not occurred.

•Beware of ice covered with snow. Snow can insulate ice and keep it strong, but can also insulate it to keep it from freezing. Snow can also hide cracks, weak and open ice.

•Slush is a danger sign, indicating that ice is no longer freezing from the bottom and can be weak or deteriorating.

•Ice formed over flowing water (rivers or lakes containing a large number of springs) is generally 15% weaker.

•Ice seldom freezes or thaws at a uniform rate. It can be one foot thick in one spot and be only one inch thick 10 feet away.

•Reach-Throw-Go. If a companion falls through the ice and you are unable to reach that person from shore, throw them something (rope, jumper cables, tree branch, etc.). If this does not work, go for help before you also become a victim. Get medical assistance for the victim immediately.

•If you fall in, try not to panic. Turn toward the direction you came from. Once out, remain lying on the ice (do not stand) and roll away from the hole. Crawl back to your tracks, keeping your weight distributed until you return to solid ice.

"By following safety procedures, you can be safe and enjoy the many winter activities offered by the great outdoors," McBride said.

CEO Sees It As Better Alternative To TCU

QMC To Open Long-Term Care Facility March 12

By LAURA GRIFFIN

A lot of people miss the Temporary Care Unit (TCU) at Quincy Medical Center, even the CEO who made the decision to close it.

The TCU handled patients who needed some acute care and weren't quite ready to go home after medical emergencies.

However, Dr. Gary Gibbons, president and CEO of QMC, said this week that the TCU has closed and its replacement, a Long Term Acute Care facility (LCAT), will open March 12 and offered a better alternative for local needs.

As a surgeon, Dr. Gibbons said he prized the easy access that he and other doctors had to the Center's TCU but the unit has been draining funds from the hospital to the tune of $2 million last fiscal year. In addition, other facilities in this area offer some temporary acute care.

Even more important, Dr. Gibbons believes that a long term acute care facility will meet the growing needs of Quincy's elder patients and he said the new company will keep all 64 of the current employees of the TCU.

Under current guidelines, temporary units allow patients a 12 day stay for acute care after operations or medical emergencies while the long term care unit or LCAT cares for acute patients for up to 25 days.

On Monday, Dr. Gibbons outlined the benefits of having an LCAT in Quincy when he addressed the City Council's Environmental and Public Health Committee.

The center, he said, is "building a health care system for Quincy and the surrounding communities" and he is proud of Quincy's progress but he described the center as "quality rich and cash strapped."

Dr. Gibbons noted that the Quincy Medical Center received the highest possible score during its recent accreditation review by the Joint Commission on Accreditation.

One major reason for closing the TCU was the reduction of federal reimbursements, according to Dr. Gibbons, who said the current reimbursement schedule no longer paid for the patients' costs and care.

Under the current plan, the LCAT unit at QMC will be operated by Radius Specialty Care of Boston.

"The one thing we found if we moved quickly we could save every one of these jobs," Dr. Gibbons said, noting that included 54 full time and 14 part-time workers who will retain their union membership.

"We're able to save the work force," Dr. Gibbons said, adding that workers can still switch back to Quincy Medical Center if they choose to leave Radius. They would do that through an opening or bumping an existing position.

Radius also offers a slight financial gain as the firm will be leasing the current TCU space and paying for the use of all hospital equipment, such as x-ray or MRI's.

Dr. Gibbons who has headed the hospital for just over a year was not in charge during its conversion to a private non-profit facility. He noted that city taxpayers contributed $34 million to the center and the state, $12 million.

However, Dr. Gibbons said that the federal government has never come through with its promised $23 million reimbursement. Several councillors questioned the move and sought additional details from Dr. Gibbons.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel G. Raymond asked Dr. Gibbons about the financial state of Radius and questioned whether the firm was "successor to a company that had financial difficulty."

Dr. Gibbons said that Radius has been around five or six years and that the hospital "bond insurers have not questioned" the company's financial health.

Raymond also asked how Radius would be more profitable for the center and Dr. Gibbons said they have signed a five-year lease with a five-year option. As for the long term financial viability of the hospital, Dr. Gibbons said they're working hard but he couldn't predict the future.

"If the government makes further cuts, I'm not sure," Dr. Gibbons said, adding that Quincy Medical Center is using creative strategies to stay afloat while serving a patient base that is 80% Medicare, Medicaid and free care.

Council President Douglas Gutro wanted to know the long-term viability of LCAT's. Dr. Gibbons said that the current reimbursement is adequate but "as soon as something's good they (Medicare/Medicaid) start ratcheting down the reimbursements."

Dr. Gibbons said there are so many changes in medicine and such confusion about health care reform that Quincy Medical Center is planning a symposium for the public in April.

John Hancock Plunge Is On Again Saturday

The oft-postponed John Hancock Birthday Plunge will be held Saturday, March 3, at Mound Street Beach — and that is absolutely, positively, be it in rain, sleet, snow or sunshine.

The event was originally scheduled for Jan. 20, close to Hancock's real birthday of Jan. 23 but postponed until Feb. 17, then postponed again when the ice-covered beach in Quincy Point was ruled unsafe.

Now it's been rescheduled to March 3 at 10 a.m. when the $10 registration fee will go to Interfaith Social Services to help support those in need. Plungers, and even waders, may also be sponsored.

Checks should be made payable to Interfaith Social Services and mailed to Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, c/o Chickie Abdallah, treasurer, 48 Silver St., Quincy 02169.

For more information, call Leo Kelly, chairman, at 617-773-1534.

Beechwood Blood Pressure Clinics

Beechwood on the Bay will offer free blood pressure screenings for Quincy seniors every Thursday from 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon and alternate Fridays from 9 to 11 a.m.

The clinics are provided by Fallon Ambulance and are open to all on a walk-in basis.

For additional information, call Maryann Mahony at 617-471-5712.

FIRE SAFETY

Space Heaters

The other day I picked up a sales pamphlet on unvented propane and oil fueled portable space heaters.

You might have seen them advertised. Some use a 20lb propane cylinder for fuel, while the other typically uses kerosene. Nowhere in that pamphlet was it mentioned that they are not to be used in buildings used for human habitation.

This state, in M.G.L. Chapter 148, Section 25A, mandates that these unvented portable space heaters shall not be installed or used in a "building used in whole or in part for human habitation."

Consequently, we get enough inquiries in this office during this time of year, that some clarification is warranted regarding their use.

Why can't they be used within a habitable confined space? The key word in describing these heaters is unvented. Both the propane and oil fired space heaters we're discussing here produce the same asphyxiant gases such as carbon monoxide and carbon dioxide to a certain extent, that can render an individual incapacitated or dead. Being unvented, and if used inappropriately within a confined, habitable space such as an unheated, enclosed porch or workshop, these asphyxiant gases are left to circulate within the confined space you're attempting to heat. Consequently, the oxygen within the space is consumed by the combustion process of the heater and replaced by the dangers of the asphyxiant gases. They are therefore dangerous if used incorrectly.

We will occasionally give permission to contractors to use such portable heaters at construction sites. Even then we are specific about our requirements for their use. Frequently called salamanders, we allow their use to cure cement when an area is loosely enclosed with non-combustible tarps and ventilation is more than adequate.

Similarly, they can be used within outdoor workspaces when we are assured of adequate ventilation as well. In those instances, they cannot be left unattended while the air quality must be assured or monitored.

If there is any doubt about their safety, they are obviously not permitted, and the contractor must find an alternative means to heat. Fortunately, there are now alternatives that we strongly endorse where the heating units with their combustion exhaust remains outside, and fans blow the hot air into the building through portable hoses. They are approved by independent testing labs and much safer for personnel.

If you must use a space heater in a habitable space such as your home, make certain that it is electric. Look for the UL approval, and place it on a firm surface a minimum of three feet from combustibles. The heater should not be left unattended, it should be kept away from water, and if an extension cord is used, make certain that it is not frayed or faulty, and is appropriate for the electrical load required.

With the rising cost of fossil fuel, space heater use tends to increase. Their use appears to be quite common with seniors as well who are particularly proven to be particularly vulnerable to fire within a home. This fact, and this combination make proper use of space heaters imperative.

AGING AND THE FEET

We know that with each passing year, our body suffers a little more wear and tear. And what supports that body (our feet) sustains our entire weight and helps us get where we're going. Naturally, the feet absorb more than their fair share of aging. Feet get wider and longer over the years from the constant pressure of standing, walking, and other activities. The fat pads under heels and forefeet get thinner. Also, wearing heels higher than two inches can redistribute weight enough to upset the natural alignment of the body. Because feet change so much over the years, it's a good idea to have them measured occasionally to check for any changes in size.

Feet of all ages deserve to be pain-free. We recommend a professional evaluation if you think your feet are either causing pain and discomfort or if they are trying to tell you there is a problem somewhere else in your body. Either way, a podiatrist's diagnosis can be instrumental in the relief of symptoms and eventual recovery. For foot care for all members of your family, from juniors to seniors, call us at 781-986-3688 for an appointment at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Office hours are also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

HINT: Most people have one foot that is larger than the other. When buying shoes, fit them to the larger foot.

Sophie Desbiens Wins Pre-Doctoral Fellowship In Pharmacology/Toxicology

Sophie Desbiens of Quincy, a Ph.D. candidate in Biomedical Engineering at Boston University School of Medicine (BUSM) is one of six Ph.D. students in the nation to win a pre-doctoral fellowship in pharmacology/toxicology from the Pharmacological Research and Manufacturers of America Foundation (PhRMA).

Desbiens, a research assistant in the Department of Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics at BUSM, is studying the regulation of a receptor in the brain, termed the GABA-B receptor. Prior to that, she worked as a research assistant in the Department of Biomedical Engineering at Boston University, characterizing the electrophysiological properties of specific neurons.

Desbiens will use the award to explore regulation of the GABA-B receptor by certain molecules (CREB and estrogen), which influence the changes that occur in the brain following cocaine addiction. These studies will lay the foundation for transcriptional regulation of the different GABA-B receptor components in the nucleus accumbens, hippocampus and neocortex, which are important brain areas for addiction. The ability to control the specific expression of alternative GABA-B receptor components may also provide a novel treatment option for drug addiction.

Desbiens is a member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers and the Society for Neuroscience.

The PhRMA Pharmacology/Toxicology awards aim to support career-development activities of scientists prepared to engage in research that integrates information on molecular or cellular mechanisms of action with information on the effects of an agent observed in an intact organism, either in experimental animal or clinical studies or both.

PhRMA is a non-profit organization established in 1965 to promote public health through scientific and medical research. The primary objective of the Foundation is to expedite the careers of young scientists in training, allowing these individuals to undertake research leading to a Ph.D. dissertation or to conduct a research project in a laboratory or clinic.

Over the past 40 years, the PhRMA Foundation has provided grants and fellowships to more than 2,000 young scientists to further their careers in pharmaceutical research. Due to the high demand for this fellowship, the PhRMA Foundation only accepts one application per academic institution.

Phelan Backs Patrick On Closing Tax Loopholes For Telecommunication Firms

Mayor William Phelan strongly supports the plan of Governor Deval Patrick and Lt. Governor Tim Murray's to close a corporate tax loophole that exempts telecommunication companies from paying property taxes on wires, poles, and other personal property.

The plan was a main component of Patrick's proposed "Municipal Partnership Act."

Phelan estimates that Quincy is currently forced to shift close to $1.56 million annually onto its remaining taxpayers due to the tax loophole.

"Our residential taxpayers would benefit significantly if the telecommunication companies were made to play by the same rules as every other business," said Phelan. "This loophole has shifted an unfair burden onto our remaining taxpayers at the expense of each and every one of us. It needs to change."

Phelan scoffed at the idea that the telecommunication companies would simply pass along the costs to consumers.

"The fact of the matter is that our bills did not go down when they took advantage of the loophole, so how can you justify an increase when the savings adjustment was never credited," added Phelan. "They pocketed the money at the expense of taxpayers in Quincy and throughout the Commonwealth. They should simply be treated just like any other business in our community."

Phelan indicated that he would be writing Quincy's elected state delegation with the hopes of gaining their support for the measure.

"I really enjoy the convenience of living at Linden Ponds."

—Mary Lynch, moved from Quincy

Like many, Mary Lynch had lived in her Quincy house for a long time and was a little hesitant to move to Linden Ponds, a dynamic community on the South Shore. But after taking a closer look, she decided it was the perfect place to live. "I've made some really good friends here," says Mary.

Since moving to Linden Ponds, Mary can now pursue her hobbies without the worries that used to come with owning a house. "I go to some of the exercise classes, and I play dominos and cards—I'm having a great time," says Mary.

You too can start enjoying the care-free Linden Ponds lifestyle.

We're coming to your town! Call now to reserve a seat at our next informative luncheon at The Common Market. We'll also send you a FREE Information Kit.

THIS IS A HAMMER

High Electric Bills Frustrate Homeowner

Q. I need help! We have a 1,750 square-foot house and very high electric bills, despite installing a solar water heater and a solar system to heat the pool. We have replaced almost everything to help with the consumption. All lights are fluorescent, and we put Icynene spray insulation in the attic. The air conditioning unit was replaced but is only a 10 SEER, and I know this does use some electricity.

Maybe you can recommend an electrician to check to see if there is anything that is taking loads that aren't supposed to be there? Our neighbor has a 2,600 square-foot house, and his electric usage is 300 kWh less than ours. We both have four people in the house and both have pools. — Paying Through the Nose in Virginia

A. While I can't recommend a specific electrician, I do recommend that you contact a professional certified by a recognized organization such as Independent Electrical Contractors (www.ieci.org) and licensed to operate in your state. The electrician can do an energy-use survey and check all systems in your home to make sure they are wired up correctly.

Locating the cause of high kilowatt usage can sometimes be very difficult, but you may be on the right track in looking at high-usage systems such as the air conditioner. I experienced a similar kilowatt-usage issue last year that turned out to be a problem with the heating unit. Contact the company that installed your air conditioner (or an independent A/C contractor if necessary) to make sure this unit is working properly and was installed correctly.

Review your power bill for the past year or longer, paying specific attention to the kilowatt-hours used each month. While these numbers tend to jump during very cold or very hot months, look for very big jumps in usage or unusual upward trends. Contact the electric utility about any unusual usage. It can recommend additional steps to take, typically offer a free energy-audit kit, and can assist with paying prohibitively high bills.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homeur2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. © 2007 King Features Synd., Inc.

Know The Risks And How To Avoid Them

Elevated Risks In The Home Associated With Winter Weather

Dealing with hazardous weather conditions can become a routine of sorts during the last weeks of winter; however, life-threatening risks remain high and focusing on safety can prove to be a life-saving decision.

The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) urges the public to continue to be aware of elevated risks associated with winter weather and to take measures to avoid them.

Heating

Home heating remains the second highest cause of fire in the home. NFPA suggests the following for safe heating:

- Maintain a 3 feet (or 1 meter) separation between things that can burn and heating equipment.

- When buying a new space heater, make sure it carries the mark of an independent testing laboratory and is legal for use in your community. (Some communities do not permit portable kerosene heaters, for example.)

- Install your stationary (fixed) space heater according to manufacturer's instructions or applicable codes or better yet, have it installed by a professional.

- Plug your electric-powered space heater into an outlet with sufficient capacity and never into an extension cord.

- Use the proper grade of the proper fuel for your liquid-fueled space heater, and never use gasoline in any heater not approved for gasoline use. Refuel only in a well-ventilated area and when the equipment is cool.

- In your fireplace or wood stove, use only dry, seasoned wood to avoid the build-up of creosote, an oily deposit that easily catches fire and accounts for most chimney fires and the largest share of home heating fires generally. Use only paper or kindling wood, not a flammable liquid, to start the fire. Do not use artificial logs in wood stoves.

- Make sure your fireplace has a sturdy screen to prevent sparks from flying into the room. Allow fireplace and woodstove ashes to cool before disposing in a metal container, which is kept a safe distance from your home.

- Turn off space heaters whenever the room they are in is unoccupied or under circumstances when manufacturer's instructions say they should be turned off.

- Portable space heaters are so easy to knock over in the dark that they should be turned off when you go to bed, but make sure your primary heating equipment for bedrooms is sufficient to avoid risks to residents from severe cold.

- Do not use your oven to heat your home.

- Make sure fuel-burning equipment is vented to the outside, that the venting is kept clear and unobstructed, and that the exit point is properly sealed around the vent, all of which is to make sure deadly carbon monoxide does not build up in the home.

- Inspect all heating equipment annually, and clean as necessary. Test smoke alarms monthly; install a carbon monoxide alarm in a central location outside each sleeping area.

Carbon Monoxide

Carbon monoxide poisoning can be confused with flu symptoms, food poisoning and other illnesses. Some symptoms include shortness of breath, nausea, dizziness, light headedness or headaches.

NFPA suggests the following safety tips to avoid the dangers of carbon monoxide.

- Install carbon monoxide (CO) alarms (listed by an independent testing laboratory) inside your home to provide early warning of accumulating CO. CO alarms should be installed in a central location outside each separate sleeping area. If bedrooms are spaced apart, each area will need a CO alarm.

- Test CO alarms at least once a month and replace alarms according to the manufacturer's instructions.

- CO alarms are not substitutes for smoke alarms. Know the difference between the sound of smoke alarms and CO alarms.

- Have fuel-burning heating equipment (fireplaces, furnaces, water heaters, wood and coal stoves, space or portable heaters) and chimneys inspected by a professional every year before cold weather sets in.

- When using a fireplace, open the flue for adequate ventilation.

- Never use your oven or grill to heat your home.

- When buying an existing home, have a qualified technician evaluate the integrity of the heating and cooking systems, as well as the sealed spaces between the garage and house.

- If you need to warm a vehicle, remove it from the garage immediately after starting it. Do not run a vehicle, generator, or other fueled engine or motor indoors, even if garage doors are open. Make sure the exhaust pipe of a running vehicle is not covered with snow.

- During and after a snowstorm, make sure vents for the dryer, furnace, stove, and fireplace are clear of snow build-up.

Portable Generators

During emergency situations people often use portable generators to meet electricity and heating needs.

NFPA, publisher of the National Electrical Code® (NEC®), recommends the following tips for proper use of portable generators.

- Generators should be operated in well ventilated locations outdoors away from all doors, windows and vent openings.

- The generator should be located so that exhaust fumes cannot enter the home through windows, doors or other building openings.

- Do not refuel the generator while it is running. Turn the generator off and let it cool down before refueling.

- Never store fuel for your generator in your home. Gasoline and other flammable liquids should be stored outside of living areas in properly-labeled safety containers. They should be stored away from any fuel-burning appliance such as a gas hot water heater.

- Plug appliances directly into the generator or use a heavy duty outdoor-rated extension cord. Make sure the cord is free of cuts or tears and that the plug has all three prongs, especially a grounding pin. Do not try to power the house wiring by plugging the generator into a wall outlet.

- If you must connect the generator to the house wiring to power appliances, have a qualified electrician install a properly rated transfer switch in accordance with the NEC and all applicable state and local electrical codes.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

You're Never Too Old for Exercise

Q Recently my 80-year-old mother-in-law came to live with us. My family is extremely active and wants to include her in our activities, but because of knee problems and osteoporosis we are not sure where to start. Although she has a very active life, she has never formally exercised. What types of exercise and activities can we all do as a family that will fit everyone's needs?

A Statistics project that by the year 2030 there will be 70 million people age 65 or older in the U.S. The importance of living an active life has never been more essential, as research states that more than 80 percent of these people will have at least one chronic condition that could possibly be managed or improved through a lifestyle of physical activity.

Including your mother-in-law in your family's active lifestyle is a great idea. Not only will it be positive for your family to continue with your normal routines, but it may also help to improve her quality of life.

Begin by speaking with her physician to discuss any exercise guidelines, restrictions and limitations that may be needed for her to safely start an exercise program. Her knee problems and osteoporosis will need to be addressed to lower the risk of possible injuries.

Once you have received clearance from her physician, use the information to find activities that can be safely completed. You have many options; remember to use your creativity. Consider some of the ideas below.

- Family workout circuit. If your family enjoys strength training and cardiovascular training you can definitely continue this type of workout. Set up stations of exercises that can be modified depending on who is there. Have a station for different muscle groups: back, chest, shoulders, arms and lower body.

- Exercises such as a chest press, row, shoulder press, bicep curl and tricep extension can be modified by a change in position or by using a different form of resistance (dumbbells, medicine balls, resistance bands, etc.) to accommodate each exerciser. Resistance training will also be helpful with your mother-in-law's osteoporosis. Be sure to follow the proper guidelines for exercise with this condition. Combine your strength-training workout with cardiovascular exercise such as cycling or an arm bike. If able to safely walk, incorporate walking as a source of cardiovascular exercise.

- Jump in the pool. The water is a great form of exercise no matter what your exercise level. Swimming, water aerobics or just walking or running in the water can be fun while increasing your heart rate. Also, your mother-in-law may find this to be enjoyable due to the water's buoyancy, which is easier on the joints. Everyone may not be doing the same thing in the pool, but you will all be together.

Slowly introduce these new training styles to your mother-in-law, and continue to encourage your family to live a healthy and active lifestyle.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Five Tips For Losing Five Pounds

(NAPS) – Anyone who has ever wanted to lose five pounds in a hurry may appreciate five tips from a woman whose work demands that she score well on the scale.

Mia St. John, world-class professional boxer and creator of the "Million Dollar Workout" DVD, often has to shed pounds quickly to qualify for competitions. She offers five quick weight-loss fixes:

- Jumpstart your weight-loss routine with cardiovascular exercise such as jumping rope to get your heart pumping quickly.
- Liberally apply Albolene makeup remover to your trouble spots before a workout. This actually liquefies on contact with skin and helps to create increased perspiration to reduce water weight.

- Eliminate white carbohydrates—bread, pizza, pasta—instead, eat more lean protein for a couple of weeks.
- Punch up your workout by adding lunges and crunches to everyday workout routines, creating a full-body workout in less time.

- Excess salt isn't healthy and can cause the body to retain excess water. It's important to drink more water to flush out the system and keep your body hydrated. Reduce your sodium intake by keeping it less than 2,400 mg. Per day.

Kids and Braces: The Straight Facts

(NAPS) – Currently, more than 4 million children and 1 million adults in North America wear braces. For many patients, especially children and teens, a healthy, beautiful smile goes beyond good health; it indicates confidence. "Not only can orthodontic treatment improve health and overall appearance, patients often experience a tremendous boost to their self-esteem when they can smile and not be embarrassed by the condition of their teeth," said Dr. Don Joondeph, president of the American Association of Orthodontists (AAO).

But how do you know if your child needs braces? The AAO provides answers to this and other frequently asked questions:

Does my child need braces?

It's not always easy to tell if your child has an orthodontic problem. However, some signs or habits may indicate the need for an orthodontic examination: early or late loss of baby teeth; difficulty in chewing or biting; mouth breathing; thumb or finger sucking; crowding, misplaced or blocked-out teeth; jaws that shift or make sounds; biting the cheek or roof of the mouth; teeth that meet abnormally or not at all; and jaws and teeth that are out of proportion to the rest of the face.

When should my child see an orthodontist?

If any of the problems above are noted by parents, regardless of your child's age, it is advisable to consult an orthodontist. All children should see an orthodontist no later than age 7 for a simple checkup. This quick and painless exam can identify potential problems and ensure that any future treatment is timed appropriately.

My child sees a dentist for regular checkups and cleaning. Why see an orthodontist?

Orthodontists specialize in the diagnosis, prevention and treatment of dental and facial irregularities. Orthodontists receive an additional two to three years of specialized education beyond dental school to learn the proper way to align and straighten teeth. Orthodontists team with your child's dentist to ensure that your child achieves optimal oral health.

How quickly will we see results and how much will it cost?

Treatment time averages 24 months. Although orthodontic treatment does not produce same-day results, some children may only require limited treatment. In addition, orthodontic treatment is affordable and is often covered by dental insurance plans.

For more information about orthodontics or for the names of AAO member orthodontists in your area, visit www.braces.org, call (800) STRAIGHT (1-800-787-2444) or ask your dentist for a referral.

ZERO IN ON XEROSTOMIA

Xerostomia is the medical term for the condition commonly known as "dry mouth." This is an increasingly common occurrence among older adults who take certain medications, undergo chemotherapy, or suffer from autoimmune diseases. Without sufficient amounts of saliva in the mouth to cleanse it, plaque adheres more readily to the teeth and gums, thereby increasing the incidence of cavities. To address this potential problem, the dentist will likely first diagnose the underlying cause. If a medication is the cause, the medication may be changed or the dose may be adjusted. If the salivary glands are the culprits, the dentist may prescribe a medication to help increase saliva production. Otherwise, artificial saliva may be used to keep the mouth wet.

Xerostomia is not a disease but can be a symptom of certain diseases. We can identify the xerostomic condition and the cause. We deliver a high level of quality dental care. Our recommendations for dental treatment are always in the best interest of the patient. All the members of our staff are dedicated to serving you – we will be happy to answer any questions you may have. Our concern is your comfort and confidence – our goal is to help preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. Call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we stress preventive dentistry for the entire family. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Sjogren's Syndrome, HIV/AIDS, diabetes, and Parkinson's disease can all cause dry mouth.

Quincy Bounces SL In Preliminary Round

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents, seeded 20th out of a possible 20 teams in the Division 2 South Sectionals, knocked off the No. 13 Silver Lake Lakers 46-41 in a preliminary round game on Monday night down in Kingston.

Junior guard Meagan Tobin scored a game-high 24 points (including five 3-pointers in the 2nd half) and freshman forward Leslie Campbell contributed seven points as the Presidents controlled play from the opening whistle till the final horn sounded.

"Tobin came up with some big shots in the second-half," head coach Jeff Bretsch said. "She, along with Marybeth Torpey and Brighid Kyle, were a big part of our success last year in the tournament when we made it all the way to the semifinals. They have all been through it and it showed tonight."

"Leslie Campbell got us going early in the game. She may be a just a freshman, but her confidence has come a long way and she does not get nervous in these situations."

The opening minutes of the game saw both teams run up and down the court with little to show for it on the scoreboard. Quincy took the lead for good at the 7:30 mark of the first half, 12-10. A Tobin 3-pointer at the 4:25 mark pushed the Presidents' lead up to 19-14. At the end of the first half, Quincy held a 21-19 lead.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

"We struggled to find a rhythm early in the game, but Kyle and Campbell helped set the tone defensively and eventually we found what we were looking for," Bretsch said.

Meagan Tobin, who was money all game long, scored on the opening possession of the second half and at the 14:00 mark she buried the first of her five second half 3s to give the Presidents a 26-21 lead. Marybeth Torpey's fade-away jumper at the 11:00 mark pushed the lead to six points (33-27).

Silver Lake got as close as six points again at the 7:00 mark, but Tobin ended any hope they made have had with a succession of huge shots. Her three-pointer at the 6:50 mark, gave the Presidents their biggest lead of the game (38-29), and after the Lakers cut the score down to 38-33, Tobin swished another long-range shot to make the score 41-33. But the Lakers had one more scoring run left in them.

Silver Lake, playing with a sense of urgency, held Quincy scoreless from the 4:00 mark to the 1:15 mark, and in the process cut the deficit to 41-37. With the home crowd cheering them on, the Lakers seemed prime for a comeback win, but #23 took the pass, stepped back behind the arc and made her fifth three-pointer of the second half. Tobin's final bucket was the nail-in-the-coffin. A Leslie Campbell uncontested lay-up in the final seconds completed the scoring at 46-41.

"We are playing some good basketball at the right time," Bretsch said. "I feel good about the team going forward. You can't play bad and expect to win, and right now we are playing good basketball."

The leading scorers in the game for Quincy included Tobin (24 pts.), Campbell (7 pts.), Torpey (7 pts.), Kyle (5 pts.) and Liz Bock (2 pts.). Also playing well were seniors Hope Collins and Jacqueline Provenzano and junior Kathryn Carella.

No. 20 Quincy plays tonight (Wednesday) against No. 4 Hingham High School in a first-round game. Over the past two post-seasons, the Presidents have shown the ability to play and to win on the road in the tournament, so although the team is the last seeded team in the Sectionals, they are also one of the most experienced and dangerous. Tip-off is at 7:30 at Hingham High School.

THREE QUINCY RESIDENTS recently helped the Greater Boston Jr. Bruins Pee Wee Major Team win the 32nd Edition of the International Pee Wee BSR Tournament in Quebec, Canada. From the left, Shawn Grady, Tommy O'Brien, both Broad Meadows Middle School students, and Alex MacIssac, a Dexter Academy student.

Three Local Youngsters On Junior Bruins Tourney Team

The Greater Boston Junior Bruins Pee Wee Major team recently won the 32nd Edition of the International Pee Wee BSR Tournament which was held in Quebec, Canada on Feb. 18.

Three Quincy residents were members of the championship team. Tommy O'Brien and Shawn Grady, students at Broad Meadows Middle School, and Alex MacIssac, a Dexter Academy student, were all integral players on the first Greater Boston Junior Bruins's Pee Wee team in 27 years to win this tournament.

In the final game of the tournament on Feb. 18, Tommy O'Brien scored the game-winning goal with 47 seconds in regulation. The final score was 3-2.

All three have played for many years with Quincy Youth Hockey and for the past two years have been a members of the Greater Boston Junior Bruins under the direction of head coach Mike Cashman and assistant coach Craig Cashman.

Phil Kelly Wins State Wrestling Medal

Phil Kelly, a senior captain on the North Quincy High School wrestling team, took home a first-place medal at the MIAA Division 2 State Class Meet championship at Marlboro High School two Saturdays ago.

Kelly, who wrestles at 285 pounds (heavyweight), defeated Matt Sidebottom of Franklin High School in the finals. Kelly earned the title with a 3-2 win by decision.

"I didn't want to let him shoot (my legs) and take me down," Kelly said. "I just kept pushing him and pushing him until I saw an opening."

Kelly and Sidebottom were tied 2-2 heading into the third round, and in the third, Kelly won an escape point to take the lead for good.

At this past weekend's All-State Wrestling Tournament, Kelly advanced all the way to the finals. Kelly defeated Marcus Mulkerin of Braintree High School in the semi-finals 5-3.

In the finals, Kelly matched up against Matt Sidebottom of Franklin High School in a rematch of their State Class Meet championship. This time around, Sidebottom defeated Kelly by pin at the 4:35 mark to win the All-State Wrestling title.

Raiders Host Durfee Tonight

The North Quincy Red Raider girls' basketball team earned a topseed in this year's Division 1 South tournament. The team finished the regular season at 16-4 overall and 11-2 in the Atlantic Coast League.

North Quincy, who won a share of the Atlantic Coast League North Division regular season championship with Whitman-Hanson High School, will enter this year's tournament as the fourth seed. The Red Raiders will play host to 13th seed Durfee High School on Thursday night at 7:30 p.m.

The winner of the North Quincy/Durfee first-round game will play the winner of the Brockton/Taunton first-round game on Saturday. If the Red Raiders defeat Durfee, NQ will host the quarterfinal game on Saturday since their seeding (4th) would be the highest amongst these four teams.

Players to watch for in the tournament include seniors Megan Therrien, Lauren Stille, Caroline Cunningham, Shannon Malone and

Danielle Kelly, juniors Kasey O'Connell, Brianne Carnell, Rebecca Goreham (14.1 pts. per game) and Paige Bonanni and sophomores Catherine O'Connell, Jess Howlett and Siobhan Carnell.

The Red Raiders, coming off a season-finales 52-51 victory over Quincy High School, enter the tournament on a winning note.

You Auto Know

by Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty

WHERE THERE'S SMOKE, THERE'S...

If you see white smoke coming from your vehicle's tailpipe, water and antifreeze are probably entering the cylinder, creating steam. If so, this most likely means that the engine was overheated, which caused the head gasket to fail, thereby allowing antifreeze and water to leak out. Blue smoke coming out of the tailpipe is caused by engine oil entering the cylinder, where it is being burned along with the fuel mixture. If so, the auto technician must test to see which seal, gasket, and/or O-ring failed and is allowing the oil to seep through the cylinder. Finally, black smoke is an indication of excess fuel in the cylinder that cannot be completed burned.

If you notice any peculiar smells, or white smoke coming from your exhaust you may have a problem that will need immediate attention. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we can perform any needed repairs including replacing head gaskets, sales, and O-rings. The technicians at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, are trained to do safe and effective work on your vehicle. Call 781-843-1550 to schedule an appointment today. We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: Black smoke caused by excess fuel in the cylinder, or "running rich," may be due to a faulty fuel pump, a leaky fuel injector, or a faulty engine computer or computer sensor.

Presidents Host SL Tonight

The Quincy Presidents drew the Silver Lake Lakers in the first round of the Div. 2 South tournament bracket.

Quincy finished the regular season with a 15-5 overall record and an 11-3 record in the Atlantic Coast League. The Presidents finished the regular season with a 52-45 win over cross-town rival North Quincy in the consolation game of the Vin Moscardelli Tournament last week. On the season, Quincy went 3-0 against the Red Raiders.

In the consolation game, junior point guard Paris

Amado scored all 11 of his points in the second half to help the Presidents overcome a five-point halftime deficit. Sophomore Doug Scott scored 13 points and tournament all-star Steve Connolly grabbed 11 rebounds.

North Quincy's Dennis Martin scored 10 points and senior Matt Edgerly was named to the tournament all-star team.

On Thursday (tonight), the Presidents will tip-off at home against Patriot League foe Silver Lake (14-6) for the third time this season. Quincy is the eighth seed and the Lakers are the ninth seed. The first-round game is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at East Gym.

The two teams have already played two games against each other this season. In the season-opener, the Presidents traveled down to Kingston and defeated the Lakers 56-48. Silver Lake earned the victory one-week later when they defeated the Presidents 56-50 in Quincy.

Players to watch for as the tournament gets underway include seniors Steve Connolly (11.6 pts. per game), Matt Boyle, Sean Boyd and Jared Tucker, juniors Paris Amado and DeShawn Matthews, and sophomore Doug Scott (18.4 pts. per game).

The winner of the Quincy/Silver Lake game will play the winner of the Whitman-Hanson/Duxbury or Sharon game in the quarterfinals. If Quincy wins on Thursday, they will either travel down to Whitman-Hanson (the #1 seed) if the Panthers win their first-round game, or the Presidents will host either Duxbury or Sharon on Saturday at 1 p.m.

SENIOR CHARLIE MCGEE, pictured here with Jackie Weir, was awarded the QHS Jackie Weir Pride Award at this year's QHS Football Awards Banquet.

Quincy-North Hockey Meet In First Round

The Quincy High School hockey team squared off against North Quincy High School Tuesday night at the Quincy Youth Arena in the first round of the Division 2 South Sectional tournament.

The Presidents (10-6-4 overall) were the No. 8 seed and the Red Raiders (10-7-3) were the No. 9 seed.

The winner of this first-round game advanced to the quarterfinals Saturday against top-seeded Franklin High School (19-1-0) at Bourne. As the No. 1 seed, Franklin earned a first-round bye.

Quincy Youth Hockey Registration March 7-10

A Job Well Done

On Feb. 17, at approximately 12 noon, Officers James Cassidy and John O'Donnell were dispatched to Price Street for "a family disturbance in progress." As the officers were enroute, they learned from the dispatcher that the female caller stated her husband was beating her.

When Officer O'Donnell arrived, he heard the commotion and went in immediately. He separated the couple and questioned them about the incident. The victim/wife said that they had an argument, which escalated to yelling and then by her husband repeatedly kicking her. (Shoes on) The victim said that she called "911" for help. Officer O'Donnell started to question the husband about the alleged assault.

The husband then became irate, yelling at the officer and then spit on him. Officer O'Donnell told the husband/suspect that he was under arrest and as he attempted to take him into custody, the suspect resisted by pulling away. Officer O'Donnell wrestled the suspect to the ground and as he was trying to handcuff him, the victim/wife attacked the officer, punching him numerous times. Officer O'Donnell knew he was in trouble and called for help. The officer then subdued the wife, but was then rammed by the husband as he fled the house.

Officer Cassidy arrived on scene and witnessed the husband screaming and yelling as he ran out of the house. The officer gave chase and caught up to him a few blocks away at the intersection of Hancock and Kendall Sts. Officer Cassidy ordered the suspect to get on the ground but he refused. The officer then grabbed the suspect's arm but he spun to get away, almost falling into traffic. Officer Cassidy then escalated his use of force by spraying the suspect with O.C. (mace-like chemical) while reiterating his instructions.

The suspect immediately went to the ground and he was handcuffed. As Officer Cassidy placed the male suspect in the police cruiser, Officer O'Donnell again requested assistance because the female had interlocked her arms and tucked them under her chest, which can result in injury to the suspect. Moments later, she was also placed in handcuffs and led away.

The male suspect, a 48-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon (shod foot), Domestic Assault and Battery, Assault and Battery on a Police Officer and Knowingly Resisting Arrest." His wife, a 46 year old Quincy resident, who was also the caller and wanted help from the Police, was charged with "Assault and Battery on a Police Officer and Knowingly Resisting Arrest."

The wife was advised of the domestic abuse laws and her rights to obtain an emergency restraining order, but she refused any help. Officer O'Donnell went to the hospital for an injury to his thumb, which fortunately was not broken.

In domestic violence cases, two Officers are dispatched due to the high rate of injury and death Officers incur nationwide. When the first Officer arrived and heard the disturbance in progress, although he/she would like to wait for his back-up, he/she knows that they must act right away to prevent anyone inside from getting hurt. Officer O'Donnell separated the combatants as he awaited help. What occurred next illustrates the unpredictability of domestic violence calls and how easily and quickly the situation can turn, resulting in the Officer becoming the victim. Nice Work!

Latest Scam:

Local citizens are receiving telephone calls from alleged local Courthouses stating that they were going to be prosecuted for failing to show up for jury duty. The call sets some people in a panic. The caller then asks the victim to confirm their date of birth and social security number.

If you get a call similar to this, hang up. The courts do not conduct jury business over the telephone. Potential jurors are notified in writing for their court date and are provided a telephone number to call to change a date. If you miss jury duty and you did not receive prior written notice, this should raise some doubt to the legitimacy.

If you believe that the call may be legitimate, ask for the name and title of the caller, as well as the court he/she represents. Ask the caller for the court telephone number, and then verify it by looking it up. Bottom line: Do not give out your date of birth and social security number if you have any doubts.

Graffiti:

In recent months, this department prosecuted six people for desecrating property and have identified several more suspects. According to School Resource Officer Steve Burgio, many times the suspects are teenagers or young adults who "tag" late at night.

Since their work takes only minutes and there are no witnesses around, it is difficult to catch them. These suspects have their own tag names and styles, so criminal cases can be brought against them in time.

All incidents of graffiti should be reported to the Police so that evidence can be collected for prosecution. Owners of damaged property should take their own photos and save restoration receipts for future restitution.

At a nursery, what looks like a lovely shrub may be a juvenile tree. Check its tag or the nursery staff for what to expect in one growing season. Proportion and quantity are important - work taller plants to the back, shorter in front, and work in odd numbers (maybe threes or fives).

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The adventurous Aries won't be disappointed with taking on a new challenge, despite some initial misgivings. Look for this move to open other opportunities down the line.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Let that beautiful Bovine smile not only put you at ease, but also show that you're ready, willing and more than able to confound the naysayers around you. A new admirer has important news.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be careful how you handle a relationship that you're hoping to save. You already have the facts on your side. Avoid weakening your position by embellishing it with unnecessary dramatics.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Taking definitive stands isn't easy for the often-wavering Moon Child. But you not only need to stay with your decision, but also reassure others it was the right thing to do.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As a proud Lion, you're right to be upset about those who might be lying about you to others. But the best revenge is proving them wrong by succeeding at what you set out to do.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Caution is still advised before making a financial commitment to a "promising" project. Look for the facts behind the fluff. Devote the weekend to loved ones.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A Taurus offers comfort and advice as you deal with an upsetting event. Use this as a learning experience that will help you avoid similar problems in the future.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A romantic situation creates some chaos for single Scorpions. But it's well worth the effort to work things out. A trusted friend can offer some helpful advice.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Expect to make new friends as your social circle expands. Also, remember to tell that family member how proud you are of his or her achievements.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) New ventures continue to be favored. And with your self-confidence rising all the time, you'll want to see how well you can do with a new challenge. So, go to it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This is a good time for the usually "serious-minded" Aquarian to let loose and enjoy some fun times. Expect to get good news about a workplace issue.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Changed plans might upset some people, but your needs should be respected. Offer explanations when necessary. But don't let yourself be talked into changing your decisions.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for bringing people together. You would make a fine judge or counselor.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

How often do you express a doubt? How often do you have doubts about your abilities or doubts about other people? It is healthy and wise to have doubts at times about certain things, but when doubts become chronic and cloud simple reasoning, then doubting has deteriorated to a sickness of skepticism.

We all know people of poise and serenity; we see them with all the trappings of faith and dignity and we doubt whether these persons ever have a doubt about anything. They seem so sure of themselves... But, they too have doubts at times.

To doubt is only human. This was true from the days of the Psalmists to and through the days of Thomas and is true today. When we find ourselves gripped with uncertainty, we are bound to have doubts. But promiscuous doubting should not be.

Doubts torment us only because we have too little faith. This is true whether it applies to people, science, religion or anything else. Obviously then, the best way to reduce doubts is to increase faith. Sounds simple? It is...

Food For Life Program At Crane Public Library March 11

The Thomas Crane Public Library will host a healthy eating program entitled "Food for Life: Fueling Up on Low-Fat Foods and Favoring Fiber" on Sunday, March 11 at 2:30 p.m. at the main library, 40 Washington

St., Quincy.

Participants will see low-fat dishes made from whole grain foods, legumes, vegetables and fruit prepared with little or no added fats, and sample the healthy results.

Without fiber in the diet, people are less able to get rid of toxins, waste hormones, excess cholesterol, chemicals and other undesirables, which can lead to a higher cancer risk. Fiber is especially important in preventing colon cancer and even helps the immune system function properly.

The Food for Life nutrition and cooking program was designed by physicians, nutrition experts, and registered dietitians at The Cancer Project, a non-profit organization committed to teaching people about the benefits of a healthy diet for cancer prevention and survival. The program offers real recipes and shows how to prepare simple delicious healthy meals at home.

Registration is required for this program. For more information or to register, call 617-376-1316. Sponsored by The Cancer Project and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

LEGAL NOTICE

2007-013

Presently pending in the Ordinance Committee of the Quincy City Council:

Be it ordained that the Quincy Municipal Code is amended as follows; in Title 8 Health and Safety add a new chapter:

Chapter 8.40

Neighborhood Property Preservation Ordinance

8.40.010 Purpose

8.40.020 General Conditions
8.40.030 Public Nuisance
8.40.040 Enforcement
8.40.050 Notice to Owner of Abatement of Nuisance
8.40.060 Low-Income Owner
8.40.070 Removal of Nuisance
8.40.080 Appeal
8.40.090 Reports
8.40.100 Civil Actions and Penalties
8.40.110 Other Provisions

8.40.010 Purpose

The purpose of this Chapter is to promote the public health, safety and welfare by requiring a minimum level of maintenance of private property to protect the livability, appearance and social and economic stability of the City and, to protect the public from the health and safety hazards and the impairments of property values that result from the neglect and deterioration of property.

8.40.020 General Conditions

The presence of any one or more of the following conditions on property constitutes property blight.

- A. Any condition that is detrimental to the public health, safety or general welfare or that constitutes a public nuisance as defined herein
- B. Any condition of deterioration or disrepair that creates a substantial adverse impact on neighboring properties.

8.40.030 Public Nuisance

No person, whether as owner, agent, manager, operator, lessee, tenant, sub-lessee, or occupant in possession of a property, shall maintain a blighted property or cause or permit property to be maintained as a blighted property. No person, whether as owner, agent, manager, operator, lessee, sub-lessee, tenant or occupant of a property, shall take any action or allow any action to be taken at that property in violation of any provision of this Chapter or any order issued pursuant to the provisions of this Chapter

Any property upon which there exists property blight as set forth in the provisions of this Chapter is hereby declared and determined to be a public nuisance.

Unlawful nuisance--Inadequately maintained property.

It shall be an unlawful nuisance for any person owning, leasing, renting, occupying or having charge or possession of any commercial and/or residential property to maintain or allow to be maintained such property in such manner that the following conditions are found to exist thereon where such conditions are visible from a public right-of-way and/or neighboring property and such conditions have both a significant adverse visual impact on the neighborhood and substantially contribute to the dilapidated or deteriorated appearance of the neighborhood.

A. Property which is not kept substantially clean and free from accumulations including, but not limited to rank growth, rubbish, junk, garbage, litter, debris, flyers or circulars, overgrown, dead or decayed trees, weeds or other vegetation that constitutes a fire hazard or other condition that is dangerous to the public health, safety, welfare; or creates the potential for the harboring of rats, vermin, vector, or other similar nuisances, or substantially detracts from the aesthetic and property values of neighboring properties; or is overgrown onto a public right-of-way at least twelve (12) inches; or is completely dead, over twelve (12) inches in height, and covers more than fifty percent (50%) of the front or side yard visible from any street.

B. Buildings or structures or significant sections thereof including, but not limited to, exterior stairs, roof, foundation, walls, fences, signs, retaining walls, driveways, or walkways which are substantially broken, deteriorated, or defaced, or windows or doors which are missing, broken or inadequately secured that create a hazardous condition or a potential attraction to trespassers; or exterior walls or roof coverings that have become substantially deteriorated, do not provide adequate weather protection, or show evidence of the presence of termite infestation or dry rot. (For the purposes of this section "defaced" includes, but is not limited to, writings, inscriptions, figures, scratches, or other markings commonly referred to as "graffiti.")

C. Property used or intended to be used for residential purposes which contains, in the outdoor area, any refrigerator, washing machine, sink, toilet, bidet, stove, heater, boiler, tank or any other household equipment, machinery, furniture, or item, appliance or appliances, boxes, lumber, dirt or debris, trash, garbage or refuse cans, or any items other than those commonly stored outdoors, or any parts of such items, for a period of time in excess of seventy-two consecutive hours. This subsection does not prohibit machinery installed in the rear setback areas for household or recreational use, furniture designed and used for outdoor activities, trash cans in the front yard during the twenty-four hour period allowed for garbage pick-up and garbage bins when employed in construction for which a valid building permit has been issued by the City.

D. Where property is vacant and otherwise required to be boarded up, the boarding shall be done in a manner approved by the building official and which does not itself have a significant adverse visual impact on the neighborhood nor substantially contribute to the dilapidated or deteriorated appearance of the neighborhood. To the extent feasible, the boarding up shall cause the property to have the appearance of an occupied residence as determined by the building official.

E. Any property that is unsecured and constitutes an attraction to children or a harbor for vagrants, criminals or other unauthorized persons, or is in a condition such that persons can resort thereto for the purpose of committing a nuisance or unlawful act, constitutes property blight.

A building or structure is unsecured when either of the following conditions exists:

- 1. The building or structure is inhabited, occupied or used without the consent of the owner or the agent of the owner; or
- 2. Unauthorized persons can readily gain entry to the building or structure without the consent of the owner or the agent of the owner.

F. A partially constructed, reconstructed or demolished building or structure upon which work has been abandoned constitutes property blight. Work is deemed abandoned when there is no valid current building or demolition permit for the work or when there has not been any substantial work on the building or structure for a period of six (6) months or more.)

G. The storage upon any property of building materials unless there is in force a valid building permit issued by the City for construction upon said property and said materials are intended for use in connection with such construction. In no event, however, shall the storage of building materials occur on the property in excess of twelve (12) months without written consent from the Director of Inspectional Services. Building materials shall include but shall not be limited to lumber, bricks, concrete or cinder blocks, plumbing materials, electrical wiring or equipment, heating ducts or equipment, shingles, mortar, concrete, nails, screws, steel, or any other materials commonly used in constructing any structure.

H. Any property upon which there exists a hazardous condition constitutes property blight. A property is considered to have a hazardous condition prohibited by this Chapter if any one or more of the following conditions exists on the property:

- 1. Land having a topography, geology, or configuration that, as a result of grading operations or improvements to the land, causes erosion, subsidence, unstable soil conditions, or surface or subsurface drainage problems that pose a threat of injury or are injurious to any neighboring property.
- 2. Any condition or object, including without limitation landscaping, motor vehicles, fencing or signs, that obscures the visibility of traffic, pedestrians, or street intersections in a manner that constitutes a hazard.
- 3. Items are present that are inadequately secured or protected and, due to their accessibility to the public, may prove hazardous including, without limitation:
 - a. Unused or broken equipment or machinery, motorized vehicles, watercraft, or other personal property that is broken, rusted, partially or wholly dismantled or otherwise due to deterioration is unsuited for the purpose for which designed;
 - b. Abandoned wells, shafts, or basements;
 - c. Unprotected pools, ponds, or excavations;
 - d. Structurally unsound fences or structures;
 - e. Lumber, or accumulations of lumber or other construction materials; or
 - f. Chemicals, motor oil, or other hazardous materials.
- 4. Any swimming pool, pond or other body of water that is abandoned, unattended, unfiltered, or not otherwise maintained, so that the water has become or is becoming polluted water.

8.40.040 Enforcement

A. The Director of Inspectional Services, Health Commissioner, Fire or Police Chief or their designees shall be authorized to administer and enforce the provisions of this Chapter and shall be deemed the Enforcing Authority. If the Enforcing Authority shall be informed or have reason to believe that any provision of this Ordinance has been, is being, or is likely to be violated, he shall make or cause to be made an investigation of the facts, including an investigation of the property where the violation may exist. If he finds any violation he shall give immediate notice in writing to the Owner and to the Occupant of the premises of the violation and inform the Owner and the Occupants pursuant to the notification provisions provided herein. In making such inspection, the Enforcing Authority shall have such right of access to the premises that may be lawfully exercised by him under the laws and constitution of the Commonwealth or of the United States. All enforcement officers are authorized to inspect property and to take any other enforcement actions as may be required or appropriate to administer or enforce the provisions of this Chapter.

B. Any person who violates any provision of this Chapter shall be subject to enforcement procedures for each violation through any lawful means available to the City, including without limitation the issuance of a civil fine as provided herein.

If, after such notice and order, such violation continues, or if any Owner or Occupant fails to obey any lawful order of the Enforcing Authority with respect to any violation of the provisions of the Ordinance, the Enforcing Authority may make complaint to the Superior Court or any court of competent jurisdiction on any injunction or order restraining any further use of the premises and the continuation of the violation and shall take such other action as is necessary to enforce the provisions of this Ordinance.

In addition to the foregoing remedy, whoever violates any provision of this Ordinance or fails to obey any lawful order issued by the Enforcing Authority in enforcing this Ordinance shall be liable to a non-criminal fine of not more than two hundred ($200.00) for each violation. Each violation of this Ordinance shall constitute a separate offense. Each day that any such violation continues shall constitute a separate violation. The Enforcing Authority may also issue a cease and desist order for any hazardous situation.

In any matter in which a complaint has been made by a person other than the Enforcing Authority, the Enforcing Authority shall promptly notify the complainant in advance of all conferences or proceedings concerning resolution of the nuisance complaint or of any enforcement action and the complainant shall be allowed to be present and to be heard.

8.40.050 Notice to Owner of Abatement of Nuisance.

Whenever the City determines that property in the City is maintained as a nuisance as provided for in this chapter and that abatement of such nuisance is to be required, it shall:

(Cont'd on Page 29)

(Cont'd From Page 28)

- A. Provide written notice to abate to the owner and occupants of the premises in the manner and in the form provided in this chapter.
- B. The notice shall state the proper street address of the subject property and should be served personally on the owner or by first class mail, postage prepaid. Additionally, one copy of the notice shall be conspicuously posted on the property.
- C. The notice shall advise the owner of a reasonable time limit in which the owner shall take corrective action to remedy the nuisance. In no event shall the owner be given less than seven calendar days, and no more than sixty calendar days to take corrective action, except where there is an immediate threat to public health or safety when shorter notice may be prescribed. The owner must commence the corrective action requested in the notice within thirty days of the date of the notice. The City may waive the time limits of this subsection only if a natural disaster, such as, fire, flood or earthquake interferes with the owner's ability to complete the corrective action within the specified time, or the work to be performed is inherently of a nature which cannot reasonably be completed within the time limits prescribed.
- D. The notice shall specify the section of law violated and state all the facts constituting the nuisance.
- E. The notice shall specify the corrective action required, including temporary corrective action when appropriate and inform the owner of City programs, if any, available to assist low-income property owners with repairs to their property. The corrective action shall be such that it eliminates the significant adverse visual impact of the property on the neighborhood and eliminates the contribution of that property to the dilapidated or deteriorated appearance of the neighborhood as determined by the building official.
- F. The notice shall advise the property owner that failure to correct the violation may result in the City's correcting the violation and collecting the charges by billing or by lien on the property.
- G. The notice shall advise the owner of the right to file an appeal within fifteen calendar days if the owner seeks to challenge the charge that a nuisance exists.
- H. The notice shall advise the owner he/she must either correct the violation or request an appeal in order to avoid City abatement and liability for cost of abatement.
- I. The notice shall advise the owner that failure to appeal shall constitute waiver of the right to a hearing to contest the charge of nuisance.

8.40.060 Low-income Owner.

As to a small property, if the owner of such property is a low-income owner, the City may extend or waive the time limits specified in this chapter, if the owner does all of the following:

- A. Demonstrates to the building official that complying with the City's order to abate would create an undue financial hardship.
- B. The owner makes a good faith effort, as determined by the building official, to comply with that portion of the order to abate that may be completed without a significant expenditure of funds.
- C. The owner makes a good faith effort, as determined by the building official, to obtain financial assistance.

8.40.070 Removal of Nuisance

If the Responsible Party fails to remedy the nuisance caused by a burnt or dangerous building, upon notice from the Director of Inspectional Services or his assigns to do so, said Director of Inspectional Services or his assigns may cause the nuisance to be removed as provided in M.G.L. Ch. 139 at the owner's expense. Any such debt shall constitute a lien on the land upon which the nuisance was located as provided in Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 139, Section 3A.

8.40.080 Appeal to Zoning Board of Appeals

Any decision by the Building Commissioner and his assigns that an activity may constitute a nuisance hereunder may be appealed to the Zoning Board of Appeals pursuant to Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 40A.

8.40.090 Reports by the Enforcing Authority

The Director of Inspectional Services shall make each month, upon request by the City Council, a report that shall include all complaints of nuisance made during the prior month; all proceedings begun under this Ordinance; all pending complaints and all investigations and enforcement actions taken by the Enforcing Authority. The report shall state the location of the premises, a summary of the nature of the complaint, the name of the Responsible Party(ies), and the disposition or the status of the matter.

8.40.100 Civil Actions and Penalties

Nothing in this Chapter shall be construed to limit any right or remedy otherwise available in law or equity to any party harmed by a blighted property, nor shall this Chapter in any way limit the City's right to enforcement under any other provision of this Code or create a duty or obligation on the part of the City to enforce this Chapter.

8.40.110 Other Provisions

Severability.

The City Council declares that, should any provision, section, paragraph, sentence, or word of this Ordinance be rendered or declared invalid by any final court action in a court of competent jurisdiction, or by reason of any preemptive legislation, the remaining provisions, section, paragraphs, sentences, and words of this Ordinance shall remain in full force and effect.

Implementation.

The provisions of this section shall be effective immediately upon passage and all provisions shall be enforced immediately but no monetary fine shall be imposed pursuant hereto until thirty (30) days after passage.

Open Space Funds Sought To Protect 271 Sea St.

Armed with a new weapon, the Community Preservation Act, residents of Ward 1 are drawing the battle lines for the protection of 3.4 acres at 271 Sea Street as open space.

The Save 271 Sea Street group will hold a public meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in Our Lady of Good Council parish hall, 227 Sea St., to plan future steps to encourage the city to buy the land.

The developer, The Gallagher Group of Hanover, plans to build five condo units on a section zoned Residence B and four or five single family homes on a section zoned Residence A.

The Community Preservation Act (CPA), approved last November, permits the city to surcharge the tax levy with the extra funds going to the purchase of land for, among other things, open space.

Ross Edwards, spokesman for Save 271 Sea Street, said he was told the land was appraised for $1.2 million two years ago. The CPA is expected to bring $200,000 to $1.6 million to the city annually.

Members of Save 271 Sea Street are hoping that a substantial percentage of these funds will go to their project in the next couple of years and they need a strong showing of support by neighbors.

"In the next few months our city officials will be deciding how to spend the CPA funding source," said Edwards.

"We need an outcry from residents to protect this natural beauty for generations to come and to make sure we don't end up with more condos instead of trees, walking paths, and a place for kids to learn about wildlife."

Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly, who will chair tonight's meeting, called 271 Sea Street "one of the most important at-risk sites in the entire city. Preventing development of this site will also help reduce the traffic on Sea Street."

Two years ago, neighbors gathered 1,500 signatures of Quincy residents urging city officials to buy the site to protect it from development.

Residents say the entrance to the proposed development is at a dangerous curve in the road and would funnel traffic onto the already congested route to Broad Meadows Middle School and Houghs Neck.

The site consists of a forested upland and wetlands bordering Broad Meadows Marsh with a large diversity of wildlife.

Firefighters Injured In Icy Faxon Road Blaze

Several firefighters were injured in falls on the ice and by smoke inhalation Tuesday as fire destroyed a three-story house at 94 Faxon Rd., North Quincy.

Deputy Chief Gary Smith estimated damage at about a half million dollars.

The occupants of the house, who were not immediately identified, were outside and apparently uninjured when firefighters arrived.

Firefighters fought the blaze in high winds and bitter cold. Their efforts were hampered by a fire hydrant that froze.

The temperature hovered at the 17 degree mark with winds of 25 to 35 miles an hour giving a wind chill of not much more than zero.

One of the injured firefighters was taken to Quincy Medical Center but was released after treatment for a fall. None of the injured firefighters was identified.

Deputy Smith said the first of three alarms was rung in at about 9:45 a.m. and fire apparatus was still on the scene late in the afternoon.

Suggest Incentive-Based Plan

City Council Scraps Mandatory Recycling

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Six city councillors voted Monday to scrap a proposal to make recycling mandatory for city residents and rejected efforts to send the proposal to committee for further study and discussion.

One councillor asked if any members of the council, other than the author, had actually read the proposal before discarding it.

Under the proposal ordinance developed by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, scofflaws would risk losing their curbside collection if their trash that day contained more than 10 percent of recyclable items, such as glass, plastic or cardboard.

Coughlin's proposal offered a three-phase plan with education programs starting in April, warnings in July and action on violations in January 2008.

At this time, Quincy's recycling rate is roughly 25% to 26% which saves taxpayers $1 million a year, according to Coughlin whose goal was to double that savings.

Opposing councillors focused on the "mandatory" nature of the plan with one councillor warning that no one could embrace the word "mandatory" or "mandate" in an election year.

Councillors also suggested an incentive-based recycling plan whereby residents could bank points for recycling and even earn rewards.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamane said he and his constituents were "dead set against any mandatory recycling." Ward 2 Councillor Daniel G. Raymond charged that mandatory recycling would be an "undue burden" that would hit the most vulnerable residents.

"I'm not interested in making anything compulsory," said McNamane.

"Who has read it?" Councillor John Keenan asked rhetorically, questioning how many councillors had actually reviewed Coughlin's entire proposal. Keenan didn't ask for a show of hands.

Keenan said that he had not read the long proposal as he expected a discussion at a later date. Therefore, he said that he could not vote either way. However, he said he found the subject of recycling "worthy of discussion."

At this time, Keenan noted that Quincy residents are lucky. "We can put anything out to the curb." That could change, he warned, adding that if nothing improves, the day could come when the city has to "impose some sort of trash user fee."

Raymond cited an e-mail from a senior citizen worried about the burden involved in washing and sorting recyclables.

"Let's not stereotype senior citizens," responded Keenan, noting that plenty of senior citizens were "children of the depression" bred to sort and save.

Coughlin said he'd raised the issue because it has lay dormant for the past decade and improvement can save taxpayers considerable

Council Votes For 13 Cruisers Day And Night

The City Council formally and unanimously approved a resolution Monday recommending that the police department provide full cruiser coverage for all 13 city sectors 24-hours a day and seven days a week.

This was the first official vote by the full City Council whose members approved a similar measure on Feb. 26 during a Public Safety Committee meeting attended by nearly 50 uniformed officers.

At that meeting, police union chief Bruce Tait raised the issue of diminished cruiser coverage and appealed to councillors for their support. Tait described the 13 patrol sectors of the city and said, "It is the officers staffing these 13 patrol sectors who are the backbone of the police department."

Tait provided documents which he said proved that the 13 sectors were not covered repeatedly and that, sometimes, as few as eight or nine cruisers were assigned on a shift. He also charged that command officers were reluctant to assign overtime for fear of backlash from their supporters.

Tait and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel G. Raymond noted the $1.8 million that the police department returned to the city treasury in the past fiscal year.

At this week's meeting, Raymond added a recommendation that officers be fitted for equipment, such as vests and that assigned vests not be more than five years old.

Tunnel Workers Business Manager Jailed 7 Years For Racketeering

Scott Boidi, 46, of Pembroke, business manager of Local 88 of the Tunnel Workers union, has been sentenced to seven years in prison and four years of supervised release on embezzlement and drug charges.

The Quincy Police Department and its chief, Robert Crowley, were cited for their part in the investigation of Boidi, whose principal Local 88 offices are at 279 Northern Ave., Boston, and 170 Washington St., Quincy.

Boidi was convicted Oct. 13 of one count of racketeering, three counts of embezzlement of union assets, one count of conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute cocaine and one count of use of a communication facility in furtherance of a crime.

He was acquitted of two counts of witness tampering and one count of carrying a firearm during and in relation to a drug trafficking crime.

Evidence presented during the 12-day trial indicated Boidi stole more than $25,000 in union assets, engaged in mail fraud and possessed and distributed more than 500 grams of cocaine from June, 1991, to May, 2002.

March 27 Vote Promised On West Elm Variety License

Entrepreneur Michael Raimondi and his friends and foes will have to wait another three weeks to learn if he will be able to sell wine and beer at his West Elm Variety Store in Wollaston.

The License Board would up a long hearing on Raimondi's bid for the liquor license Tuesday and voted to continue the hearing to Tuesday, March 27, at 10 a.m. for purposes of voting only.

"It will be the first business of the meeting," promised Chairman Joseph Shea as the Board wrapped up a two hour hearing. "I congratulate everyone on their civility."

In an unprecedented move, Tuesday's hearing went ahead with only three board members present, Shea, Health Commissioner Drew Scheele and Building Inspector Jay Duca.

Shea said Fire Chief Tim Pettinelli, who was away at a fire, would view the hearing on film before casting a vote and Police Chief Robert Crowley bowed out with a conflict of interest.

Louis Cassis, attorney for Raimondi, told the board that his client plans to observe the same closing times, 8 p.m. in winter, 9 p.m. in summer, if the license is granted, and would not sell single cans of beer.

Scheele drew from Cassis the promise that 18-wheel beer delivery trucks would not clog up narrow West Elm Avenue but that Raimondi would use 14-foot box trucks.

He also pledged that Raimondi would never ask for a change to an all alcoholic beverage license.

"The issue," said Cassis, "is he is a long-standing store owner who has a stake in the neighborhood and whose customers are asking for this license."

Nine residents testified in support of Raimondi's license bid, including Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative, who reminded the board a license can always be revoked if it doesn't work out.

Richard McGuire of Quincy Shore Drive noted that there are a lot of empty stores in Quincy and Pat Halpin of Davis Street said the city should support "mom and pop" stores like West Elm Variety.

Even those opposed to the license had a good word to say about Raimondi, whose family has had the store at 139 West Elm Ave. since February, 2006.

"The store is a great asset to the neighborhood," said

John Amendolare of West Elm Avenue, "but the area is residential and there are a lot of licenses around. There is no public need for another one."

Richard Wilson, director of development for Eastern Nazarene College said the license would "generate a risk to the neighborhood and be detrimental to the spiritual life of the school."

Students at ENC, he said, sign a pledge that they will not imbibe alcohol while they are enrolled.

"This is the wrong project in the wrong place," he said.
